"Although no permanent distribution of trophies may be made at this time," he wrote, "temporary exhibitions of standard sets of arm equipment used in the war may be secured. In accordance with the policy adopted by the War Department, fifty-six of these sets will be distributed throughout the country to Army Recruiting Officers. A set will be available at any place desired, providing arrangement is made for paying the necessary transportation charges and incidental expenses, and providing also that there is no objection to the Army taking advantage of the occasion to stimulate recruiting in that district.

"Information with regard to the availability of a set of army equipment and war trophies for exhibition purposes may be obtained from the Army Recruiting Officer, Colonel Wilbur E. Wilder, 461 Eighth Avenue, New York City.

"In co-operation with the Department of Agriculture the War Department will also have exhibits at the various State fairs during the present year. Two cars of Government exhibits will be sent out on five different circuits, covering every section of the country. It has been decided that it is not practical to show these exhibits at other than State fairs this season."

LAYS COFFEE RISE TO POOL.

Day Says He Heard Two Months Ago of Plan to Increase Price.

Commissioner of Public Markets Jonathan C. Day said last night that he was not at all surprised at the advance in price of coffee when informed that there was an increase yesterday of seven cents a pound. "Mercantile manipulation is responsible," said Dr. Day, who went on to explain that he received several "tips" two months ago that an organization to control the price of coffee was being formed, and that he was advised that if he wanted to save money for the consumers it was his opportunity to buy a large supply.

Owing to the fact that the Legislature abolished the State Food Commission, under authority of which the Mayor's War Board purchased foodstuffs to be sold at cost to the consumer, Dr. Day said that he was not interested in the purchase of coffee. He gave to the District Attorney's office, he said, the benefit of the information he received.

FRENCH THANK HOOVER.

Liberated Regions Deeply Grateful for Relief During Foe's Occupation.

PARIS, June 20.—Daniel Vincent, Chairman of the Chamber of Deputies' Committee on liberated regions, today addressed a letter in the name of the committee to Herbert Hoover, Director-General of the interallied relief work, expressing the deep gratitude of the inhabitants of Northern and Eastern France for the relief measures during the period of German occupation.

CLEAN-UP WEEK ENDS.

Campaign to Make New York Spotless Closes Today.

This is the final day of the week's campaign to make New York a spotless town. The suggestions made by those in charge of the work, which have been observed throughout the campaign, and will continue today, are as follows:

1. Put out all refuse by 7 A. M. on this day.
2. Tie up all paper.
3. Put all other household refuse into boxes and barrels.
4. Trade waste, such as brick, lime, building material, &c., will not be removed by district street cleaning carts from dwellings.
5. No refuse, except garbage, will be removed from factories, loft buildings, hotels or other places not used jointly for business and domestic occupancy. The owners of such buildings must remove all refuse at their own expense, as heretofore.

Nevins Street not inclusive, Carroll Street to Flatbush Avenue; Flatbush Avenue inclusive, Nevins Street to Prospect Park; Prospect Park, Flatbush Avenue to Carroll Street; Carroll Street inclusive, Prospect Park to Nevins Street.

Broadway not inclusive, Flushing Avenue to Union Avenue; Union Avenue inclusive, Broadway to Montrose Avenue; Montrose Avenue not inclusive, Union Avenue to borough line; borough line, Montrose Avenue to Flushing Avenue; Flushing Avenue not inclusive, borough line to Broadway.

The amount of refuse disposed of during the week has been considerably in excess of the average amount collected in a week's time.

ANOTHER BLACK TOM CASE.

The trial of the suit of the New York Plate Glass Insurance Company and eleven other insurance companies against the Lehigh Valley Railroad to recover $150,000 paid for glass broken by the Black Tom explosion, July 30, 1916, began yesterday before Judge William H. Speer and a jury from Bergen County, in the Hudson County Court House, in Jersey City.

The jury was chosen from forty-eight veniremen, who were escorted in the morning from Hackensack to Judge Speer's court by Sheriff John W. Courter. After a statement of the case by lawyers the trial was adjourned until next Monday morning.

Lindley M. Garrison, former Secretary of War, appeared as the leading counsel for the railroad company. The order for a jury from another county was obtained by the railroad company on the ground that because of losses caused by the explosion it was impossible to get an unprejudiced jury in Hudson County. Verdicts against the Lehigh for losses by the explosion were given last Spring for $416,000 for Howell & Co. of Front Street, New York, and for the Bethlehem Steel Company for more than $900,000.

METHODISTS AT CENTENARY

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 20.—Methodists from all sections of the United States and from various foreign countries began to arrive in Columbus today for the opening of the Methodist Centenary Exposition, which will continue at the State Fair Grounds until July 13. The gates were opened this morning, by wire from Washington by Assistant Secretary of State Polk. At noon in the Coliseum, where each night during the exposition a pageant of 2,000 men, women and children will be staged, Mayor George J. Karb welcomed the Methodists to the city.

Ex-President William Howard Taft, William Jennings Bryan, Secretary Daniels, Admiral Sims, and prominent Methodist bishops, ministers and laymen will make addresses during the convention. Efforts are being made to have President Wilson attend after his return from France.

MRS. BEDINI RESCUES DOG.

Finds Home for One of Pets Exiled from Blackwell's Island.

With the city authorities intent on ridding Blackwell's Island of its 400 to 500 dogs, many pets of inmates of the Almshouse, and laborers working there, are being loaded, five and six a trip, on the ferry boat plying between the island and the foot of East Seventieth Street, where they are turned loose on the east side.

Mrs. Jean Bedini, wife of the theatrical manager, who had visited an old-time actor, crossing on the ferry boat, Manhattan bound, noticed one of these dogs, a 12-year-old fox terrier named "Pat." She was informed that the dog had been taken away from one of the laborers without his knowledge, and was exiled from the island. Pat's record included the saving of a child's life, in his younger years.

Mrs. Bedini took charge of Pat, who is blind in one eye, and turned him over to Mrs. Stella Ehrlick, head of the Horse Aid Society, at 149 West Thirty-eighth Street.

Both women called at the office of the Chief City Magistrate yesterday, stating that it was a heartless way for the city to treat the companions of the inmates of municipal institutions.

GOLD FOR SOUTH AMERICA.

The steamship Vauban, sailing today for South American ports, will carry a large consignment of gold to Buenos Aires and Montevideo, shipped by Davis & Co., Ltd., acting for the Hollandes Bank of Buenos Aires. This shipment is said to be $3,000,000. Other institutions are also reported to be sending gold to South America today and next week.

The Columbia Trust Company reports that it has shipped $3,500,000 in gold to various correspondents in South America. The National City Bank has received permission to export $6,000,000. The total for the movement thus far is estimated to be approximately $20,000,000.

SURGEON WEDDED ABROAD.

Dr. Jessup of Roslyn Returns with English Bride.

Dr. Everett Colgate Jessup, who has been a Captain in the Army Medical Corps, returned yesterday to his home in Roslyn, L. I., with a bride whom he met overseas. She was Miss Helen Batho Castle, and was doing ambulance work at Etretat, France, while Dr. Jessup was stationed in a hospital there. They were married in London on June 2.

Mrs. Jessup is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Castle of London. Dr. Jessup is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin A. Jessup of 116 Cambridge Place, Brooklyn. He won three events in the Olympic games at the exposition at St. Louis, and is a graduate of Princeton and of the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Halt New York-Chicago Air Mail.

The regular New York-Chicago air mail service, to have been inaugurated yesterday, was put off indefinitely. It was explained that the postal officials were awaiting the arrival of larger machines. Meanwhile experiments are being continued at the flying field at Belmont Park, Long Island.

GILBOA DAM CONTRACT LET.

City to Pay $4,819,910 for Schoharie River Diversion.

The Board of Water Supply yesterday awarded to Hugh Nawn Contracting Company the contract for constructing the Gilboa dam, in the town of Gilboa, Schoharie County, at $4,819,910. The Gilboa dam is a part of the new Schoharie system now being built by the city to supplement the present water supply from the Catskills. Bids were opened on Thursday.

This is the second time that bids have been received for the dam. On May 14 five bids were received, the lowest being from Winston & Co., at $7,203,175. This was considered too high and the board decided that all should be rejected.

"This contract, coupled with the sixteen-mile tunnel now under construction," said President Galvin, "makes up the larger part of the new water development. Five and a half years is allowed for the completion of the dam. The dam will divert the Schoharie River from emptying into the Mohawk and send it through the tunnel into the new Ashokan reservoir. When this new development is completed it will double the present water supply from the Catskills."

MAKE STUDY OF OYSTERS.

Scientists Seek Destructive Agencies in Great South Bay.

SAYVILLE, L. I., June 20.—Dr. E. F. Churchill and R. V. Truitt of the Bureau of Fisheries, Washington, are here to learn why a planting of oysters in the Great South Bay fails to live more than a few weeks. The experts have set up a laboratory in the Blue Points Company's plant and are making a study of larval oysters during the spawning season and how they are carried about by the tides.

SENATE FAVORS AVIATION INCREASE

$90,000,000 for Army and Navy Air Work Indicated by Committees' Action.

HOUSE VOTED $30,000,000

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Prospects are now brighter for larger appropriations for military and naval aviation for the fiscal year 1920, which opens on July 1, as a result of the firm stand which members of the Senate Military and Naval Committees have taken in favor of increasing the amounts embraced in the United Service appropriation bills as passed by the House of Representatives.

The Senate Naval Committee today decided to grant Secretary Daniels the full amount he is now asking for naval aviation tests and development, or $35,000,000. This is $20,000,000 more than is carried for aviation in the Naval Appropriation bill as passed by the House last week.

A sub-committee of the Senate Military Committee, to which that part of the Army Appropriation bill dealing with aviation was submitted, has recommended to the full Military Committee that $55,000,000 be appropriated for army aviation for 1920. This is $40,000,000 more than was allowed for military aviation in the Army Appropriation bill as passed by the House. There is every prospect that the full Senate Military Committee will approve the action of its sub-committee.

Unless these figures are changed, the two committees will urge the Senate to grant a total of $90,000,000 for military and naval aviation, or $60,000,000 more than was granted by the House when it passed bills which proposed to cut each branch of the service down to $15,000,000 for aviation.

Members of the Senate Committees will make an effort to persuade the Senate to accept these figures, and there is every prospect that the Senate will endorse the recommendations. If the House does not recede from its position in favor of only $15,000,000 for each service the differences between the two branches of Congress must be adjusted in conference.

It is believed that members of the House generally feel now that a mistake was made when the navy was cut down to $15,000,000 for aviation, and the army to a like amount. The General Board of the navy recommended $46,000,000 for naval aviation. The navy would be very glad to have this amount, and Secretary Daniels has been advised by his expert that it could all be put to a good use. But in view of the disinclination in Congress to grant that amount, Secretary Daniels asked for a minimum of $36,000,000.

When he was heard before the Senate Naval Committee yesterday in advocacy of granting $36,000,000 for naval aviation, Secretary Daniels was asked by Chairman Page whether he would be willing to take $35,000,000 instead of $36,000,000.

Today the committee decided to grant that amount. This will be the largest increase carried by the bill over the House bill when reported to the Senate. The Naval bill will not be ready to be reported until Monday.

Payride for Camps and Flying Field.

Decision of the Senate Military Sub-Committee to provide for an army of 500,000 for the next fiscal year was upheld by the full committee tonight in considering the Army Appropriation bill.

Following a short meeting tomorrow for the purpose of attending to minor details, Chairman Wadsworth plans to report the measure to the Senate, in order to have the bill printed, he said, he would not call it up for consideration until Monday.

The committee allowed appropriations of $85,000,000 for the subsistence of the army, compared with $67,000,000 provided by the House; $12,000,000 for the National Guard, a decrease of $1,250,000 from the House provision; $1,350,000 for army welfare and educational work, in place of $150,000 provided by the House, and $14,000,000 for the Ordnance Department, in comparison with $5,000,000 voted by the House.

Provisions were also made for $882,000 for the purchase of the Curtiss-Ellwood aviation plant at Buffalo, $3,260,000 for the purchase of the Dayton-Wright airplane factory, Dayton, Ohio; $3,500,000 for the purchase of a dirigible landing field and hangars in Burlington County, N. J., and $470,000 for the Rockwell Field, San Diego, Cal.

The House provision prohibiting the War Department from purchasing real estate was modified so as to enable it to adjust existing contracts for land, and to acquire land previously leased upon which buildings for war purposes have been constructed. This provision affects about 1,000 contracts involving millions of dollars.

OCEANGOING AIRPLANES.

Future Machines Will Carry Fifty Tons, Say Experts.

ATLANTIC CITY, June 20.—That Captain John Alcock and Lieutenant Arthur Brown covered an average of four miles with every gallon of gasoline consumed during their transatlantic flight was brought out today when the possibility of building huge airplanes capable of lifting over 100,000 pounds and carrying passengers between Atlantic City and England, France, and Italy were discussed at the meeting of the aeronautic authorities which took place at the air port.

Experts were unanimous in their belief that an airplane capable of carrying 100,000 pounds can be constructed today, and that a nonstop flight from Atlantic City to England is possible. Rough estimates showed that such an airplane could be operated on a consumption of not over one gallon of gasoline to a mile.

Why does one feel ill when dropping down feet first from an airplane and not when diving head first, and why do people feel dizzy when looking down from a high building and not when flying, no matter how high?

The first question was propounded to leading medical authorities assembled here by Major Ordo Lees, the British parachute expert. This brought the second query from aviators and authorities here who are witnessing the tests of the famous "guardian angel" parachute.

In giving their demonstrations, Major Ordo Lees and Miss Sylvia Boyden, the British parachute experts, dove head first. They stated that this way they eliminate the sickish feeling that comes in the first part of the drop from an airplane before the parachute opens.

This is an entirely new point to the medical profession, and the experts who considered the subject today were puzzled, and a number of doctors have decided to try parachute jumps themselves, both by dropping and diving.

The problem is being submitted for study to the Air Medical Committee of the Aerial League of America, which is headed by Brigadier-Gen. Theodore C. Lyster, late Chief of the United States Army Medical Service, and Colonels Nelson Gapen, George P. Crabtree, Isaac H. Jones, and Eugene R. Lewis of the Air Medical Service.

Additional tests of the "guardian angel" aerial life preserver will take place Saturday at the Atlantic City air port, and will be witnessed by military attachés of different countries.

CONVENTION OF TEACHERS.

Milwaukee Expects to Welcome 15,000 Educators This Month.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 18.—The part of education and educators in rebuilding a world torn by war will be the general topic of the great teachers' convention to be held in Milwaukee June 28 to July 5.

Elaborate preparations are under way to care for from 12,000 to 15,000 teachers, who will discuss the problems of the new democracy and the part that education will play in the world.

Primarily, it is to be a gathering in which the average teacher can show the part she can play in the rebuilding of the world by her work in instructing the youngsters in her school.

The keynote of the convention will be "Education and the New Democracy." This will appear first in the session of July 1, when the topic to be discussed will be "The New World and the Demand It Will Make Upon Public Education." The evening session will include the topic "The Organization of a Public Education for Service in the New Democracy."

Wednesday again will develop this problem under the general topic, "Work of the Association," in which leaders in the various branches of education will tell their problems.

The three nations will appear on the program of July 2, when the topic "Education for the Establishment of a Democracy in the World" will be discussed by representatives of France, England, and the United States. The French High Commission has named Professor Albert Feuillerat of the University of Rennes as the official representative of the French Government. The British Government is sending the Right Hon. Herbert Lewis, M. P., Parliamentary Secretary of the Board of Education, and Dr. Philander P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education, will represent the United States.

Thursday morning representatives of the kindergartens, rural schools, secondary schools, and higher educational institutions will discuss the problem "The Contribution of Teachers to the Development of Democracy."

The handling of the great crowd of 12,000 to 15,000 strangers is one which will tax the resources of the city. The teachers of the city are making a guest chamber survey of the entire city to learn how many people in Milwaukee have guest chambers which they will be able to turn over to the Milwaukee Arrangements Committee to aid in caring for the thousands of visiting school teachers.

Elaborate plans are being made to entertain the visitors. There are forty lakes within twenty minutes of the City Hall where there are resorts or hotels, and many excursions are being planned to the lake region.

PARADE OF 200 WOUNDED.

Bronx Red Cross Gives Maimed Soldiers a Wheel-Chair Outing.

Patients of General Hospital No. 1, on Gunhill Road, the Bronx, were given a holiday yesterday afternoon when the Bronx Chapter of the American Red Cross held a wheel-chair and crutch parade in which 200 wounded and maimed soldiers participated, led by the bands of the National Biscuit Company, which also donated a large quantity of cookies and delicacies.

The incapacitated paraders, led by Captain L. F. Alfaro of the American Red Cross, were pushed in their chairs by their "Red Cross godmothers," in single file formation about the grounds and through the walks of the hospital. The wheel-chairs were all decorated, and some original ideas were worked out by the soldiers themselves. Before the parade started a mock marriage was performed on the lawn in front of the Red Cross House. All the participants in the "wedding" were in wheel-chairs excepting "clergymen." The "bride" was Sergeant James Graham, Company I, 165d Infantry; the "groom" was Morris Goldman, Company A, 101st Infantry; the "clergyman" was Irwin Gerber, Company G, 305th Infantry.

As the parade wended its way through the roadways and corridors of the various wards of the hospital, soldiers in bed were propped up with pillows, or their cots were rolled out to the porches to permit them to watch their more fortunate comrades pass in review. At the Red Cross Cottage on Bainbridge Avenue, Miss Catharine S. Levering, Chairman of the Bronx County Chapter, and scores of members of the chapters served the men in the wheel-chairs and on crutches with ice cream, cake, and soda. Miss Anna Case, the opera singer, sang "The Star-Spangled Banner," after which the parade passed in review before the judges, consisting of Lieut. Col. George A. Taylor, Major James B. Leggett, Miss Catharine S. Levering, Mrs. David Thiell Brown, and Miss E. G. Clapp, head nurse in charge of the Red Cross House. The rain storm broke in torrents just as the last of the 100 wheel-chairs was moved into the Red Cross House.

Ten prizes, consisting of gold stick pins donated by Mrs. Charles D. Dickey, Secretary of the Bronx Chapter, were awarded for the most original costumes and decorations. The winners were: James O'Hara, Company I, 165th Infantry, a bridesmaid; Sergeant John S. Laurian, Company C, 108th Infantry, an infant; Warren Mitchell, Company F, 102d Infantry, whose left leg was shattered, made the best of his misfortune by decorating his wounded limb to represent a French 75; Charles B. Caunt, 340th Field Artillery, who is three-eighths Indian, he says, was garbed in the costume of that race and won a prize with it; Julius S. Berg, Company I, 308th Infantry, whose wheel chair was a replica of a submarine; Morris Goldman, Company A, 101st Infantry, the groom; Sergeant James H. Graham, Company I, 103d Infantry, the bride; Floyd Sanford, Company K, 311th Infantry, was a flower girl; Michael Coben, Company M, 325th Infantry, was an aviator in a wheel-chair; George H. Ringler, Medical Corps, 30th Infantry, was dressed in the uniform of the G. A. R.

ATTACK OHIO "WET" PLANS.

Antis Say State Cannot Legalize Beer Under Federal Law.

CLEVELAND, O., June 20.—The two State constitutional amendments that have been proposed by Ohio wets to legalize the sale of beverages containing 2¾ per cent. alcohol are in direct conflict with the Federal Constitution, and with the Volstead prohibition enforcement bill, about to be enacted by Congress, according to Wayne B. Wheeler of Washington, general counsel for the National Anti-Saloon League.

Mr. Wheeler arrived here to confer with trustees of the Dry Maintenance League, meeting today to consider plans for combating the two amendments.

Federal Constitution," Mr. Wheeler said, "and that is to have Congress resubmit the question to the State Legislatures."

Battery Baths Open Today.

Frank L. Dowling, President of the Borough of Manhattan, announced yesterday that the two public floating baths had been towed to the Battery and would be open today. These baths were first placed at the Battery in 1872 and are used by nearly 300,000 persons during the heated term. Six other free floating baths will be open on July 1 at 10th Street, Pike Street, 90th Street and 120th Street, East River, and 99th Street, North River.

To Open 30-Acre Camp for Scouts.

Thirty acres of woodland and shore front on Long Island Sound, on the dividing line between Sea Cliff and Glen Cove, L. I., has been set aside as a site for a camp for the Boy Scouts of those two places and of Glenwood and Locust Valley. It will be opened next week, under the supervision of Lieutenant J. H. Nill, Executive Scout Commissioner of the district, who was formerly in charge of physical training at one of the aviation camps near Mineola.

CITY MAY BUILD AIRPLANE FIELD

BEFORE ESTIMATE BOARD

At the request of Major Gen. Charles T. Menoher, Chief of the Air Service of the United States Army, New York City may construct a municipal landing field for commercial, mail and military airplanes. This developed yesterday at the meeting of the Board of Estimate, when Controller Charles L. Craig laid before the Board a letter from General Menoher regarding the proposed field.

Controller Craig said that the letter had been addressed to the City of New York on April 30 last, but that through some error on the part of the Post Office Department it had just been received.

According to the communication from General Menoher, the Government has adopted a general policy to further the project. The General predicts that the development of aviation in the United States will be along both military and commercial lines. He states that the Post Office Department now finds it necessary to establish throughout the country terminal or way stations for its aerial mail deliveries, and joins with the Air Service in presenting the project to the attention of the City of New York. Neither the Air Service of the War Department nor the Post Office Department will deal with any private individuals, societies or corporations in the matter of landing fields.

According to the communication from the Director of Air Service, should the City of New York decide to co-operate with the Government in establishing landing fields, the army will obligate itself to furnish an expeditionary hangar to be erected on the field at the expense of the city. The army will request that the city bear the expense necessary for the establishment of the landing fields and the maintenance of both the field and the equipment, exclusive of airplanes.

The matter was referred to the Finance and Budget Committee.

The question of a tunnel to Staten Island came before the Board in the shape of a report from the Committee on Transit, discussing the request of Borough President Calvin D. Van Namee of Richmond, that a sufficient sum be appropriated to enable the Public Service Committee to investigate, make surveys and prepare maps and routes to connect Staten Island with the present rapid transit system of the city.

"The city can't do it for at least five years," said the Controller, "and we ought to be perfectly frank with the people of Richmond and tell them so. When the present subways are completed there won't be one penny for other subway work. Why not tell the people of Staten Island so?"

President Robert L. Moran of the Board of Aldermen, who is also Chairman of the Committee on Transit, said that the matter was an urgent one, and that the subway should be built as soon as possible. The matter was referred to the Committee on Finance and Budget.

A resolution was introduced by President Frank L. Dowling of Manhattan to build a ten-story building on the site of the old West Thirtieth Street Police Station, for years known as the Tenderloin, to be occupied by the Department of Health. President Dowling said that if the board would consider the matter within a few weeks the building could be erected and the department in within ten months.

Controller Charles L. Craig declared himself in favor of the proposition, and it will probably be passed at the meeting next week.

WORK OF ANIMAL LEAGUE.

Annual Report Shows Increased Activity in Humane Efforts.

With many interesting pictures illustrating its work the annual report of the New York League for Animals has made its appearance and in it Mrs. James Speyer, the President, tells of what has been accomplished. After commenting upon the end of the war, Mrs. Speyer says:

"The period of readjustment has begun and we are prepared to resume our full activities and to increase our work which compared with the pre-war period had to be temporarily curtailed to meet the urgent needs of our own country and the suffering people abroad.

"We are grateful that during the year 1918 we have been able to meet the increased calls made on our Free Hospital and Dispensary for Animals. This is attested by the number of cases treated—972 hospital and 7,347 dispensary cases. These figures do not include second, third or fourth calls, but only the actual number of animals brought to our clinics to have their hurts dressed. Many were brought back several times for further treatment and the total number of cases handled each month was over 600."

The league was presented during the year with a modern sterilizing apparatus and also with an operating table for smaller animals, which enabled the doctors to perform many operations heretofore managed only with the greatest difficulty.

The report states that the league has lost this past year through death a number of friends, including Mrs. Russell Sage and James Gordon Bennett. A list of the different lines of work being done by the league mentions its receiving shelters for homeless animals, watering stations and the humane literature which it publishes, in addition to the larger work of its hospital and dispensary, and a request is made for subscriptions and donations, "urgently needed to carry on the work."

TELLS OF ATHLETES' TRIP.

Only Two of Team for Inter-Allied Games Seasick.

The team of forty-eight soldier-athletes which left this country June 4 in charge of Colonel Joseph H. Thompson, former commander of the 28th Division, for the interallied athletic games to be held near Paris, starting tomorrow, stood their sea voyage well. This was disclosed in a letter from Colonel Thompson received by Frederick W. Rubien, Secretary-Treasurer of the A. A. U. The team arrived at Brest June 11. Colonel Thompson's letter follows:

My Dear Mr. Rubien: We are having a splendid trip. The sea is as smooth as glass. All the boys are feeling fine, working out twice daily. Unable to erect a swimming tank. No canvas. Henigan and Butler were just a little seasick—more imaginary than reality. Both feel fine now. The army officers on board ship, together with the navy, are much taken with the boys, all of whom are perfect gentlemen. We have a few details to attend to, but all are of a minor character. It will do the boys no harm. Nick Gianakopulos is a card; the boys have lots of fun with him. Stout looks good. Wants to run the ten-mile if it does not interfere with his one-mile. Never enjoyed a trip more in my life. The boys are all dead in earnest. No grumbling at all. They are an ideal crowd. I am very proud of them. The nation owes the A. A. U. a vote of thanks for such a representative athletic team. No doubt in my mind as to the outcome.

Remember me to Judge Weeks, Mr. Kirby, and all the men who helped put it over. JOSEPH H. THOMPSON.

P. S.—June 10 we will arrive in the A. M. and go straight to Paris. All the boys stood the trip well except Henigan. He is slightly under the weather. THOMPSON.

Board Exonerates Reserve Captain.

Captain Morris Flores, in charge of the Police Reserves of the East 126th Street Station, arraigned before the Board of Police Reserves for alleged conduct unbecoming an officer, was completely exonerated at the conclusion of the hearing Thursday night, it was announced yesterday. The board, consisting of five members of the Reserve, of which Colonel Mills Miller is Chairman, conducted its hearing in the trial room of Police Headquarters. It was announced that the charges made against Captain Flores by members of the Reserve were absolutely baseless and never should have been made.

TELLS OF A SECRET GAMBLING INQUIRY

Mayor Hylan Says Police Sought Aid of the Commissioner of Accounts.

SUSPECT "SUPPER CLUBS"

Twelve of These Organizations Are Reported in Operation South of Forty-second Street.

Although Mayor Hylan wrote in a letter to Police Commissioner Enright on Thursday that the police had "gambling and vice well in hand," a secret investigation of gambling conditions in several inspection districts has been in progress for a week under direction of Commissioner of Accounts David Hirshfield. It was denied at the City Hall that the investigation was intended to go over the heads of police officials. It was said there that the investigation was a legal inquiry to get evidence against so-called "supper clubs."

"Any inference that Commissioner Hirshfield in doing this has gone over the heads of the police is the silliest nonsense," said Mayor Hylan. "His activities are the direct result of the request made to me by the police for assistance, so that what he is doing is in perfect accord with the police, and naturally has my hearty approval. Gambling must be wiped out in this city and we are determined to use every agency in our power to accomplish this."

The investigation has been confined chiefly to the Fourth Inspection District, commanded by Inspector Dominick Henry and comprising the territory between Forty-second Street and 110th Street and between the North River and Sixth Avenue and Central Park. Commissioner Hirshfield announced that he expected to continue the inquiry into several other districts, including the Third District, commanded by Inspector John S. Bolan, whose office is in the West Thirtieth Street Station. According to information gathered by the police, there are about ten or twelve of the so-called "supper clubs" south of Forty-second Street and four or five in the Fourth Inspection District.

Child of Missing Soldier Lost.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 20.—Chief of Police Horace A. Byram has enlisted members of the Elks, in convention here, in a search for Ruth Moore, aged 2, who disappeared yesterday from Wanamassa, a suburb, where her mother, Mrs. J. B. Moore, lives. Her father, who went to France with the American Army, has not been heard from for seven months, and his fate is unknown. Children told of seeing Ruth talking yesterday to a woman dressed in black. Elks dragged Deal Lake, on which Wanamassa is situated, from end to end and are convinced that the child was not drowned there.

MOVE TO UNITE SOCIALISTS.

First of a Series of "Reconciliation" Meetings Held in Williamsburg.

Ex-Assemblyman Shipkoff pleaded with all Socialists who had left because of differences in views over the war and other subjects to return to the party and embrace its program for attacking peace problems. He said that Socialists of all sorts had enough opposition from without and ought to get rid of friction inside the party. Other meetings will be held with the view of whipping all ex-Socialists and near-Socialists into line for the campaign of 1920.

Union Labor Strangles Bolshevism

"For the first time in many years the extreme radical groups, which have always contributed the most noise and a great deal of mischief, pitch their songs in a subdued key," according to the New York World correspondent at the American Federation of Labor Convention at Atlantic City.

While a Buffalo editor declares that every day some new strike or bomb explosion, or red-flag waving in this country or Canada confirms his belief that "Union labor is in the hands of unscrupulous men whose political, social, and economic principles stand on all fours with those of Lenine and Trotzky," the evidences of conservatism at the Convention are many. For instance, the President of the Boilermakers and Iron Shipbuilders Union has sent out an order to local unions which, he says, "serves notice on all that Bolsheviki, I. W. W.'s, or kindred gentry will not be tolerated."

For an enlightening account of the latest phases of the struggle in the labor world between radicalism and conservatism you should read the leading article in THE LITERARY DIGEST for June 21st. It presents the subject from all angles.

THE PEOPLE WHO READ "THE DIGEST"

The best test of any periodical is the class of its readers. Character in a magazine or a newspaper attracts men and women of standing and judgment as inevitable as a flower draws the bee, and for the same reason. It suits their taste. Glance around you in the train, on the street cars, in hotel-lobbies, wherever your fellow-humans congregate, and note the people who read THE LITERARY DIGEST. They are the best type. They buy THE DIGEST because they know it is accurate, impartial, wholesome, comprehensive, and up-to-date, because they can take it home to their children with confidence, and because it covers the world's news as no other periodical does. ELECTRICAL STORM WORST IN YEARS

Lightning, Wind, and Rain Hamper Transportation and Communication Facilities.

ESTIMATED DAMAGE $50,000

Preceded by heavy clouds which, floating low over the city, made the late afternoon as dark as night, one of the worst electrical storms seen here in years burst over New York shortly before 5 o'clock yesterday. Damage caused by the fifty-mile gale of wind, the lightning, and the downpour of rain, which amounted almost to a cloudburst, was estimated by the police last night as approximately $50,000.

Water seeping through holes in the roofs of various tunnels in the subway system, as well as the street flood rushing down the kiosks, tied up parts of the system for a couple of hours, forcing passengers to alight where they were in the tunnel and walk the tracks to the station platforms. As the tie-up came at the height of the homeward-bound traffic, the blocking of the tracks caused more discomfort than has befallen subway passengers in some time.

At the Mott Avenue Station, where a triple-track system is being installed, the rain poured through excavations in the roof, and in a few moments a torrent was flowing along the tracks at a depth well over the heighth of the third rail. The water caused a short circuit, blocking traffic. There were several trains in this block, and the passengers got out and came back to the station, where they were given block tickets for use on the elevated system.

At the Longwood Station, on the Hunt Point Division, there was another tie-up caused by the flooding of the tracks when the water came in through manholes in the reef. It was stated last night by Superintendent of Transportation A. L. Merritt that about 35,000 men and women used block tickets to continue their homeward ride from the Mott Avenue Station, the Longwood and 145th Street Stations of the Lenox system. The tie-up lasted from 5:17 until 6:45 P. M.

The tie-up on the Broadway system was nearly as bad in the neighborhood of 137th Street, the system north all the way to Van Cortlandt Park being affected. Water rushing downhill with extraordinary force, and carrying with it boxes, pieces of fences that were washed away, small trees uprooted in the flood, and other miscellaneous débris came pouring down the subway kiosk at 137th Street and Broadway. It reached a depth of two feet on the tracks, and from the stalled trains the passengers walked to the stations by the hundreds.

Outside of the 137th Street kiosk conditions were nearly as bad as they were in the subway itself. The water in the street was knee deep, and the front rank of disgusted homeward-bound men and women tried to keep from getting wet. It was no use, however, for the hundreds behind kept forcing those in front out onto the street, and it became a race for shelter. An enterprising newsboy at this kiosk came to the rescue after a fashion with a number of park benches, out of which he constructed a rough bridge over which the passengers contrived to walk fairly dryshod. The tie-up here lasted an hour.

Nearly $15,000 damage was done by a lightning blast that struck the glass roof of the studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Motion Picture Corporation at 130 West Fifty-sixth Street, shattering it completely, and ruining furniture and tapestries being used in the productions of film scenes.

Another blast hit the flagpole in Mount Morris Park, breaking the upper mast to splinters. A large tree in front of 263 West Fifty-second Street was hit and crashed down on the roof of a passing van driven by John Delaney of 143 William Street, Long Island City. Both the driver and the horse drawing the van escaped injury, but the vehicle was smashed to pieces. A special call for a fire truck company was turned in to get the débris removed.

The storm also affected telephone service throughout the five boroughs, particularly in the Bronx. The wind and rain played havoc with the overhead wires of the Intervale, Tremont, Fordham, and Melrose exchanges, interrupting service for about half an hour. In Manhattan the service was not affected so much by the direct action of the storm as by the numerous hurry calls put in for taxis, privately owned machines and vehicles, and umbrellas, as well as hundreds of "home late" calls. As accident directly traceable to the storm occurred just at its height, when Frank Colutti of 292 Ninth Avenue, Long Island City, and Isaac Kingsburg of 450 Howard Avenue, Brooklyn, were knocked down in front of 117 West Thirteenth Street by an auto delivery truck. The car skidded on the wet pavement and knocked the two men down before the chauffeur could stop it. They were attended by Dr. George Hockrakner of New York Hospital for contusions of the body.

URGES ORDER IN STRIKE.

State Senator Hurley Addresses Waterbury Meeting.

WATERBURY, Conn., June 20.—At a mass meeting of about 2,000 strikers this evening speeches were made by State Senator John Hurley and John Moriarty, a local business man. Senator Hurley urged the strikers to avoid all disturbances and conduct their struggle in an orderly manner.

A meeting of strikers is scheduled for 2 P. M. tomorrow, and strike leaders expect that 6,000 will attend. The gathering probably will act upon a series of demands which have been framed for presentation to the mills.

There was no disorder tonight, although several more arrests were made for breach of the peace. The City Guard is billeted in the City Hall and the State Guard is mobilized in the armory.

A number of those arrested in last night's riot were held under bail today.

WIREMEN THREATEN TO CONTINUE STRIKE

Statement Declares They Will Fight Until Their Union Is Recognized.

CHICAGO, June 20.—The continuation of the telegraphers' strike as long as "the Wilson Administration stands on record as denying us the right which President Wilson says all workers are entitled to" is threatened in a statement issued from headquarters of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union here today.

The strikers have given up the hope they expressed several days ago for early settlement of their difficulties. They say they see no prospect of peace, and add that their fight will be carried on until the Government has recognized their union.

The statement says that the strike is extending rapidly. Gains, it says, have been made among employes of telephone as well as telegraph companies, with serious impairment of telegraph service. The strikers exhibited a copy of a test message sent from Oklahoma on June 17. The original, they say, has not yet reached Chicago.

The test, according to the statement, shows that "the companies are circulating false reports about desertions from our ranks and that the strike will soon be over." Instead of normal service, the strikers say, the companies are maintaining very slow and irregular communication.

Representatives of the companies asserted today that service was normal and the strike was not inconveniencing them.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 20.—Striking telephone operators and linemen of California and Nevada, members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, announced today that an ultimatum, threatening to call out locals of Oregon and Washington next week if the strike was not settled this week, was being prepared for presentation to the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company.

A conference between telegraph operators who are employed by brokers and are members of the Eastern Brokerage Division of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union and a committee from the Board of Governors of the New York Stock Exchange will be held next Wednesday, to discuss the strike of the union against the Postal and Western Union Telegraph Companies. Percy Thomas, Deputy International President of the telegraphers' union, made the announcement yesterday in discussing the possibilities of making the strike more general than it is now.

W. F. Ewing, President of the division, said that the operators had no grievances against their employers and would take any action only to benefit members of the union who had grievances against telegraph companies. They may appeal to the brokers to exert their influence for the settlement of the strike in favor of the telegraphers, so that the union would be recognised by the telegraph companies. Mr. Ewing pointed out that the brokers' operators already had voted not to strike and that no order to them to strike in sympathy had been received from S. J. Konenkamp, the President of the union.

BAY STATE TROLLEY STRIKE

Lawrence, Lowell, and Woburn Lines Tied Up—Other Towns Threatened.

BOSTON, June 20.—With car service completely tied up in Lowell, Lawrence, and Woburn by strikes of motormen and conductors, votes of employes in other cities on the Eastern Massachusetts Railway Company's lines were counted here today to determine whether a general strike should be called. Union officials said that if the vote favored a strike the men would probably quit work Sunday morning.

The system, which was formerly known as the Bay State Street Railway, is now operated by public trustees appointed by the State. It covers a large part of Eastern Massachusetts and runs to Rhode Island and New Hampshire.

The original strike in Lowell last Monday was announced as a protest against the use of hand fare registers on open cars, conductors asserting that the hazard of their occupation was increased by the necessity of carrying these registers in moving along the running boards. In addition to this grievance members of the General Conference Board of the seventeen local unions of the system said today that there was dissatisfaction over some features of the wage classification in the contract entered into with the company last December, which superseded a contract arranged in 1916.

Homer Loring, Chairman of the public trustees, said the question at issue was whether the arbitration agreement entered into between the company and the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes should stand or fall.

VOTE 8-HOUR MINING DAY.

PARIS, June 20.—The bill of Deputy Durafour applying the eight-hour day to the coal mining industry was adopted unanimously today by the Chamber of Deputies. The rejection two weeks ago by the Chamber of the same bill, which was due to a misunderstanding, resulted in a general strike of the miners.

11,000 SHOE WORKERS OUT.

HAVERHILL, Mass., June 20.—Approximately 11,000 members of the Shoe Workers' Protective Union quit work tonight for the week to put in effect the forty-five-hour-week schedule which they had voted to adopt. No announcement was made as to the attitude the Manufacturers' Association would take, but union leaders expressed the belief that all the operatives would be allowed to return to work Monday.

In the case of the cutters, who adopted a forty-four-hour schedule last week the manufacturers decided that a strike had been declared and declined to take back any employes unless they agreed to work forty-eight hours a week.

ITALIAN PRIESTS ON STRIKE.

Stop Masses When Higher Emoluments Were Refused.

ROME, June 19, (Associated Press.)—A strike of priests, which is without precedent, has just occurred at Loreto, a celebrated resort of pilgrims, whither, according to legend, the house of the Virgin at Nazareth was miraculously transported by angels in the year 1294.

The priests asked for an amelioration of their financial condition, owing to the high cost of living, and when their claims were not granted they stopped celebrating masses and performing other religious duties.

Mgr. Andreoli, Bishop of Recanati, in whose diocese Loreto is located, is intervening personally in persuading the priests to resume their duties, promising to do everything possible to satisfy their desires.

LANCASHIRE SPINNERS THREATEN TO STRIKE

300,000 to Quit Work Today If 46½-Hour Week Is Not Conceded.

LONDON, June 20.—Lancashire tomorrow is likely to see the start of a strike of cotton spinners, involving 300,000 operatives. A number of conferences have been held at Manchester and in London in the last fortnight, and Sir Robert Stevenson Horne, Minister of Labor, has made vigorous efforts to avert the strike, which it has been announced would be for a forty-six and one-half-hour week and a 30 per cent. advance in wages.

A final conference at Manchester today failed to reach an agreement, and the operatives' strike notices will expire at noon tomorrow. Unless an eleventh-hour settlement is reached or the operatives consent to postpone their notices it is believed that there will soon be 500,000 workers on strike.

After the conference at Manchester today it was officially announced that the employers had offered a forty-eight-hour week with a 25 per cent. advance in wages, and that the operatives were prepared to accept a 46½-hour week and a 25 per cent. advance, but that neither side would yield further.

150 DEAD AND INJURED IN PORTO RICAN FIRE

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, June 21.—One hundred and fifty persons, including many children, are reported killed or injured in the destruction by fire last night of a motion picture theatre at Mayaguez.

The bodies of twenty-seven unidentified persons were recovered from the ruins today.

OPPOSE INCREASE IN TRANSIT FARES

Nixon Tells Commerce Board City Should Also Profit if Any Advance Is Made.

WOULD REVISE CONTRACTS

Delaney Declares Facts So Far Developed Do Not Show Need for Higher Rates.

The precise positions of Public Service Commissioner Lewis Nixon and Transit Commissioner John H. Delaney in relation to an increase in fares on the city's transportation lines were set forth yesterday in speeches made by the Commissioners at a luncheon at the Hotel Commodore given by the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens. The speeches were taken by a stenographer and were afterward revised and approved by the two Commissioners.

Mr. Nixon's position is, in brief, as follows:

In his opinion the view of the city Government is that to raise fares on lines operated by private corporations and owned partly by the city would be to increase the profits of the private companies. He is opposed to these companies passing into the hands of receivers if such a disaster can be avoided by a fair adjustment.

He thinks there should be some flexibility in the fare rate so that increases could be allowed in times of adversity and decreases made in times of prosperity.

He believes that it is unfair to the city to keep it from benefiting from any earnings of the rapid transit lines until all of the other claims are paid. He thinks the city should receive some return from its investments in transit lines before the companies receive their preferentials.

He thinks that the securities should be put in the class of investment and taken out of the speculative class, and that the whole transit situation should be taken out of politics.

He is opposed to any concessions being made by the city in favor of the railways unless concessions are also made by the companies in favor of the city.

After the luncheon Mr. Nixon was told that the conclusion arrived at by those who heard him was that he wanted some reformations made in the dual contracts, and that he thought amendments could be made in them now which it would be impossible to get later on. He dictated this reply:

"That was exactly the impression I wanted to convey, as possession of the rapid transit lines could not be secured except through failure, and an opportunity now presented itself which will probably never occur again of amending the contracts in such a way as to warrant lower returns to holders of securities and thus stabilizing investments; that will provide for the removal of the city's bonds from the debt limit and will, by the simplicity of adjustment, be clear to the travelling public and be accepted by their friends in the city government, in their interest. Then if everything could be accomplished without an increase, as would be apparent as negotiations were had, we could hopefully look forward to a decrease in fares in the near future."

Mr. Delaney's position is:

He is not in favor of an advance in fare. In his opinion all of the discussion on the question so far is predicated entirely on the assertion that the railroad companies are not making enough money.

He agrees with Mr. Nixon that any concession should not be one-sided, and that if the city yields on any of the questions involved a similar yielding should be made by the companies.

He insists that the officials of the railway companies have not presented any data or proof to show that an increase in fare is necessary, and he is opposed to throwing additional burdens upon the people for the sole purpose of increasing the income of the stockholders of the companies.

For Full Inquiry.

He wants it clearly understood that there is no clash between him and Mr. Nixon, and that both agree that before any definite conclusion can be reached there must be a thorough and complete examination and investigation of conditions. He also wants it understood that he is concerned only with the rapid transit lines and that he has nothing to do with the surface lines.

He agrees with Mr. Nixon that there should be a reversal of the position occupied by the city's bonds and the preferentials of the companies operating rapid transit lines.

Mr. Nixon spoke first. He referred to the fact that he had been in his present office only a little more than six weeks, and that a speech recently made by him had been misinterpreted. Therefore, he said, he intended to state his position in plain language and slowly, so that all might understand. Then he said:

The great question that seems to have exercised the minds of the people of this city is the question of the raise of fare, and we might as well meet that situation by facing it fairly and not by turning our backs.

As I read the general idea of the City Government it is that the operation of the transit facilities of this city is in the hands of private corporations, and as long as any raise of fares would seemingly be a profit to those corporations only, the City Government seems to be decidedly against such raise.

I believe that if we possibly can obtain any change in our present method of charges it must be accomplished with the consent on the part of the contractors, of the private corporations to give us a reduction below 5 cents if the conditions warrant. Had the ordinary increase of traveling and of earning power gone on, as we would have had normally about [illegible] a year increase, but at the beginning of the war that stopped and was [illegible] 000,000, and in 1918 it was [illegible] than in 1917.

As the great tide of travel charges back and forces itself into the present arteries, I think that we are going to find ourselves not only carrying more people, but carrying them at a considerably less fare.

I think the present policy of drifting is extremely dangerous and I have set my face against it. There are enough conditions that cannot be met, and an inflexible condition is the worst, both for the community and for the people that serve it, and I believe that by the attainment of a flexible charge and the stabilizing of interest charges that we will be able to arrive at that great consummation which I want to see, that of taking public transit service throughout the City of New York out of politics.

City Against Yielding.

Mr. Delaney's speech indicated a thorough knowledge of the precise attitude of the Mayor and Controller. It developed during the talks that city officials have been discussing "in camera," as it was expressed, the situation of the city's transportation lines, and that it was the settled policy of the city to yield nothing to the companies in the matter of higher fares. He said:

I maintain that the mere assertions of the officers of a railroad company, unbacked by any data or any proof that this increase of revenue is necessary to continue the operation of the lines, are not a sufficient reason to warrant the administrative officers of this city giving their consent to imposing upon the people of this city a greater financial burden for the purpose of increasing merely the income of the present stockholders of these railroad companies.

I know the opinions of your Mayor and your Controller and I heartily agree with them, that the facts developed do not indicate any necessity whatever for an increase of fare, and that the only basis there is for any discussion is an assertion by the companies that they cannot continue at the present rate.

A number of street railroad lines have gone into bankruptcy. When an ordinary, every-day private citizen's business gets into difficulty and has not enough money to meet its outgoing expenses it begins to economize, and it probably may have to begin to economize at the top. I have had to reduce my drawing account since the war conditions curtailed the income from my business, and I have also had to suspend drawing for a while, but there has not been the slightest suggestion that I have seen that any of these royal salaries at the top of the railroad ladder should be discontinued, operating expenses reduced in a way that would give evidence of good faith.

He spoke strongly in favor of mutual concessions, but did not say that, even if the companies agreed to modify the dual contracts in the city's favor, this would be met by a favorable disposition to grant a fare increase.

NIXON APPOINTS BARRETT.

Makes Queens Official a Deputy Public Service Commissioner.

Alfred M. Barrett of Queens was yesterday appointed a Deputy Public Service Commissioner by Commissioner Lewis Nixon. The salary is $7,500 a year. This is the second deputy Mr. Nixon has appointed, the first being Edward J. Glennon of the Bronx. A third deputy is yet to be named. A few months ago Mr. Barrett was appointed as Commissioner of Highways of Queens.

Mr. Barrett has spent most of his life in the banking business. He was one of the pioneers in the organization of the American Institute of Banking, has served as its President, and for three years was a member of its Board of Trustees. For many years he has been active in the civic life of Queens. For five years he was Treasurer of the Catholic Club of the city, and is Treasurer General for the United States of the American-Irish Historical Society.

HARDEN CLEARS SERBIA OF SERAJEVO GUILT

BERNE, June 20.—An official telegram to the Vienna Foreign Office, exonerating Serbia of responsibility for the Serajevo murder, has been published by Maximilian Harden in the Berlin Zukunft, as a part of the mass of evidence to show German responsibility for the war.

This telegram, dated July 13, 1914, states plainly that the Serbian Government, against which no evidence can be produced, has no responsibility for the murder.

This document, Herr Harden said, was suppressed, and ten days later the ultimatum to Serbia was presented. In addition, he said, seven days before it was drafted the Potsdam War Council already had arranged a plan of action in anticipation of Russia's intervention.

"Von Bethmann-Hollweg may have forgotten it," Herr Harden says, "but this decision was taken and registered on July 6, before the Kaiser left for the north, and he who had to choose between war and peace had already chosen war. A hundred million individuals were thus deceived."

FORBIDS POLISH TROOPS TO PERSECUTE JEWS

General Haller Says the Guilty Will Be Court-Martialed and Punished.

PARIS, June 20, (Associated Press.)—Robert Lansing, the American Secretary of State, today received from Hugh S. Gibson, American Minister to Poland, the following instructions issued by the Polish military authorities ordering the army to refrain from the persecution of civilians.

"Soldiers, I have been told by the Jewish population of this country that they have been treated by Polish soldiers in a way which is in keeping neither with the honor nor the greatness of the Polish Army; that they have been beaten, abused, and injured; that their property is being destroyed.

"Such demeanor is unworthy of Polish soldiers, who are servants of a holy cause. All those guilty of persecuting any portion of the population will be severely punished and court-martialed by my orders.

"The Polish soldier is bound to distinguish himself by his good behavior, so as to leave behind in the hearts of all citizens of the Polish State, independent of nationality or creed, an idea of the reconstruction of their country.

"To be read by all detachments now under my command. HALLER."

WARSAW, June 20, (via Paris.)—The Polish Diet, after a debate on excesses committed against Jews, adopted unanimously a motion presented by M. Daszynski, expressing the conviction that such excesses, instead of ending the disastrous economic situation in Poland after five years of war, would increase the general distress.

The resolution advised the population to make every attempt to ward off the provocations of Poland's enemies, who, it was said, were trying to take advantage of her misfortunes to compromise the Government. The Government, however, it continued, was willing to take energetic measures against those who encouraged the exasperated population to commit offenses against the Jews. If Poland checked firmly all disorders provoked by religious differences, the resolution said, all citizens of whatever religion or nationality would be assured of safety and equality.

PICHON SAYS RUSSIA WILL AGAIN BE ALLY

Bolshevism Has Lost the Day and Knows It, French Minister Tells Chamber.

PARIS, June 18, (French Wireless Service.)—"The Allies wish to help Russia to save herself," declared Stephen Pichon, the Foreign Minister, in his address to the Chamber of Deputies last night, setting forth the policy of the Government regarding Russian affairs. (Previous dispatches have carried brief excerpts from this address, which was followed by a vote of confidence in the Government, 349 to 137.)

M. Pichon began by paying tribute to the help that had been given in the East by the Greek troops, and followed this by stating the size of the French effective forces in Russia. There were 5,000 French troops in Siberia, he said, and 2,000 French at Murmansk and Archangel. Three divisions of French had been on the Dniester, one of which had already been withdrawn, another of which soon would be relieved, and the remainder of the troops relieved by degrees, as the Rumanians were in a position to defend themselves.

"We are not at war with Russia," said the Foreign Minister in beginning his statement of policy. "We are at war with Germany, and it was to restore the liberty of our communications that we went to Archangel. But we ought not to lay aside the Russian problem. No world peace can continue so long as anarchy exists in Russia. In order that civil war may cease in Russia, it is necessary that anarchy, with its contagion of Bolshevism, should be stamped out. It is necessary that a great Russian democracy should be reconstituted which may establish peace. In order to attain this it is necessary to make an appeal to all the reconstituted elements in Russia.

"This is the policy of the allied Governments. We desire a Russia united, strong, and powerful, and we do not wish her to be dismembered, but we are partisans of a Russian democracy, in federal form, based upon national sovereignty and upon the principles of right and of liberty, which are the principles of modern nations. Our views are also those of the Allies, for the problems in Russia concern others as well as ourselves. We are approaching the final result which we believe is precisely what all civilized nations desire.

"As to Bolshevism, it has lost the day and knows it. It may have yet a little while, as it finds some strength in its army, which, let it not be forgotten, is bolstered up and directed by Germans. Union is being established between all forces in order to re-establish order and tranquillity."

R-34 RETURNS FROM THE BALTIC

Big Dirigible on Test Flight Takes a Look at German Ports.

WENT CLOSE TO COAST

Her Rough Experience Likely to Delay Her Trip Here a Week or Ten Days.

EAST FORTUNE, Scotland, June 20, (Associated Press.)—The British dirigible R-34, which left here Tuesday, returned today after a 56-hour flight, which took her into the Baltic for the two-fold purpose of learning whether there was any unusual activity in German shipping and to further test the machine before attempting to fly across the Atlantic.

The giant machine had a rough trip and it is unlikely that she can be ready to start for America under ten days, the earliest estimates being a week. Just how far she proceeded up the Baltic it is impossible to learn, as the Government has cautioned the officers and crew against saying anything with regard to the trip. It is learned, however, that the ship went abreast of Berlin, just outside the three mile limit.

"We adhered strictly to the armistice terms regarding territorial waters, but went as close to the coast as was legally admissible," said a member of the crew. "As to how far north we went I can only say that we did not go as far as Petrograd. I think you will find the reports will show that the German ports are very dead indeed."

The airship battled against a strong westerly wind during 20 hours of the homeward journey. Colonel Hunt, commanding the station here, has suggested to the Air Ministry that the flight across the Atlantic be postponed for a fortnight. It is estimated that the total round trip of the Baltic totaled 1,200 miles.

HANDLEY-PAGE CREW WAITING ON WEATHER

Hopeful of Start Today with Reports of Improving Conditions.

HARBOR GRACE, N. F., June 20.—Reports of improving transatlantic weather today cheered the members of the Handley-Page crew and made them hopeful of being able to start their Newfoundland to England flight tomorrow.

Despite their eagerness to get away, however, it is by no means certain that they will depart so quickly, as they are determined to await an ideal wind, since otherwise the task they have set themselves of beating the Vimy's distance record is hopeless. Admiral Kerr and the other fliers are particularly anxious to depart for fear that there may be some change in the plans ordered by headquarters.

Though the project of a flight to America instead of across the ocean at first appealed greatly here, the aviators are more and more of the opinion that they should not alter the original plans for the journey.

Major Geoffrey I. Taylor, meteorological officer of the expedition, is in St. John's, camping close beside Lieutenant Lawrence L. Clemens, the Air Ministry meteorological officer to whom come all official weather reports. Major Taylor will flash word here the moment he decides conditions are suitable for departure.

Though a dozen men are still working about the biplane, nothing essential remains to be done and the getaway should be accomplished practically without delay once the word is given.

AIRMEN GET $50,000 PRIZE.

Presented to Alcock and Brown at Luncheon—Both Knighted by King.

LONDON, June 20.—Captain John Alcock and Lieutenant Arthur W. Brown were entertained at a luncheon at the Hotel Savoy today by The Daily Mail and the transatlantic prize of $50,000, offered by the newspaper, was presented to the aviators.

Those attending the dinner included United States Ambassador Davis, Colonel Pierce, representing the United States Army; Captain Sexton, representing the United States Navy; Winston Spencer Churchill, Secretary for War; the Earl of Reading, ex-British Ambassador to the United States; other members of the British Cabinet, representatives of the British Army, Major Gen. Sykes, and the Lord Mayors of London and Manchester.

It was announced that King George had conferred the Order of Knight of the British Empire on Captain Alcock and Lieutenant Brown.

HALT ON AGADIR FLIGHT.

Paris Aviators Descend at Casablanca—To Resume Trip Today.

CASABLANCA, Morocco, July 19.—Lieutenant Lemaitre and Adjutant Guignard, French aviators attempting a flight from Paris to Agadir, arrived here at 5 o'clock this evening and will start for Agadir on Saturday.

The airmen left Paris Wednesday morning, intending to make their first stop at Madrid, but were compelled to descend at Cazaux near Arcachon, thirty-five miles southwest of Bordeaux. They left Cazaux at 8 o'clock this morning and made the flight to Casablanca without incident.

REPATRIATE 3,000 GERMANS.

Will Be Sent Home on Two Army Transports Before July 1.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The War Department today announced that by an arrangement between the Swiss Legation, in charge of German interests in this country, and the State Department it is being planned to repatriate to Germany before the first of July some 3,000 German nationals now detained in this country. These will include sanitary personnel, merchant ships' officers and crews, and a number of interned civilians. Only those who wish it are being repatriated. No prisoners of war are included.

Because of the crowded condition of ordinary commercial vessels the War Department has undertaken to transport them on army transports. The two vessels to be used are the Martha Washington and Princess Matoika. The former will sail from Charleston, S. C., about June 25, the latter about June 30. Both will go to Rotterdam.

The expenses of transportation will be borne by the German Government.

SWISS ARE REMOBILIZING.

Picked Troops to Guard Frontiers in Case Germany Doesn't Sign.

GENEVA, June 19.—Special military arrangements have been made by the Swiss Government for eventualities in case the Germans refuse to sign the treaty of peace. Picked Landwehr forces will be remobilized tomorrow and the next day at Basle and Constance to protect the Rhine and the northern frontier.

A Bregenz dispatch to the Thurgau Gazette says that Italian troops have begun to occupy Vorarlberg, the westernmost district of Austria. Alpini battalions arriving at Montafon and Feldkirch yesterday were coldly received, it is reported.

ENROLL FIRST 50,000 FOR OVERSEAS ARMY

War Department Announces Additional Contingent of 50,000 Will be Sought.

The Army Recruiting Service in this city received notice from the War Department yesterday that the results of the recruiting campaign being conducted throughout the country had been so satisfactory for the last five days that the General Staff was able to announce that its first contingent of 50,000 men for the regular army had been filled. Officers here said that this meant that 50,000 men had enlisted in the army since February, when the first call for that number of men to serve in France and on the Rhine was sent out.

Completion of the first quota of 50,000 men for the new army does not mean, however, that the recruiting service will relax its efforts or that there are no more opportunities for men to enlist for any branch of the service in the American Expeditionary Forces. The memorandum of the War Department pointed out that the service should redouble its efforts to recruit as quickly as possible 50,000 additional men and that recruits still would be accepted for service with the regular army regiments in the overseas service.

In its first call for recruits the War Department pointed out the need of 50,000 men as replacements for the regular units in France and on the Rhine, but so many of the men who enlisted expressed preference for service in this country or at other stations where regular army units are maintained that several thousand still are needed to make up the quotas for overseas service. Preferences for any arm of the service in the army of occupation may be expressed by recruits.

Some of the men who had inquired at the recruiting headquarters at 461 Eighth Avenue about the assurances that they would see service in France and on the Rhine expressed doubt that, in view of the reports that the Germans probably would sign the treaty, their services would be needed in the A. E. F. Dealing with that possibility, an official bulletin given out by the recruiting service said:

Need More Men for Overseas.

"It was authoritatively stated today that there is a positive need for men overseas and that when the necessity terminates the War Department will make an official announcement."

"The War Department is now engaged in obtaining the second batch of 50,000 men for the regular army," said the statement sent to all recruiting offices yesterday by General March, Chief of Staff of the army. "It will not be sufficient for you to rely simply on advertising. Each officer and man in the recruiting service must take a personal interest in seeing that his office obtains its share of the total number of men desired.

"Although we have obtained the first 50,000 recruits in a comparatively short space of time, there are plenty of vacancies left in the army which must be filled. This can only be accomplished by personal and unremitting efforts of every officer and man on the recruiting service."

The run of recruiting throughout the country for the last five days has exceeded peace-time records, and it is the desire of the recruiting service to offer such advantages to the prospective recruits and to make the educational courses so attractive that the second quota of 50,000 men will be made up before the campaign closes. For the last five days the number of men enlisted in the country had been more than 400 a day, the number of Thursday being 462, out of more than 1,000 applications for service in the army.

Responding to the order of General March to stimulate the campaign as much as possible and to reach all prospective recruits, Colonel W. B. Wilder, in command of the service in this district, announced last night that he would begin immediately a campaign to recruit veteran soldiers for the Recruiting Service. He said that all branches of the service in the metropolitan district had been so swamped with applications that the men assigned to the work here had been unable to push the work as much as he had desired.

Good Chances to Advance.

Colonel Wilder's call is for noncommissioned officers who have served in the army and who wish to return under the most favorable circumstances. No lines are to be drawn between the regular army and the National Army or the regular army and the National Guard in the selection of men for this special service. They will receive $113 a month to start, with regular hours of work.

"The only condition is that they must be men of steady habits, intelligent, attentive and industrious," said Colonel Wilder. "As first class privates on Recruiting Service they will receive about $113 a month in cash. Their clothing and all medical and dental attention are free. The Government assumes liability for any disability incurred in line of duty. From one-half to one-third of the force are noncommissioned officers and the chances for advancement of men of the right sort are excellent."

One of the recruits accepted yesterday for the Ordnance Corps was Rudolph Moser of 42½ St. Mark's Place, Brooklyn, who said that he wished to enlist so that he could become an expert mechanic. His offer to enlist called forth from Sergeant Williams, the veteran of twenty years, a long exposition of the Ordnance Corps work. He said there were sixty schools throughout the country giving instructions in about sixty subjects that would enable a man to make a living in civil life.

"Now, sonny," he concluded, "just come over to this map and put your finger on the arsenal, shell factory, nitroglycerin plant, or dynamite warehouse where you would like to take your preliminary training. Oh, no, there's no danger, sonny. That's just a gentle little way of telling you that all we want in the army is men who aren't afraid, and if you have any friends who are like yourself bring them in. We'll take all of them up to 50,000, provided they are physically perfect with no defective colors in the spine."

California to Hold Referendum.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., June 20.—Referendum petitions directed against the national prohibition ratification resolution and the Harris Enforcement Act of the California Legislature have qualified, it was announced tonight by Frank C. Jordan, Secretary of State.

Tank Corps Club to Give a Frolic.

Four hundred former members of the Tank Corps, who have organized the Tank Corps Club with headquarters at 17 East Forty-first Street, have arranged a frolic and rally to be held at the Hudson Theatre a week from Sunday night. There will be a program in which fifteen or more well known players will participate.

The primary object of the rally will be to attract other former members of the Tanks so that the roster of the club may be as complete as possible. The formal opening of the Forty-first Street clubhouse has just taken place.

Syndicate to Stage "Gyp for Short."

"Gyp For Short," a new play by Charles Bradley, will be produced by a syndicate formed by The American Theatrical Exchange, Inc. Its first performance will be given out of town about Sept. 20.

MUSIC NOTES.

Eduardo Petri announces voice trials for admission to the chorus school of the Metropolitan Opera Company, beginning Monday and continuing till the end of the month.

Lithuanian folk music will be part of the first day's program of the Convention of Lithuanian Societies in the United States, to open tomorrow at the Vanderbilt Theatre.

Mischa Elman has volunteered to appear tonight at a concert at the Brooklyn Academy of Music for the benefit of the Israel Hospital.

PERSHING REPORTS 92 NEW CASUALTIES

16 DEAD IN LATEST LIST

Five Missing and 71 Wounded Also Named—No New List for the Marine Corps.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—One army casualty list, containing 92 names, was given out by the War Department today, bringing the total for the army up to 293,294. This includes 4,534 prisoners released from German prison camps. No Marine Corps list was issued today, but the total previously reported for that arm was 6,057. The total for the army and Marine Corps is now 299,351.

WOMAN SAVES PAYROLL.

Her Screams Frighten Masked Robber, Who, with Companion, Escapes.

An attempt to steal the $1,600 payroll of the Commercial Delivery Company, at 398 Avenue A, on Wednesday was reported at Police Headquarters yesterday. Mrs. Etta Frost, manager in charge of the office, on the second floor, said she put to flight a masked man while she was waiting for the Treasurer of the company, Henry Shultz, to arrive with the money for the payment of the employes.

Mrs. Frost said she heard steps on the stairs and when she went to the hall door in expectation of meeting the Treasurer, a man with a handkerchief over his face confronted her. She screamed and the robber fled, as did another masked companion, who was posted at the street door as a lookout. One of the men fired a revolver when several business men in the adjoining stores started in pursuit.

Performances for Uniformed Men.

A Summer theatrical season for uniformed men will begin tonight on the roof of Madison Square Garden, and performances will be given on Saturday and Sunday nights throughout the warm months. They will be under the auspices of the New York War Camp Community Service, and will be similar to the Sunday afternoon performances which have been taking place at the Manhattan Opera House.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"The Lady in Red" will close at the Lyric tonight.

John D. O'Hara will play Frank Bacon's role in an Australian "Lightnin'" company, beginning at Sydney in September. Diana Wilson, an English actress, will be prominent in the cast.

The scenery for the "Greenwich Village Follies" has been designed by C. B. Falls and the costumes by Shirley Barker.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 20.—In the purple haze of the cool June twilight the Yale 'Varsity eight swung its frail shell over the finish mark on the Thames tonight a length ahead of the tired Harvard crew. It was a gruelling, heart-breaking journey in which Yale stamina and Yale grit held out against the persistent threats of the Crimson boat. The Yale victory ended a day of the most stirring racing which has been seen at a Harvard and Yale regatta in many years. Yale's time was 21:42 1-5 and Harvard's was 21:47 2-5, which was 1 minute, 40 seconds behind the record.

After winning the freshman race this morning by a few feet and the two-mile battle of the second eights by a third of a length, the hopes of the Harvard crowds were high, and during a delay of more than two hours before the big race the Crimson supporters were so confident that they wagered freely at even money.

For the first two miles in the fast-fading light of the dying day, Harvard set a pace which carried the Yale crew along with dogged determination. At times Harvard was out in front by a slight margin, and at one time it had almost a half length on the Yale boat. From the observation trains it looked as if the Crimson had even a greater lead and the Harvard cheers ricocheted back and forth across the river in a guy chant of unrestrained joy.

Yale Boat Takes Lead.

Harvard failed to reckon on the strong hearts that were in the Yale boat. After shooting through the flags which marked the two-mile mark Yale hit up the stroke and pulled up on even terms with Harvard and then shot into the lead. Pulling a 34-stroke, Yale's shell forged ahead until they had a full length on Harvard and then the Yale crowds set up a wild shout when there was open water between the boats. It was Yale's turn to break loose and the hills echoed with the cheers of the Blue followers.

This advantage never slipped away from Yale. After the three-mile mark Carson, the Yale coxswain, who had his eyes riveted on the Harvard shell, snapped out a quick order and the Yale boat fell down two or three strokes. This was a bit of generalship which gave the Yale oarsmen new courage. This brief let-up in the back straining grind gave the Elis a chance to get a few moments respite from the grind. Harvard dug their oars into the water and increased their stroke.

Little by little the Harvard shell moved up. It closed up that awful space of open water. The brown beak of the shell came along until it was even to the stern of the Yale boat. On came Harvard and for a moment the crowd was still. Harvard continued to draw nearer, with Yale apparently making no effort to stave off the rush of the Crimson craft. When Harvard had cut down Yale's lead to half a length Carson barked out another order and up went the Yale stroke.

That brief dropping of the stroke acted like a stimulant on the Yale oarsmen. Harvard was alongside and coming fast when the Yale stroke shot up to 34 and the Elis went out, and from there right down through the line of yachts to the finish mark near the new drawbridge. Yale, rowing as beautiful a race as a sculler would care to see, pulled ahead, inch by inch, until they left the tiring, slugging Harvard crew a length and a half behind.

Strain Tells on Harvard.

Harvard died game. Leighton, the Harvard stroke, who set a beautiful example for the first two miles, gave the first impression that the pace was telling on Harvard's stamina when his head began to wabble slightly with each terrific pull of his oar. There was a slight check in the flight on the Harvard craft when Leighton's stroke became a bit uncertain. It was then that Yale jumped to the lead and before the Harvard shell got settled back evenly on its keel Yale was out in front arrogantly displaying its heels to Harvard from this crucial moment right up to the time the race was over.

Silver-haired old grabs of Eli and kittenish young college boys are linked arm in arm around New London tonight in the gayest outburst of happiness that Yale has experienced in years. They sing the praises of the brawny-backed youths who pulled the Yale craft and for Mather Abbott the amateur faculty coach who taught them how to do it. Here was one case where the professional coach had to take a back seat. Bill Hains, the English rowing expert, did not quite come up to the mark set by the professor of English. Yale was a better crew, it rowed more smoothly and it had the courage and the stamina to carry it through the long pull.

Gay Crowd Sees Race.

The old pre-war spectacle of the historic regatta came back with renewed enthusiasm. The told town never held a bigger or a gayer crowd than it did today. Both observation trains were jammed to capacity and thousands saw the race from the yachts and the river banks.

In the fleet of richly furnished yachts, graceful sloops, luxurious houseboats, and fleet motor boats, there was a new craft today. It was a German submarine. The long gray sea-terror of the Hun was anchored down near the finish of the course, and on its deck where once stood the modern pirate, was a gathering of spectators gaily waving Yale and Harvard flags as the shells shot down the river.

Everybody was happy here today. The hotels and the restaurants shared in it, too, for they had a celebration of their own entertaining the visitors at their own prices. The streets were gay with colors. The hawkers had everything with which both Harvard and Yale followers could decorate themselves. There were thousands and thousands of blue and red balloons. There were miniature oar blades, brooms, red and blue feathers, banners galore, and sleeve bands and fish horns. The crowd was so great that the streets were jammed all afternoon from sidewalk to sidewalk.

Stunning looking girls in sport clothes as gay as Joseph's coat swept down on the place and were draped gracefully on the arms of students in flannels and panamas. With them were sedate matrons, who joined in the spirit of the revival of the sporting event which holds a warm spot in the hearts of every family which has ever been connected or even interested in Yale or Harvard. Rosy cheeked, fair-haired students in groups and crowds were effervescent and loud. Grads back to their class reunions at New Haven and Cambridge made the most of this last regatta which will be held in the reign of King Alcohol. Sailors and soldiers mixed with the crowds. New London never saw a more contented, good natured gathering.

Even when the observation trains stood still on the river bank for more than two hours while the officials waited for the river to be ironed out smoothly with the dipping of the sun the crowd was good natured. They sat there and saw the wind kick up white caps on the river until it looked as if the race would have to be postponed.

Then the sun broke through the gray clouds just before it reached the horizon, and what a sunset it was! The big copper disc was like a ball of crimson through the murky sky. Its reflection was a narrow pathway of crimson on the river. The long wait was not in vain. The wind died down and the river became smooth again, and before the crews were half way along the journey the surface of the river was like glass.

Start Made at 8 o'Clock.

It was a few minutes before 8 o'clock when a great shout went up as the Harvard oarsmen came down to the float with the shell held high above their bronzed, muscular shoulders. The Harvard cheers rattled, but they were soon drowned in the chorus of Yale yells which exploded when the Yale crew was seen pulling away from its float at Gales Ferry. Promptly the two eights edged over to the starting flags.

Harvard, as in the two morning races, got the jump on Yale and took a slight lead. It wasn't enough to worry Yale, and for the first mile the crews were almost together. At one time Harvard shot to the front nearly a quarter of a length. Yale had planned the race well. They let Harvard cut out the pace and were content to wait their opportunity, Harvard rowing a slightly lower stroke than Yale seemed to hold an advantage. Yale was rowing a thirty-four for the first mile, with Harvard pulling along at thirty-two. At the mile Harvard dropped the beat down to thirty and Yale dropped to thirty-two, but the Crimson still held an advantage. It was not very much. From the observation train it was difficult to see the crews in the dusk.

After two miles, Yale began to pull up, and in as pretty a sprint as has ever been seen on the historic course Yale shot out and pulled at thirty-four beat until they had gained almost a length on the Crimson. This bit of strategy was beautifully timed and took Harvard unawares. Before the Crimson realized what was happening, Yale had taken the jump and now had the Crimson on the defensive.

Harvard Shows Grit.

Here the Crimson showed its staying powers and clung to the swiftly moving Yale shell. As soon as Yale had increased the lead until there was open water, Coxswain Carson let down the stroke and Harvard jumped at this bait like a trout at a worm. Over went their backs, and they put every bit of power into their stroke until the Harvard shell moved up and cut down the lead to three-quarters of a length.

Yale had been saving up for this moment, the dramatic moment of the race. When Carson barked, Peters, the rangy Yale stroke oar, buckled down to work, with the men behind him obeying the call with renewed enthusiasm. The Yale craft went out, and there it stayed, while Harvard pluckily attempted to make up the margin of water which separated the shells. Yale had them, and they knew it—with that confidence which comes only with the knowledge that an adversary is at a disadvantage, every pull of the Yale oar blades brought the Elis nearer their triumph.

Falter at Finish.

Harvard faltered for a moment, and then bravely recovered. Down into the lane of pleasure boats shot the shells. Past the old Richard Peck and the German submarine, down past the yachts all decked in their fluttering pennants of many gay colors, down through the bedlam of shrieking whistles and tooting sirens. On and on shot the Eli shell, the eight oarsmen swinging in perfect harmony. Harvard was pulling hard, and the grace and rhythm were gone. They were slugging for all they were worth, but with brave hearts and unquestioned courage.

It was the fifty-second annual regatta, and the crews are all-square on victories. Each has won twenty-six. The colors of Harvard have disappeared under the cover of the night. Their shouts have been stilled. Yale is still making the welkin ring as the well-known old welkin has never rung before.

Great Race Between Freshmen.

In one of the prettiest finishes ever seen on the Thames the Harvard freshman crew sent the cedar nose of their shell past the finish flags a scant four feet in front of Yale in the first race of the day. The Eli cubs made a grand rally in the last eighth of a mile and were coming with a rush at the finish, but the Harvard youngsters held onto their advantage doggedly and nosed out the Elis. Harvard's time was 10:36 3-5 and Yale's was 10:37 1-5.

At the finish the Eli oarsmen were pretty well exhausted. The final sprint overtaxed their stamina, and when they crossed the line Whitney, the bow oar, and Spencer, No. 7, toppled over backward in the boat.

The Blue cubs started out at a 37 clip, with Harvard rowing a 36. Harvard pulled into a slight lead just after the start, and at the half-mile had increased its advantage to three-quarters of a length. Harvard was pulling a 32 stroke, with Yale a couple of points higher.

There was more power in the Crimson pull and the Cambridge youths held their own even with Yale pulling a higher beat. The form of the Yale boat, however, was perfect, while at times Harvard appeared to be a bit ragged.

At the mile Harvard had settled down to more harmonious work. Johnson, the Yale coxswain, now called on the men in the Yale shell to hit up the beat. Up it went, and the Eli shell began to creep up on Harvard's boat.

The Blue oarsmen were going along smoothly and gaining slowly but steadily. They had cut down Harvard's lead a half a length at the mile and a half flag.

At this point in a beautiful outburst of speed the New Haven youths hit up the beat until Harvard had less than a quarter of a length margin. The Harvard rooters yelled for the Crimson youngsters to hang on and the Yale partisans staged a counterdemonstration as the Eli shell came on persistently.

Blue Shell Still Gaining.

With the finish flags imminent, Yale was still slicing Harvard's lead inch after inch. Could Harvard hold on long enough to shoot across the line ahead? It seemed doubtful.

Then when the Yale shell appeared just forging upon even terms with the Crimson boys, Williams, the Harvard coxswain, barked out a sharp order. The Crimson lads threw themselves into the sweeps and they fairly lifted the shell across the line a trifle less than four feet in front.

The race of the second Varsity eights produced another thrilling finish, which came just as a thunderstorm broke. In the gathering darkness amid pealing thunder and lightning flashes the Harvard eight in a last desperate effort propelled its shell across the line less than a third of a length ahead of the Yale boat.

The rain was coming down in sheets as the crews crossed the line and many of the spectators scattered as the downpour was driven by the wind under the canopies above their heads. Harvard's time was 10:40 4-5, while Yale's was 10:41 4-5.

For more than half a mile at the outset the two crews rowed together with scarcely an inch of advantage one way or the other. Harvard again was using a slightly lower stroke than Yale, but was putting more power into the stroke. The form of this Yale crew, like the freshmen, was a picture of rhythm and harmony. From the observation train it looked as if there was only one crew on the river, for they pulled down the course in perfect alignment, Harvard rowing at 30 and Yale at 31.

At this point Harvard pushed ahead again until its margin was about a sixth of a length.

It was a pretty race to watch, and at that moment no one could tell who would win. It seemed a question whether Harvard could continue to keep up the pace with its lower stroke. The speed was great and the drive was telling on the oarsmen in both boats.

Boats Come On Even Terms.

About this time the sky was inky and the water became as still as a mill pond. Yale now hit up the stroke, and the Harvard rooters gasped as the Yale shell drew up on even terms with the men from Cambridge. The Crimson oarsmen increased the beat of their stroke, but for many yards Yale held on with a bulldog grip, declining absolutely to be shaken off. The thunder rolled over the course, the rain pelted the naked backs of the oarsmen, the lightning streaked the river's dark surface as the men bent over the oars and put every ounce of strength into the grind.

It looked like Yale's race. The blue flags began to wave and the crowd's yells rose above the peals of thunder.

A hundred yards from the finish, with the crews racing neck and neck, Yale pulled away slightly as the men hit up the beat in the last desperate effort.

It was a noble, inspiring effort which the Crimson boat now made. Harvard's stroke, Jenney, seemed pretty well fagged out, and as he tried desperately to answer the orders of Durfee he faltered. Before there was any check in Harvard's grand rush to the finish, Pond and Batchelder, Nos. 7 and 6, took up the stroke oar's work and hit the beat up according to orders. The Crimson crew forged out slightly in the lead.

In the final drive to the flags the blinding storm was forgotten. Harvard pulled bravely and the Crimson shell edged out foot by foot until they went over the line about a third of a length in front.

Going back to the station the rain came down in streams and the crowd on the observation cars got a cooling bath.

Yale-Tigers Final Game Today.

Ebbets Field in Brooklyn will be the scene this afternoon of the deciding clash between Yale and Princeton in their annual baseball series. The contest will start at 3 o'clock. Kirkland probably will be sent to the hillock for the Tigers while Selleck is the likely nomination to do the hurling for Old Eli.

Norway Seeks Olympics in 1924.

LAUSANNE, June 19, (Associated Press.)—The Norwegian Government and the municipality of Christiania have telegraphed to the International Olympic Committee proposing that the Olympic Games be held in Christiania in 1924. The three hundredth anniversary of the foundation of the Norwegian capital at Christiania will be celebrated there that year.

GEORGE STARR WINS HERCULES HANDICAP

Johnny Loftus, the wizard of the saddle, was called on to do a little too much at Jamaica yesterday when he had the mount on the Greentree Stable's Peter Piper in the Hercules Highweight Handicap that was the feature of the card. Peter Piper has almost miraculous speed, but is as fainthearted as a duck, and when collared in the stretch by Wilfrid Viau's George Starr he shut up like a jackknife and it was as much as Loftus could do to save the place from Startling.

The defeat of Peter Piper added another to the already long list of odds-on choices that have been bowled over at the meeting, the toll being further increased in the first race when Ina Wood, a 3 to 5 chance, failed to get away and was rushed up to her field only to finish last in a field of five two-year-olds. These were the only mishaps suffered by the players and many of them recouped their losses on the four successful choices.

There was a good field for the Hercules, and though Peter Piper had to carry 133 pounds the experts figured that he would be able to do that for five and a half furlongs, especially as Loftus was in the saddle. The crack jockey did all that a boy could do and managed to get Peter Piper away in motion, closely attended by George Starr and Startling. No attempt was made to cut out a long lead, but the vigorous manner in which George Starr hustled the favorite prevented him easing up for a breathing spell.

George Starr was never more than a length away from the leader, while Startling rushed up on the turn only to drop back again when he found the pace too hot. Peter Piper held his scant advantage into the stretch, but when George Starr challenged not even Loftus could make the son of Peter Pan raise a battle. Peter Piper simply refused to race and as he curled up George Starr rushed by at the furlong pole and gained at every stride until he had a margin of two lengths at the finish. The time was 1:05 4-5, four-fifths of a second slower than the track record.

Loftus had a chance to pull his followers out of the hole in the last event after he had again failed with the Cleveland Stable's Dorcas in the fifth. He had the mount on S. C. Hildreth's Lucullite, another odds-on choice, and was an easy winner over Ral Parr's Crimper. About all that could be seen of this race over the mile-and-seventy-yard route was the start and finish, for the storm which had been threatening all afternoon broke, and the race was run in a terrific downpour of rain. Loftus got Lucullite away in front, and at the end was simply galloping to dispose of Crimper.

Starter Cassidy was blamed for the defeat of Ina Wood in the first race, for Walter J. Salmon's Betty J. broke running, while the others were all tangled up. Ina Wood was one of the last to leave the barrier, but Ambrose sent her along so that she was within a length and a half of Betty J. at the turn. The effort proved too much, and Ina Wood dropped back steadily, while Betty J. continued, to win by a length and a half from Violet Tip, a 20-to-1 shot, with Allivan, 60 to 1, in third place.

HORSE SHOW RIDERS BRAVE HEAVY RAIN

Only One Event at White Plains Is Postponed—Becky Lanier Takes Three Blues.

WHITE PLAINS, June 20.—Rain failed to damp the ardor of the sportsmen at the Westchester County Horse Show today. The scheduled events were run off according to program and only the last event was postponed and will be decided tomorrow. Becky Lanier, the 12-year-old daughter of Charles D. Lanier, rode her father's thoroughbreds and was a three times winner. The threatening weather kept the crowd down somewhat, but those who came were prepared and watched the events in the steady rain. Two thunder storms and a high wind stopped the contests temporarily, but the enthusiastic exhibitors braved the weather and the horses showed well under the conditions.

The winning horses of the Charles D. Lanier Stables ridden by little "Becky" were Bangle, Down East, and Blackberry. Bit o' Glory, winner of one of the saddle horse classes, was ridden by Mrs. Maude Daniels Schmidt, daughter of Frank Daniels.

The attendance at the Horse Show today comprised practically the same society people of New York and Westchester who had been in attendance on the first and second days.

The awards:

COUSIN BEATS BOB SIMPSON

Sylvester Equals World's Mark in Interallied Games.

COLOMBES, FRANCE, Thursday, June 19, (Associated Press.)—Two world records made at the St. Louis games in 1904 were equalled by American athletes in the interallied try-outs today. Archie Hahn's long-standing mark of 21 3-5 seconds for the 200-metre dash was tied by Lieutenant C. W. Paddock, University of California, while in the 200-metre low hurdles, Sylvester, University of Missouri, beat his cousin, Robert Simpson, of the same college, who holds the world's record for the 120-yard hurdles. In this event Sylvester equalled the world's record of 24 3-5 seconds.

MOLLA BJURSTEDT LOSES NET TITLE

MATCH GOES THREE SETS

Mrs. Wightman and Miss Sears Victors Over Miss Cassel and Miss Wagner in Doubles Semi-Final.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, June 20.—Miss Molla Bjurstedt, for the past four years the woman tennis champion of America, was dethroned this morning by Miss Marion Zinderstein in the semi-final round of the national tournament at the Philadelphia Cricket Club, the Boston girl winning two out of three sets, 4–6, 6–1, 6–2. The result was far from surprising, in view of the Norwegian star's physical condition and it was only her magnificent grit that saved her from an overwhelming defeat in straight sets. Co-operating with splendid determination in the face of certain disaster was the curious mental attitude of her youthful opponent who seemed obsessed with the traditional invincibility of the former queen of the courts.

Miss Zinderstein deliberately weakened her game a full fifteen points in the first set by her timidity in going to the net and her unwillingness to take chances by using high speed and extra fine placement. She exchanged drives with the ex-champion and ran her around the court into a state of physical exhaustion and in the end these tactics were as effective as a quicker and more spectacular victory. But they resulted in the pathetic spectacle of a superb specimen of physical strength staggering about the court, utterly powerless with an iron will her only asset, gasping, coughing, almost falling to the ground, between rallies. There were murmurs of sympathy from the gallery over a sight which the alleged brutalities of the prize-ring could scarcely have surpassed. But there was no one to throw up the sponge for Molla Bjurstedt and she would have died in her tracks rather than quit.

Miss Bjurstedt Grows Weak.

That stubborn first set sapped all the vitality of the great Norse woman and, even though she won it, every one, herself included, knew then that she was beaten if Miss Zinderstein played one-half the tennis of which she is capable. While Miss Bjurstedt covered her court with grim desperation, running from corner to corner and even going to the net for an occasional winning volley, the little Boston girl merely kept the ball in play, floating easily along the base line, trim and neat in her starched white frock, with scarcely a wisp of her butterscotch disarranged by her efforts. But the fighting spirit on the other side of the net might have triumphed even over such amazing control if lungs and muscles had been able to do what the mind dictated. After the first set, however, Miss Zinderstein gave an exhibition of real tennis, and even the helplessness of her rival could not conceal the fact that the winner's game was practically unbeatable. The Bostonian's most effective shot today was a backhand cross-court slice which invariably caught the corner diagonally opposite, the ball scooting close to the ground and making a return exceedingly difficult. Any time that Miss Zinderstein chose to follow this stroke to the net the point was practically dropped into her lap. She used a straight floater down the line as a variation and then, when the ball came on her forehand, let loose a free, easy swing which carried very fast and with plenty of pace off the ground. Her service was only adequate, with three double faults included; she utterly ignored lobbing and generally disregarded the possibilities of net play. In other words, the winner came through with the consistent use of only two strokes, both of them, however, tremendously effective. She will unquestionably call upon a larger repertoire tomorrow against Mrs. George W. Wightman, who became the upper finalist by her easy defeat of Mrs. Gilbert Harvey at 6–2, 6–2.

Miss Zinderstein began the service in the big match, the games alternating up to 2—all, when Miss Bjurstedt broke through, the winning point going on a double fault. But the Boston star equalized immediately by realizing her obvious opportunities for volleying, and then went into the lead, 4–3, on the Norse woman's errors. After squaring it again on service, Miss Bjurstedt made her supreme effort and actually won a love game on her rival's delivery, driving the ball ... the corners with something akin to her old irresistible power. Miss Zinderstein, with the Indian sign evidently on her, broke badly and lost the set, 6–4, on errors, including the over-hitting of an easy volley.

Victory Comes Easily.

The second set was a procession, Miss Bjurstedt getting only the third game, in which she again broke through service, at 4–1. The ex-champion evidently gave up hope of a straight-set victory and threw the remaining games to save her strength for the rubber. But the seven minutes rest did little to improve her condition, which became more and more pitiful as the rallies went against her. Miss Zinderstein at once broke through the Bjurstedt service but lost this advantage by errors on her own delivery. She promptly broke through again, showing absolutely no respect for the lifeless service of the former champion. Trailing at 1–3, Miss Bjurstedt nerved herself for another effort and served a love game, getting the balls back by sheer grit, without an aggressive shot left in her possession. But this was her last gasp. In the next three games she captured a total of only four points and Miss Zinderstein quickly closed out the set, 6–2. Two splendid drives to opposite corners gave her a winning start on the final game and then, after alternate errors, Miss Bjurstedt popped a weak return into the net and saw her national title fade into vacancy.

Mrs. Wightman's victory over Mrs. Harvey was gained by the same cool, confident tactics that have beaten all her other opponents. The Philadelphia representative fought gamely for the points, but could not resist the aggressive chopping and volleying of the indoor champion.

Title for Miss Gardner.

The girls' national championship was won this afternoon by Miss Katherine Gardner of the West Side Tennis Club, New York, who defeated Miss Elizabeth Warren, Richmond, in a three-set final, 6–4, 5–7, 6–3. The loser was given her bracket by the default of Miss Adelaide Hocker of New York, whose injured ankle prevented further play. Both contenders exhibited good tennis in the final match, Miss Gardner's strokes having slightly better form and also carrying more consistent speed. But Miss Warren's slicing forehand shot and steady backhand withstood the attack of the stocky little Long Islander in splendid style and it was an even fight to the finish. Trailing at 1–4 in the rubber, Miss Warren made a plucky rally, capturing two games in succession, but a series of good serves and drives by Miss Gardner put her out of the running and Umpire Myrick quickly called off the deciding points.

Casualties figured also in the doubles event today, Miss Eleanor Sears playing in the semi-finals with a torn ligament in spite of doctor's orders for a complete rest. With Mrs. Wightman as a partner she faced the strong combination of Miss Marie Wagner and Miss Clare Cassel and after a succession of brilliant rallies in which both Bostonians volleyed and smashed with deadly effect, the first two sets were divided at 6–3 and 6–4.

Miss Cassel, however, was also in bad shape, with a bandage on her right forearm, and her play as well as that of her partner slumped heavily in the rubber, which went to Mrs. Wightman and Miss Sears by the surprisingly one-sided score of 6–1. It was another demonstration of the infinite superiority of the net game over back court doubles.

DONALDSON NET LEADER.

Play for Brooklyn Junior Title Postponed After One Set.

Cecil Donaldson and Harry Brunie started out to decide the Brooklyn junior tennis championship title yesterday in the final round of this division of the tournament on the Terrace Club courts, Flatbush. Donaldson took the first set by 6–4, and then came a downpour of rain which drove the youngsters to shelter. Further play for the day was impossible.

Donaldson's successful set will be included in the match when it is continued this afternoon. The players, expecting a downpour momentarily when they took to the court, agreed that if either was successful in a complete set the score would stand in the case of interruption.

It is expected to reach the finals in the men's singles and the championship doubles this afternoon, and to play the finals of these divisions tomorrow.

The teams are made up as follows: Newtown High School — Singles, August Bastein, Richard Clinchy, Harvey Smedley; doubles, John Guiler and Harold True.

DeWitt Clinton High School—Singles, Paul Kohn, William Aydelotte, and Charles Wood; doubles, Edward Gittler and Morton Berstein. Guiler and Gittler are the captains of their respective teams.

HOME RUNS BEAT MACKMEN.

Detroit Has Better of Slugfest by 11 to 9 Score.

PHILADELPHIA, June 20.—Detroit won a slugging match from Philadelphia, 11 to 9, today, the visitors compiling 15 hits for a total of 29 bases. Heilmann, Flagstead, and Walker hit the ball into the bleachers for home runs. The game was called in the Athletics' half of the ninth inning because of darkness when a windstorm swept over the field.

GIANTS RALLY AND WIN IN ELEVENTH

Chase Makes Hit with Two on Bases and Downs Cardinals by 4 to 2.

ST. LOUIS, June 20.—The Giants had to battle for eleven innings here today before they could finally overcome the St. Louis Cardinals. After being shut out up to the ninth McGraw's men gathered a brace of runs and seemed to be sure winners, only to have the score tied on them in the Cardinals' half, and it was not until the eleventh that they again were able to bunch hits and gain a verdict by a score of 4 to 2.

It was Hal Chase, who has been in a batting slump for some time, who came through with the blow that turned the tide. Hal stepped into the breach in the eleventh, after two New York batsmen had reached the bases, and slammed a single to centre which sent both runners home. Jean Dubuc, who by this time had taken up the pitching duty, held the Cardinals safe in the last half of the inning.

The game was a pitcher's battle with Barnes and Tuoro both pitching fine ball. For seven innings neither side could score a run and both pitchers received good support whenever there was a runner on the bases. Though the Giants had men on the bases on several occasions, Tuoro was always equal to the situation. The little Cuban used excellent judgment and had such good control that the Giants were helpless against him. However, Tuoro gave way to a pinch hitter in the ninth and Ames and Goodwin took turns in the remaining innings.

Barnes was hit for nine safe blows in nine innings, but Dubuc slipped through the remainder of the game without yielding a hit.

The Cardinals put over the first run of the game in the eighth, with the aid of an error. Smith hit a dribbling roller to Doyle, who muffed the ball. Miller sacrificed, and after two had been retired Hornsby singled, scoring Smith. The Giants went into the lead in the ninth. Young opened the inning by drawing a pass, and Fletcher singled, sending him to third. McHenry made a wild throw attempting to get Fletcher off the base and Young scored. Fletcher went to second on the error, and came home on a single by Kauff.

But the Cardinals were not ready to give up. Lavan opened their half of the ninth with a double and Clemons was safe on a fielder's choice to Zimmerman. Snyder singled, scoring Lavan. The Cardinals tried a squeeze play after that, but Barnes made a wide throw and blocked it.

Ames was chased from the box in the tenth after he had replaced Tuero, but the scoring was delayed until the eleventh against Goodwin. Doyle singled to right in this frame and Kauff followed with a safe blow. Zimmerman sacrificed and Chase then came through with the hit that scored both runners.

RAIN ROBS YANKS OF GAME.

Lo the Poor Indians Are Saved from Beating by Downpour.

Everything seems against the Yankees these days—the Cleveland Indians, some renegade fans who constantly and at times boisterously pull for the visiting teams, and the weather. Miller Huggins and his fighting athletes had visions of a victory over the Redskins from Cleveland on the Polo Grounds yesterday when old Jupiter Pluvius came on the scene with a rumbling which vibrated through the huge stadium in the shadow of Coogan's Bluff and a lightning display which made many in the crowd of 8,000 disappointed fans apprehensive of disaster.

The storm broke early in the fifth inning, after the Yanks had squeezed two runs over the platter in the fourth. Bob Shawkey was hustling to dispose of the Indians before the expected downpour came, because in that case the Yanks would have pocketed the game. Bob had two strikes and one ball on Smith when there was a clap of thunder, the heavens were illuminated with an electrical display and Umpire Brick Owens stepped in front of the plate and called for the ball. That ended what bade fair to be a Yankee holiday, for they were leading in the score by 2 to 0, and there wasn't any immediate danger of their being overhauled.

The players had no sooner scurried to their dug-outs than the field was enveloped in inky darkness. Very few storms in the past have sent such utter blackness over Hennery Fabian's turf. the flare of matches to cigarettes and cigars in the mouths of fans, reminded some of the doughboys on the scene of star shells sent over France's battlefields, so brilliantly did they flash in the gloom. It was darker than the inside of a tar baby.

CURVES AND BINGLES.

The Yanks lost no time in taking the field after scoring their two runs. They wanted to dispose of the Indians and get that victory. Lee Fohl's men shambled and shuffled around, however, until many precious minutes had been wasted, and upset the Yankee celebration.

Rain was threatening from the starting time, but the downpour held off as if to let the Yankees get near victory and then snatch it away from them.

When the storm finally came it was a deluge. For nearly a half hour the elements raged in all their fury, with inky night brooding over the stricken fans.

Ten brave Polo Ground employes wasted a lot of energy in planting the tarpaulins over the infield.

Hy Jasper was making his début as a Cleveland hurler. Everything was all set for Hy's baptism of fire, but the storm saved him.

Shawkey early gave evidences that he was out to get his eighth victory. Robert retired the first three Indians in order, and pitched only seven balls to accomplish the trick. Graney and Lunte fanned on three balls apiece and Tristram Speaker popped up the first one served him.

This same Tristram Speaker furnished a brilliant piece of headwork in the Yanks' third. Truck Hannah made the first hit off Jasper here and raced for second on Shawkey's sacrifice tap. Truck had too much momentum, however, and overran the bag. And then, seemingly out of nowhere, Speaker bobbed up right on the sack to take the throw from Wambegans, who covered first, and tagged out Hannah.

The Indians were treated like friends when they passed among the crowd in the stands on their way out. Everybody seemed to know them by their first names. They were reminded, however, that they were "lucky stiffs."

Steve O'Neill gave Jasper some fatherly advice in the Yanks' first inning when Baker's fly took Smith within a few inches of the right-field wall before the catch could be made. Pipp was on second at the time, and O'Neill impressed upon the débutanté twirler the necessity for caution.

Shawkey received a great ovation as he tripped nonchalantly to the Yankee dugout after retiring the Indians in order in the second. Smith skied out to Bodie and Gardner and Wambegans both slashed the air.

Pratt engineered a snap double play in the third after Johnston had singled. Derrill almost broke his back in the next frame scooping up Graney's grounder for the second out.

High School Nines in Title Clash.

High School of Commerce and Erasmus Hall High School baseball team will battle this morning on the Catholic Protectory Grounds at Van Nest for the city scholastic baseball title. Both teams have won their games in the sectional and intersectional series. The Commerce nine won the Manhattan, Bronx and Richmond series without encountering defeat. Erasmus Hall's nine holds the Brooklyn title. The game will start at 10 o'clock.

DRENCHED GOLFERS PLAY OUT MATCHES

Only One First Division Contest Halted at Fox Hills—Kammer and Walker Win.

The only extra hole played in the tournament at the Fox Hills Golf Club yesterday afternoon was the "nineteenth" and that did a land office business. It all happened because of the thunderstorm that broke over the links shortly after luncheon, when, in the vernacular of the weather man, the precipitation became so great that several of the greens disappeared from view.

Combined with the downpour was the failing of the light, it becoming so dark that the players could not follow the flight of the ball. As a result, the committee had to make a special ruling allowing contestants unable to conclude their second round matches to finish this morning. This is one of the few times in the history of Eastern golf that such a state of affairs has existed, but oddly enough it happened at Fox Hills a good many years ago, when several of the basin-like formations were transformed into lakes.

Those in the first sixteen yesterday were more fortunate than in the other divisions, only one of the second round contests remaining unfinished. That was between W. H. Follett and B. T. Allen, both of the home club. After playing eleven holes, Follett being two up at the time, the pair found it impossible to continue.

On the other hand, A. F. Kammer of Baltusrol, who won the medal on Thursday, managed to finish his afternoon match with Courtlandt Van Clief, of the home club. Kammer, going out in 37, turned for home 1 up. Van Clief had hung on in determined fashion, his card showing only one stroke more.

Coming back, Kammer became 3 up with 4s at the tenth and eleventh holes, but Van Clief won the twelfth, over the pond, in 3. He also won the long thirteenth, where he laid his opponent a stymie. That left Kammer only one up.

They halved the fourteenth and the Baltusrol man became 2 up again with a "bird" 3 at the next. At that juncture, Kammer stood 2 up with three holes to play, but conditions became so bad that an intermission was found necessary. When play was resumed, Kammer won the sixteenth hole and the match 3 and 2.

In the meantime, A. L. Walker, Jr., who had a 76 in the qualifying round, was kept fairly busy by W. H. Gardiner, the well known Buffalo amateur. Going out, Walker hit too fast a pace, however, reaching the turn in 37, good enough to place his opponent 3 down. They also had to wait a long time before finishing the match, which finally went to Walker 3 and 2.

E. F. Hunt, of Jamaica, played well, removing L. G. Spindler, the former Fox Hills champion, in the morning, and then defeating F. H. Kendall of South Shore in the afternoon. As a result, Hunt will meet Walker in the lower semi-final bracket this morning, which leaves Kammer to take on the winner of the Follett-Allen match.

First Sixteen, First Round.—A. F. Kammer, Baltusrol, beat George Bowman, Plainfield, by default; Courtlandt Van Clief, Fox Hills, beat P. F. Bessire, Fox Hills, 1 up; W. H. Follett, Fox Hills, beat S. M. Milliken, Scarsdale, 6 up and 5 to play; B. T. Allen, Fox Hills, beat W. C. Van Clief, Fox Hills, 2 up; E. F. Hunt, Jamaica, beat L. G. Little, Pine Valley, 4 up and 3 to play; L. F. Wood, Buffalo, beat George H. Bowly, Spring Lake, 3 up.

Fifth Sixteen, First Round.—D. W. Mulford, Fox Hills, beat P. Thiel, Fox Hills, 1 up; F. Heikel, Fox Hills, beat F. Martin, Fox Hills, 3 up and 2 to play; F. V. Sullivan, Fox Hills, beat J. D. Barnhill, Fox Hills, by default; E. F. Keating, Fox Hills, beat F. Vynne, Fox Hills, 3 up and 1 to play; W. O. Smith, Fox Hills, beat W. S. Van Clief, Fox Hills, by default; H. E. Dennison, Fox Hills, beat W. I. Dey, Scarsdale, by default; E. Burrows, Scarsdale, beat C. J. Skidmore, Crescent, 5 up and 3 to play; George Lembeck, Fox Hills, beat G. B. Morrison, Fox Hills, 6 up and 5 to play.

RUTH TRIPLES IN A CRISIS.

Slugging Pitcher of Red Sox Deals Browns Fatal Blow.

BOSTON, June 20.—Ruth helped win his own game against St. Louis, 3 to 1, today. After Strunk's opening single off Gallia in the sixth, Ruth tripled and scored on McInnis's single. Vitt's Texas leaguer, in the seventh, scored Barry, who had opened the inning by singling. Singles by Smith and Mayer, with a sacrifice hit, gave St. Louis its one run in the fourth.

QUAKER NINE IN A DRAW.

Rain Ends Game with Lafayette at End of Fifth.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Penn., June 20.—The University of Pennsylvania ball team was the attraction on March Field today, engaging with Lafayette in the annual commencement day game. The game resulted in a tie, the game being called while Penn was at bat with the score 1 to 1.

The game was a pitchers' battle between Sheffy of Penn and Moyer of Lafayette. Penn scored its run in the opening round. Bohan opened by flying to Welles. Straus got a base on balls and was at second on Sweeney's roller to Bieber. Sweeney then stole second. Warwick bounded a hit off of Moyers' glove, Sweeney going to third. McNichol lined to Lamborelli, who dropped the ball, allowing Sweeney to score.

Lafayette evened the count in the fourth inning and threw away a chance to win the game in the same inning. Bieber opened by driving a triple down the left field foul line. Welles singled to right, scoring Bieber. Chilson sacrificed Welles to second. Martin walked. With first and second bases occupied and only one out Lafayette attempted a double steal. Welles was an easy victim of Warwick's throw to Straus. Martin moved to second and went to third on a passed ball, but Tameralli could not score him. His best was an easy foul to Straus. Rain ended the game at the close of the fifth inning.

BOCKENKAMP IS FINALIST.

Will Meet Legg for Western Amateur Golf Title.

ST. LOUIS, June 20.—Breaking the course record by two strokes with a 71, Richard Bockenkamp, a public links golfer of St. Louis, 18 years old, today defeated L. D. Bromfield of Denver 2 and 1 in the semi-finals of the Western amateur championship at the Sunset Hill Club and won the right to play the final with Harry G. Legg of Minneapolis, who had no difficulty in eliminating with ordinary golf Clarence Wolff of St. Louis, medalist of the tournament, 5 and 4.

While Bockenkamp played brilliant golf, Bromfield was on his heels all the way, scoring 77 in the morning to Bockenkamp's 76 and 74 in the afternoon, only two over par. Neither player won a hole in anything less than par. Bockenkamp playing 22 holes in perfect figures and Bromfield 21.

WOMEN SWIMMERS COMING.

Fannie Durack and Nina Wylie on Way from Australia.

According to a cable dispatch received by A. S. Goldsmith of Seattle, an official of the A. A. U., Miss Fannie Durack and Miss Nina Wylie, Australia's greatest women swimmers, are on their way to this country. They sailed some days ago from Sydney, N. S. W., expecting to make their first appearance in Los Angeles, then work up the coast to Seattle, and start from there on a tour through the Middle West and East.

It is not clear whether or not the two champions propose to undertake any competition while here or whether their efforts will be limited to exhibitions. When they came over together last Summer to engage in races there was trouble over the credentials required of foreign contestants by the A. A. U., and they eventually returned to their native land without having taken part in a single event. While in California, too, they aroused considerable feeling by refusing to comply with the regulations.

WILLARD BATTERS PARTNERS IN TEST

Champion Knocks Out Jack Heinen—Expect Baker to Attend.

Special to The New York Times.

TOLEDO, Ohio, June 20.—Champion Jess Willard showed his prowess to better effect today in his training than at any time since he took up active work. This was demonstrated when he shot a hard right to the jaw of Jack Heinen, one of his sparring partners, and sent him reeling through the ropes into the crowd which lined the arena. Heinen landed on his head and was stunned for about five minutes. He revived later, but his efforts were somewhat less active than in the previous round.

Willard went through the usual two rounds each with Walter Monaghan, Joe Chip and Jack Hempel. Monaghan, as usual, gave the champion his best workout in defensive work, the soldier doing most of his work in leading for the head and upper regions. In several instances he went through and planted smart blows on Willard's jaw, but the champion, gritting his teeth, ran toward his opponent and slashed right and left to show how he is able to meet a strong onslaught.

Joe Chip again demonstrated he was able to get near his giant adversary, and after using up the first round in defensive work confined himself to body punches, which the champion apparently relished in an effort to harden the abdominal muscles. Hempel's work was largely in body work along the lines given by Chip in his second round. At the conclusion of the bout Willard left the ring smiling, but breathing less arduously than he did on the day previous when the humidity made work so irksome.

A severe storm broke over Camp Willard just as the champion was emerging from the clubhouse, the 1,200 spectators, fearing the collapse of the canvas side walls under the forty-mile wind, ran outside. The storm soon abated, however, with only a slight shower and a much lower temperature.

Over at the Dempsey camp the challenger confined himself to bag punching and shadow boxing for the benefit of the big crowd which was in the enclosure. No boxing was indulged in, as Big Bill Tate has not yet arrived from St. Paul, where he met Sam Langford last night. Dempsey will begin active boxing work tomorrow.

Willard has eliminated all road work from his training calendar and will confine himself henceforth to boxing until he enters the ring on July 4. He declares that within another five days he will have reached the stage where there no longer exists any doubt as to his condition.

Tex Rickard, promoter of the big bout, is not exercised over the action of the Ohio Legislature last night in adopting a resolution calling upon Governor James M. Cox to stop the bout. Governor Cox thus far has been silent on the resolution. It is said that he already has his ticket for the bout and with Secretary of War Newton D. Baker and other officials plans to be among the honored guests at the ringside.

Ad Thacher, President of the Toledo Athletic Club, who was one of the promoters in bringing the bout to this city, has arranged a card of seven preliminary bouts.

Every State Superintendent of the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions is urged, in telegrams sent out last night by the board from its headquarters here, to send messages immediately to Congress asking that Governor Cox of Ohio be asked to forbid "desecration" of the nation's holiday through the holding of the Willard-Dempsey fight on July 4.

The Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, Superintendent of the International Reform Bureau, who is leading the campaign to have religious organizations protest against the bout, said an appeal was sent by the bureau yesterday to the Methodist Centennial meeting at Columbus asking the Methodists to enter their opposition.

GENEVA ATHLETES COMING.

Up-State Men Will Compete in Track Championships.

Application for entry blanks for the Metropolitan A. A. U. junior track and field championships which will be held at Stevens Tech Field, Hoboken, N. J., June 28, were received from Geneva, N. Y., recently. The request came from Jack Dwyer, who sought information as to whether athletes of Geneva were eligible to compete for the titles. In the response to the communication it was stated the Geneva athletes were eligible, provided they held membership in some organization affiliated with the Metropolitan A. A. U.

MERKLE'S BAT BEATS ROBINS

Two-Bagger by Cubs' First Baseman Settles the Issue.

CHICAGO, June 20.—A double by Fred Merkle, the former Giant first baseman, gave the Chicago Cubs a victory over Brooklyn here this afternoon. Merkle's blow came in the seventh frame and scored Max Flack and Leslie Mann with a brace of runs which pulled the Cubs from the ruck.

A fielding misdemeanor by Big Ed Konetchy started the trouble for the Dodgers. After Bailey had fanned, Flack got a life on Konetchy's fumble. Pick singled, sending Flack to second. Max raced to third when Mann forced Pick at second, and then Merkle injected his double, scoring Flack and Mann. The blow gave the Cubs the game after an uphill battle by a count of 6 to 5.

Shufflin' Phil Douglas started on the mound for the Cubs, but was hammered incessantly until he was removed in the fifth inning to make room for Bailey. Sherry Smith did the twirling for the Robins and was pounded freely.

The Robins went into the lead with three runs in the third inning. After Douglas threw out Schmandt, Miller singled to left. Smith singled past Merkle, and Olson followed with a rap to left which scored Miller. Hy Myers thumped a double to right, scoring Smith and Olson.

Chicago evened the count in its half on singles by O'Farrell and Douglas, Flack's triple, and Pick's sacrifice fly. In the fourth the Cubs added another when Deal beat out an infield hit, Lear singled, O'Farrell sacrificed, and Flack singled, the latter blow registering Deal.

A brace of runs in the fifth gave the Robins the lead again. Smith got his second hit of the day, a single to right. Olson beat out a hit to Douglas and Myers sacrificed. Tommy Griffith then lashed a single to left, scoring Smith and Olson. Wheat chased Griffith to the third corner with a single to centre, and Douglas was relieved. Bailey went to the rescue, and made Konetchy foul out to Mann and threw out Magee.

There was no more scoring until the Cubs clinched the game in the seventh.

MOTOR BOATS ARE ENTERED

Good Contest Expected in Race to Albany and Return.

All indications point to an interesting race to Albany and return on Friday evening, June 28, starting from the New York Motor Boat Club, 147th Street and Hudson River. Promises of entries for this race have been given by Commodore H. C. Vaughan, with new cruiser Mabelle V., and Commodore A. G. Hauver, with his cruiser Blue Hen III. Both of these boats are new to New York waters. The Mabelle V. has come down from up-State, has been thoroughly overhauled, and remarkable performances are expected of her. The Blue Hen III. is well known on the Delaware River and has won numerous trophies there. In contending for the Albany-New York honors it is expected that she will live up to her past performances and give a good account of herself. Numerous other owners are considering the race, and a large entry list is looked for.

A class for open boats is also included, and both the old rivals, Eastern Star, E. L. Finch, and Amorita, W. T. Randolph, will again try for the prize. In a previous race won by the Eastern Star the run to Albany and return was made in 14 hours 46 minutes, and it is expected that the contestants will better this time this year, as the tide will be favorable to a fast trip.

The Race Committee of the New York Motor Boat Club is working to make a successful race and reawaken the motor boat spirit among yachtsmen, many of whom have been in the navy during the war.

Inquiries from interested yachtsmen will be taken care of by the Club Measurer, F. W. Horenburger, and yachtsmen are invited to call at the clubhouse at 147th Street and Hudson River.

ORLANDO FALLS.

Dr. ORLANDO served Italy and the great alliance well in the critical year of the war; that fact deserves to be remembered now that his Ministry has been repudiated by a vote of nearly four to one, and it is to be hoped that events will so shape themselves that it will be remembered after history has forgotten that his fall was largely his own fault.

The war, of course, bore heavily on Italy; even complete victory left the country weakened, with the cost of living high, commodities scarce, and discontent widespread. These conditions were present everywhere, but seem to have been more acute in Italy than in France or England. There was also a considerable and virulent Socialist opposition which was only one remove, and that a short one, from downright Bolshevism. Much of this trouble could not easily or speedily be corrected; while it remained, any Government would be likely to have hard going.

According to all visible evidence, it was this situation which drove ORLANDO over to the side of the extreme imperialistic group, led and represented in his Cabinet by Baron SONNINO. A party of Italians would have been satisfied with moderate annexations; another party wanted "everything in sight." ORLANDO'S sympathies were apparently with the first, but last Winter he went over to the extremists. If the Italians could be made to believe that national honor and national prosperity were bound up solely with the question of annexations on the Adriatic, their minds might be taken off internal conditions. At least, so it seems to observers from this side of the Atlantic. ORLANDO had many enemies; he could not trust all who had supported him in a moderate policy toward the Jugoslavs; he thought he could trust the annexationists if he went over to them wholeheartedly.

So began the great clamor about Fiume and other phases of the Adriatic question, a large question, but closely interrelated, of which the Fiume dispute, so deplorably mishandled by almost everybody concerned in it, was only a part. Active propaganda, backed by SONNINO and at least consented to by the Premier, accomplished the comparatively easy task of convincing the Italians that without Fiume all was lost, including honor. The game succeeded only too well; when, two months ago, ORLANDO returned for a vote of confidence on his stand for Fiume, he received every vote except those of Socialist extremists who were held aloof by party dogma but appear to have sympathized with his attitude. By the unanimous voice of the representatives of his people he was told to go back to Paris and get Fiume.

Naturally he had to get it or meet disaster; and he has not got it. It seems certain that ORLANDO long realized that attainment of the impossible program of the Sonnino faction was out of the question; he could fight for it, knowing that he could not win; he could get part of what was wanted and bring that back home as the fruits of victory. But it seems that he could not get even so much as he expected, and he had educated his people to a point where even what he expected might not have been enough. So as time passed and the Adriatic question remained unsettled, all the dissatisfaction with internal conditions that had been sidetracked by the annexationist agitation came back, reinforced by the general chagrin at the failure to get better terms on the Adriatic.

That Italy is actually getting a great deal ORLANDO told the Chamber, and it is true; but he had trained the Chamber to expect too much. His resignation may not be accepted; if it is accepted at the present time it will be unfortunate, since it is almost certain to delay the Italian signature to the German treaty, and will leave the final settlement with Jugoslavia and Greece to a new Ministry which, judging from the expressions in the Chamber, will surely be far less able to work with the Allies than was ORLANDO.

THE NAVY'S AIR SERVICE.

The impulse of the House of Representatives, more economical or more skeptical than the Senate, that prompted it to cut the navy aviation appropriation from $45,000,000 to $15,000,000 reflected a popular judgment that economy in Government expenditures is imperative. At the same time the navy is our first line of defense and always will be. It is a service that does not waste money, that makes every dollar count. Such was its practice during the great war; so the question is whether the navy needs more than $15,000,000 in the next fiscal year for aviation. It is a practical and in no sense a sentimental question. Will the United States Navy fall behind the British and the French navies if compelled to get along with the reduced amount? So far as the British establishment is concerned, it is far ahead of the American Navy in aeronautical equipment. In battleships of the first line there is a disparity in favor of the British beyond doubt, while in the matter of naval aviation the American Navy is certainly distanced. If it can have only $15,000,000 to spend there will be no stern chase even. Our service would be out of it in another year. France will probably spend a larger sum on her navy for aviation during the twelvemonth.

Congress should understand that it is the British policy to be first in the air as well as first on the sea, whether there is a reduction of armaments or not. American naval officers have been the pioneers across the Atlantic by airplane. A needed stimulation has been given to the enthusiasm and zeal of our naval men by the performance. Secretary DANIELS is therefore right when he says that "it would be "almost a calamity if Congress were "now to mark time for a year or so "when other nations are spending "more money than ever on aircraft "development." He asked originally for $45,000,000, and now proposes a reduction of $10,000,000 from his estimate.

This the Senate Committee is willing to allow him; the House has been altogether too frugal in cutting down the estimate by two-thirds. Our people are so proud of their navy that they want its scouting department to be of the best. Mr. DANIELS does not overstate the case for the airplanes when he says that they are as essential as destroyers. The fleet must always know what it is about, and the air scouting service supplies the only information of real value.

THE KAISER'S CASE.

War for conquest is a crime; but though the conscience of mankind has long declared it to be such, there has never been an official recognition of it by the nations such as is the basis of Article 227 of the Peace Treaty, which proposes to bring the German ex-Emperor to trial for causing such a war. This is progress. Officially the nations propose to bring a man to trial on the charge of initiating a war of conquest. The world has never seen such a thing. Even in the days of the ecstatic dream of universal peace in the early fifties, a dream shattered by the Crimean war, it was not even supposed that "the imperial Guy Fawkes," as THEODORE PARKER called the Czar, could or should be brought before a tribunal and punished. Those who are skeptical about the dawn of a new age must think again.

The demand of the Allies for the trial of a man who brought on a war marks a step forward in the development of the human race. It is all the better that they do not rest their demand on technicalities, but admit and proclaim that it is for the purpose of setting a precedent; that "the ex-Em-"peror is arraigned as a matter of in-"ternational policy," [not at all for the technical violation of any statute,] "for a supreme offense against inter-"national morality, the sanctity of "treaties, and the essential rules of "justice." A new hour has struck.

That the rights of the accused may be safeguarded, a regular tribunal is to be set up, and the evidence is to be presented before the eyes of the world. Kings have fallen before, but never in this manner except when they have been tried by their own subjects, and such trials were acts of revolution. This is meant not only as a punishment of the crime of making war but as a warning and signpost for all future rulers who may be tempted to commit that crime. It is really a complement to the League of Nations. Without it the covenant would be incomplete. The League proposes to prevent war; the proposal for the trial of the ex-Emperor serves notice on all generations of the future that wanton, unprovoked war is a crime and can be punished.

The Kaiser and those fellow-criminals who are to be brought to the bar are punishable, under this new order of things, not only for the crime of instituting war but for acting on the detestable doctrine that in consequence of changed conditions all the safeguards for humanity in time of war must be thrown to the winds. The Germans have acted deliberately on the theory that since in modern times whole nations are engaged, therefore the old provision that only fighting men are fair game for other fighting men must be discarded. The civilian, even the baby in its mother's arms, is as much "the enemy" as the armed man; this was the theory on which the whole series of atrocities was based. It was a theory coldly thought out and scientifically acted upon. The Powers intend to make it impossible for any future nation to hold or act upon such an atrocious theory, and they propose to do it by arraigning for trial the man who have held it and acted upon it in the last four years.

LABOR AND THE COURTS.

The Federation of Labor is not well advised in appealing to public opinion for support of its attack on Judges and courts. Not that our legal procedure is above criticism—far from it—but there is no peaceful substitute for the adjustment of differences of opinion about rights and wrongs by authoritative and detached opinion. Individual Judges err; some statutes are obnoxious. But the Federation attacks the system, not its errors. The Federation thinks that it is the right of freemen to be judges in their own affairs of what is lawful and unlawful. It seems that the Federation revives events which would willingly be forgotten, in consideration of many instances of self-restraint and good conduct on the part of unions under irritation. But the Federation must understand that the country, if put to its choice, will prefer the judicial interpretation of the statutes to the edicts of the unions that the laws are not understood, and that no more injunctions must issue. Labor has been challenged to name instances in which they have been issued except in equity for the prevention of irreparable injury, and labor has not made reply beyond standing for its right to disobey injunctions because they interfere with strikes.

The particular occasion of this outbreak was the decision last month that unincorporated unions can be sued in their name for damages done by them. The complaint, if well grounded, lies not against the courts so much as against the law and the jury which convicted the United Mine Workers of conduct causing damages of $600,000 through a conspiracy to prevent the employment of nonunionists by a corporation in receivership. The disorders were repressed by Federal cavalry sent to uphold the authority of a Federal Marshal. There is no denial of the riot or the damages. The defense of labor is that unincorporated unions are irresponsible, that the riot was a local affair with which the international had nothing to do, and that the union rules forbid violence, for which members alone are liable. If these pleas are allowed the public peace may be broken by license under the Clayton law.

When that statute was passed it was understood by labor to authorize whatever it did as lawful, and was understood by others to justify all lawful acts of labor. There was no need to authorize lawful acts, and no statute can legalize unreasonable conspiracies in restraint of trade. If unions can forcibly prevent nonunionists from working, the courts' intervention being forbidden, then the unionists are entitled to all the jobs, although they number less than one in ten of all workers. One man has as good a right to work under the law as another, and the Federation is rash to challenge public opinion on that right of citizenship rather than of unionism.

DOING HARM TO THEIR CAUSE.

A new Irish party is being formed by leaders such as Sir HORACE PLUNKETT and T. P. O'CONNOR—men whose loyalty to the cause of liberty in the war was as warm as any man's could be, men who have done much for Ireland; men who now feel that the situation requires a much larger degree of Home Rule than would have been satisfactory five years ago. Of complete independence they do not talk, regarding it as both impossible and undesirable; but they want the almost complete independence technically known as "Dominion home rule."

That these men think nothing less will do is a sign of the seriousness of the situation created by the failure to get Ireland settled before the war; it is another proof that the growth of Sinn Fein is a gesture of desperation born of hope deferred. The mutineers of Curragh Camp have about as heavy a burden on their consciences as the insurgents of Easter week. Of course, all sensible Americans know, if not all of them will admit, that the overwhelming majority of British realize this far better than we do; that they would give a great deal for any solution that would bring measurable satisfaction to both parts of Ireland. That solution must be found, and found soon; but it will not be found the sooner because of American resolutions in support of the Sinn Feiners.

The British have become used to these amiable demonstrations of neighborliness, and many Britons know just about what they are worth; but others do not. It may be that Senators, Aldermen, and labor leaders do not see why there is anything inappropriate in urging the British to expose their west coast to a "government" some of whose chief men during the war gave aid to the enemy's side when the enemy seemed likely to win.

Some of the friends of Sinn Fein among us would like to see this country at war with England for any reason or for no reason. They may be able to intimidate or persuade politicians; but among Americans who are not looking for regimented votes they are doing a great deal of harm to the interests of the Irish people.

MARTENS AND BERNSTORFF.

It is perfectly true, as was said by Mr. NUORTEVA, Secretary of the Bolshevist Mission, that the raid on that mission by police authorities was unprecedented, but it is not true, as he said, that it was an outrage. He said that the Soviet Government in Russia treated the American Ambassador with courtesy and protected him. The American Ambassador to Russia was twice threatened by mobs incited by the speeches of LENIN himself, before the Bolsheviki attained power; afterward he found them so threatening that he was compelled to withdraw to Vologda, from which retreat he saw American Consuls imprisoned by the Bolsheviki and a British attaché murdered.

Besides, the American Ambassador went to Russia as an Ambassador. The Soviet Minister to the United States did not come here as a Minister. The American Ambassador went to Russia as a gentleman whose duties were confined to representing his nation and his nationals. The Soviet Minister, so called, came over here, as appears to most Americans, to raise a rebellion in the United States. If there is no difference in the mind of Mr. NUORTEVA, then he is much denser than so many Bolsheviki, clear-headed and highly intelligent plotters and assassins, have made themselves understood to us.

Mr. NUORTEVA showed sense when he said, concerning the argument that the credentials of his mission have not been accepted by the United States: "That is true, but never mind about that." It is, indeed, a matter of the smallest significance. If a gang of incendiaries had been sent over here with the highest credentials on earth, and had spent their time trying to organize criminal attempts to overthrow the Government to which they were accredited, had tried to organize and abet revolution, they would have been sent out of the country like JOHANN VON BERNSTORFF and Dr. DUMBA and their lesser lights VON PAPEN and BOY-ED.

A little less ceremony has been used in the case of the organizers of rebellion headed by MARTENS. That may or may not be due to the fact that he has no credentials. The sooner he goes, however, the better. We have no room here for foreign plotters against our institutions and our form of government. Let them all go. If they come here with impudent credentials, purporting to give them standing as officially representing our enemies, let them go all the quicker.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Needless Kind of Teaching.

Careful reading of Mayor HYLAN'S letter to Commissioner ENRIGHT creates, among several other emotions, a feeling of wonder that the Mayor—or anybody else in the city, for that matter—should have thought that the present head of the Police Department was in need of such advice and instruction as this document contains. Of even the fiercest critics the Commissioner has had in his long career on the force he now commands, never a one ever accused, or even suspected, him of knowing anything less than all there is to know about its methods and its possibilities—what it should and should not do.

It is therefore more than a little surprising, and more than a little amusing, too, that his Honor at this late day should have taken the trouble to draw up for the Commissioner's guidance rules and precepts as elementary as those contained in this letter. They are all good enough and wise enough, but they are all of a date far back in the last century, or the one before it, and if the Commissioner is not now following them, he is most unlikely to do so merely because the Mayor has again enumerated the fundamental duties that all policemen ought to perform and the ideals they all should set before themselves.

What the attentive and interested public would have liked to see in the letter was evidence that the Mayor had given deep study to police problems and that as a result of it he was able to make some suggestions at once original and promising for increasing police efficiency in this city. Nothing of that sort will readers of the Mayor's communication find in it, and naturally their disappointment will be cruel.

Valuable in its Implication.

It is between the lines of the Mayor's letter to Commissioner ENRIGHT that cause for satisfaction with it can be found. That he wrote it at all reveals appreciation on the Mayor's part that the Police Department is not functioning quite as well as it should, or at least not as well as its friends—which means the whole city and everybody in it—would like. The letter also reveals the Mayor's belief in the possibility as well as the need for improvement, and that is so important and so encouraging that the Mayor's failure to make any original contributions to the literature of his subject—his implied admission of inability to give much help in devising means of improvement—can be forgotten. It is enough that he sees what all of his fellow citizens see, and feels about it as they feel.

That being the case, presumably he is as tired as the rest of us are of hearing almost daily that the victims of burglaries have been asked, and in effect commanded, by the police not to make public the fact that they have been robbed. This is a weariness that will not cease until, in explanation of these instructions, the police give a better, and much better, reason than any they have yet offered. The much better reason may exist, but until it has been given the public is fully justified in thinking, as it does think, that the one purpose of these efforts to maintain secrecy with regard to crimes committed is that knowledge of police inefficiency may not be too widely spread or too definitely proved.

A Profit Easily Attained.

For all the many people who at one time or another have had experience in the starting and running of papers more or less like The Stars and Stripes, the financial success of that journalistic exponent of the American Expeditionary Force will be a cause of even more envy than wonder, and that is saying much. For such a paper to make any money at all in its first year has been almost unknown; for it to make $700,000 in a little more than a year—that verges on, if not into, the miraculous, and many, it is to be feared, will say that, as the age of even near-miracles is past, there must be something wrong about the claim of profits so quickly secured.

But the mystery is not very deep—no deeper than is the frequent turning by Government bookkeepers into profits of what for common folk would be deficits. The Stars and Stripes was not an amateur paper, and it was not conducted by amateurs. For its service trained newspaper men in large numbers were taken from the new armies, where they abounded, and they did their work not at the cost of the paper, but at that of the Government. They received their salaries as soldiers and nothing else—nothing else, that is, except the satisfaction of performing a fine task admirably.

It was magnificent, and it was modern war, but it was not the journalism that has to keep at least one eye on the relation of income to outgo.

To Ignore Is Not the Remedy.

Unreasonable criticism of the effort made by the Board of Education to find out what the pupils in the public schools know about Bolshevism continues to be made, the fiercest of it, naturally, coming from the Teachers' Union. There is at least excuse, however, for asking a question suggested by a Times correspondent—the question whether it is not as important to find out how many of the pupils know nothing about Bolshevism, and why, if there are any of them, they have been left in ignorance of a subject so important.

It is true that the remedy for Bolshevist propaganda in the schools is not the taking of measures to prevent any discussion of Bolshevist doctrines, practices, and consequences. The teachers have a positive as well as a negative duty, and the danger is not that the pupils hear about the Bolsheviki, but that they either hear what is false or nothing at all. The two perils are about equal, probably, and the Board of Education should see to it that both are met. That there will be propaganda in some form is certain; there should be counter-propaganda, also.

A GREAT MEDICAL CENTRE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Today there is an opportunity, unique in the history of civilization, for the establishment in New York of a great medical school. Enemies far worse than the highly organized and efficient German Army menace the foundations of society. The deplorable conditions in Europe have increased the danger from epidemics from physical diseases. Even more insidious and more destructive than the ravages of a pestilence is the disorganising influence of the various forms of nervousness and emotional instability which are sweeping over the world. Today the rapid spread of functional, mental, and nervous disorders has reached alarming proportions.

In order to make a successful attack upon these hostile forces there should be one great medical school in New York. Under the present conditions energy is dissipated, and inadequate opportunities are provided for training both medical students and physicians as the result of the short-sighted policy of trying to maintain several second-rate schools.

The first step essential in preparing a plan for a great medical school is to consult the younger men actually engaged in research, and to find out what they need in the way of hospital accommodations and laboratory facilities to make their work effective. Unfortunately we have many illustrations in this country of the demoralizing effect of putting educational institutions literally in charge of the architect, with the result that brains often have to be compressed to fit the building plan.

Another difficulty in the way of organizing a great medical school is the tendency to attach too much importance to local opinion. The conception of a school of medicine to be adequate to solve some of the great problems affecting the physical and mental welfare of humanity must be at least national in its scope, and this calls for not only the advice but the membership in the Faculty of representative scientific men from different parts of the country during the period of development.

The ultimate success of the school depends upon the early recognition of the truth that it is much easier to find the money than the brains to carry the plan into execution.

There can be no surer method of measuring the intelligence and determination of this nation to prepare adequate defenses against the real enemies of mankind than is revealed in the effort made to make New York the medical centre of the world.

STEWART PATON.
New York, June 18, 1919.

IT HAPPENS ABOUT THIS TIME.

I'd like to sit in an easy chair
On the porch of some bungalow,
Covered with strands of green woodbine,
As the breezes softly blow,
And list to the song of the birds all day,
In the apple-trees near by,
The hum of the bees as they kiss the flowers,
And the whip-poor-will's sad cry.

I'd like to sit there the Summer long,
And rest, and read, and plan,
Far away from the city's rush
Which takes the best from man
And gives so little in return,
Of pleasure, and life, and gold—
Just sit and rock in my easy chair
Till the days again grow cold.

I'm tired of the struggle and humdrum life
That goes on, day by day,
So tonigh. I'll pack my old suitcase,
Tomorrow I'll go away.
But amid the joy this freedom brings
There comes a pang of pain.
The time is short that I'm far away—
Two weeks, and I'm back again!

SOUTH SLAV COMPLAINTS.

Charge Forceable Italianization in the Occupied Districts.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

According to news coming through Switzerland the Italian methods of forceful Italianization in the occupied provinces of Istria, Gorizia, and Trieste and adjoining part of Carniola are embittering the population of these provinces, which are compactly Slav with the exception of the coast towns on the western Adriatic shore. Only the mailed fist of the army of occupation can prevent a natural reaction.

Slav leaders, attorneys, teachers, and priests are deported and confined in Italy. The Slav municipalities have been dissolved, and in their stead Italian officials have been appointed, who, as "representatives" of the communities, are very busy sending broadcast addresses of loyalty to Italy without even the knowledge of the people concerned. This is sufficient for the Italian press to make a big fuss about the alleged enthusiasm of the Adriatic Slavs for Italian rule. No person of common sense believes this, of course; the danger of such machinations consists only in a possible self-deceit of the Italian public opinion by minimising the gravity of racial problems which are a new experience to Italy.

Croat teachers in purely Slav towns and villages, like Medudin, Krnica, Stohjan, &c., near Pola, have been expelled and the schools Italianized. Croat children, it is stated, have even been compelled in some places by Carabinieri to attend the Italian schools.

In the occupied Carniolian districts, where there is not even one Italian and the Italian language is unknown, the population has been compelled by the Italian military authorities to deliver all Slovene books and newspapers.

What kind of fruits such Prussian methods will bear everybody can easily understand.

JUGOSLAV INFORMATION BUREAU,
R. F. HLACHA.
New York, June 18, 1919.

Serbia's Flume Claims.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Regarding Mr. Bottaro's letter on Serbia and Italy published in your today's issue, allow me to say only a few words here.

When the true, complete and authentic history of the present war is written and all the facts, secret as well as public, are brought out, the world will be better able to judge what each particular nation has done in the present great war. Therefore the writer will for the present time say nothing about the part his country has played.

But regarding the help, assistance, or the "saving" of my country, Serbia, as Mr. Bottaro expresses it, during the Albanian retreat. This is the most tragic episode in the whole war and one that is most touching to every Serbian's heart, for this "saving" of Serbia cost her, according to the official records, not less than 77,278 missing men who have never been heard from, besides the lives of thousands and thousands of weak and suffering women and children, who will never see their dear fatherland again.

But if some assistance was really rendered to my brothers at that time, and my country "saved," as Mr. Bottaro claims, is that a reason, or does this circumstance give Italy any right to try to strangle my country this time? For trying to take from Jugoslavia Fiume is tantamount to trying to strangle her, to kill her every nerve, to bury her alive.

And is this an act of justice, fair play, sympathy or consideration?

Even if Italy really had any constructive right to Fiume, which she has not, still Fiume should be given to the nation which has, according to universal recognition, borne proportionally the largest burden in the present war, which was a question of death or life for her.

But Italy will not give in. She has brushed aside every fair and honest suggestion; even the judgment of the impartial American delegation at the Peace Conference she will not recognize, and like Shylock in the memorable Shakespeare play, she insists on her pound of flesh from the Jugoslav body.

And let her have it! Only, she should never forget that justice, sooner or later, comes to assert itself, and in tearing the Jugoslav body this time, let her always bear in mind the destiny that finally overcame perpetrators of international injustices and crimes in the past. And as for Serbia, I will conclude with these words by Helen Lea Reed:

Serbia, thy soul shall live for ever,
Serbia, undaunted, is immortal.

PRESIDENT AND SENATE.

Showing That It Is Impossible to Please Everybody.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The exhibition of jealousy, narrow-mindedness, and stupidity that is now making by the Senate of the United States is a spectacle for gods and men. Here we have a President whose patient, untiring, and laborious effort for six months for ten hours a day has been devoted to trying to unravel the terrific tangle of European affairs, who has been acclaimed the world over (outside the Capitol at Washington) as the greatest statesman of his time, and who yet can receive nothing from one branch of his own Government but misconstruction, abuse, and opposition. Who would be an American statesman after this? one must ask.

Instead of criticising Mr. Wilson, those political pigmies should be thankful that they have a chief from whom they can learn something, and whom they should back up to the utmost of their ability in his tremendous task, instead of thwarting him at every turn, and thus delaying the peace for which the world longs, and thus playing directly into the hands of that infamous German Government whose delight at our Congressional wranglings must be unbounded. One is tempted to quote the Psalmist's apostrophe and cry:

"O ye fools! When will ye understand?"

When a man enters the hades of the White House as its chief he should remember Danter's injunction, "All ye who enter here, leave hope behind!"

But through it all he goes steadfastly on, making no sign; and probably there are not half a dozen persons who know what he thinks of the

"Long-necked geese of the world
Who are ever hissing dispraise."

Saddest of all is the spectacle shown by the members of the Woman Suffrage Party, who have rewarded his advocacy of the Federal amendment with absolute ingratitude. For I have yet to see in any of the many periodicals that I have scanned the least approach to an acknowledgment of his kindness.

The Next Drive.

We have had Salvation Army Week and Boy Scout Week. Am I going too far when I suggest that we now celebrate Ladies' Week, during which weary women and girls might be allowed to occupy the seats in the subway while the men stand? MULLER.

THE TREATY IN THE SENATE.

Objections Raised to Various Criticisms Made Against the League Covenant.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It seems to me it is high time for us poor mortals, and incidentally voters, to raise our voices in holy protest against a Senate of the United States of which a number of the members, perhaps a majority, are clamoring to kill the whole "League of Nations" scheme, which is not yet entirely formulated in Paris, and at the same time the Peace Treaty with Germany. This treaty of peace with Germany, while it is a momentous act, one which, if it were not overshadowed by the still more momentous formulation of the League of Nations, would hold mankind breathless until it is signed and for many a day afterward, fades into proper insignificance beside its protecting brother, the League of Nations.

But what about these rumblings in our Senate in condemnation of what we know about the League of Nations? Is it all partisan politics? Does Mr. Knox mean exactly what he says when he holds that it is against our Constitution to enact a piece of legislation at this time, a reasonable parallel to which was enacted under his own sanction in the Roosevelt Administration? Yet Mr. Knox is no mean statesman. His original criticism of the first draft of the League scheme was masterly. It was, along with Mr. Root's criticism, the best and most constructive criticism we had. It contributed largely in bringing the League to its present form. And what does Mr. Root say? We, in this country, have come to look up to him as a great seer, a great final judge. Let him speak before it is too late. Is it necessary that every point in the Constitution of such a League shall satisfy us all before we touch it? Did every point in the Constitution of the United States satisfy all the signers? Yet they signed it, and we who know it love it.

Under Mr. Wilson's benign influence a new day is dawning. A new day of peace on earth, good-will toward men. Are we, one hundred and odd million of us in this country, to sit idly down and see a few score Senators turn the day back to night? If the constitution of the League is turned down in Washington, will the powers of the world ever come together again? If they will, when, and how? The less faith we as a nation have in the brotherhood of other nations, the surer is any league to fail. Is it not a fact that the objections of all the objectors are based on a lack of faith?

Amend the League after it is made, if necessary, and rest assured that, if an injustice is done by it, it can and will be amended. But, Senators, ratify it as it comes to you.

FLETCHER COLLINS.
Pittsburgh, June 16, 1919.

Source of Opposition.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It should be iterated and reiterated, that the man who runs may read, that the fundamental principle of the League covenant is not, as is still thought by many, the creation of a super-State, but the meeting together at stated times of equal sovereign States for the purpose of discussing and if possible agreeing on matters of common interest, some of them defined in the League covenant, but none of them binding any member State to any definite action except with its assent as a member of the Council or body of delegates, and except as it is specifically restricted by specific covenants, notably the covenant against aggressive war. The average man does not read the analytical articles that have been published. If he can be made to grasp this basic proposition, much of the misunderstanding and opposition to the covenant would, I believe, disappear.

Article X.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A dangerous misconception has existed from the start in the minds of many Americans as to what is involved in Article X. of the covenant of the League of Nations, to which article, Senator Johnson says: "It is unthinkable that any American can subscribe."

The article says: "The members of the League undertake to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and political independence of all members of the League. In case of any such aggression the Council shall advise on the means by which this obligation shall be fulfilled."

This means simply and solely that external aggression must end. It does not mean that boundary lines existing today or existing whenever the aggression occurs must be maintained. Nothing exists in the covenant which provides for the maintenance of the status quo. The framers of the covenant had no such absurd notion that a growing, constantly changing world should be rigidly preserved as it exists when the treaty is signed. There are numerous ways in which changes can be made without aggression, by purchase, interchange or some kind of amicable arrangement, especially if preceded by removal of economic barriers. When Senator Johnson tragically asks, "Are ye ready, Americans, to send your sons and your son's sons to maintain and preserve for all time the present government of the little nations that we are setting up in all Europe?" he is conjuring up a ludicrous proposal never in the minds of the framers of the covenant.

Radicals and reactionaries alike have stumbled over this plain statement, and some of them wickedly, some of them ignorantly, read into it what is not there. Enormous consequences depend upon the immediate rectifying of this gross misunderstanding as to the article which is the backbone of the whole covenant. LUCIA AMES MEAD.

IS ENGLAND TO BLAME?

An Englishman's Questions for Americans on the Irish Problem.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As an English visitor to your country I feel it is very bad taste to interfere in any way in the domestic affairs of a great and friendly nation whose hospitality I am at the moment enjoying, but when I read so many untrue statements in the press, apparently from uninformed writers, assailing the honor of my country, I feel I need no apology to your readers for endeavoring to give them a small part of the English viewpoint of this momentous question.

I read a few days ago—not in THE NEW YORK TIMES—a fearful list of atrocities alleged against England, which if they were true would indeed relegate my country back to barbarism, but, thank God, they are not true.

Unfortunately, the English character is such that we are slow to move, and we stand, perhaps, far too much indignity before we assert our rights, and frequently because no official action is taken to refute malicious charges the uninformed take it for granted that the charges are true.

Ireland under British rule is just as free as any other country in the world; we have laws for lawbreakers, exactly as you have in America; in fact, according to many Irish arguments, you have no right to prosecute your own bomb plotters and agitators against organized government if the Irish arguments used against England are correct.

Now with regard to the growing agitation in this country, official and otherwise, I make no comment, only to put to your readers a very pointed question:

What would be thought of England if we English commenced to tell the American people what they ought to do with the Philippines?

The British Government or people need have no fear of any investigation, American or otherwise, if it is impartial and unbiased; every thinking Englishman would be the first to welcome any legitimate inquiry, and if such inquiry could be held it is a million to one the result would be in favor of England.

Now, may I be allowed to put forward the only Irish point in the whole of the so-called Irish question before dealing with the English aspect of the controversy?

It should be well known, but for the benefit of the uninformed it must be restated, that there are in the north of Ireland five great counties, generally referred to as Ulster; the people of these counties represent the major part of the industry, wealth, and intelligence of Ireland; these people have a deep-rooted aversion to any attempt being made to force them to live under an Irish Government; they only wish to remain united with the British Empire and live under the British flag, and to a man they have sworn by a death vow that they will never be separated, but that they will fight to the death before they will submit to an Irish Government.

This is the crux of the Irish question, but is England in any way to blame for this condition? Yet the people in the south of Ireland would have an English Government force these loyal people to their death. Should England do that?

The natural solution would be to separate the country—allow the south of Ireland to have its own Government while allowing the north to remain in the United Kingdom. This solution has been repeatedly offered to the Irish Party, and no Englishman would object, but nothing short of forcing these loyal Ulstermen to live under an Irish Government will satisfy the Irish Party. This is the Irish problem, but is England to blame?

Now let me explain the great objection from the English point of view.

It is an incontrovertible fact that the resources of Ireland could not support an Irish Government for a longer period than six months, but to get over this difficulty the Irish Party quietly expect the English taxpayer to hand over every year from thirty to fifty million sterling to bolster up an otherwise bankrupt Government.

Now, has the already overburdened English taxpayer to have no say in this matter?

This is the sum total of the Irish question from an English point of view. No right-thinking Englishman would for a moment deny the Irish the right to govern themselves in their own way, but why should the English have to pay them to do it?

Premier Lloyd George did the greatest service to Ireland when he proposed the Irish Convention. He pointed out that the Irish Party had never suggested one ounce of constructive criticism, that England had never been able to suggest anything acceptable; therefore it was up to Ireland to have their own conference, suggest their own method, and work out their own salvation.

The Irishmen met; they signally failed to agree. Is England to blame for that? ENGLISHMAN.

EMPLOYED PROFESSIONALS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Compensation of employed professionals—engineers, chemists, physicists, doctors, and teachers—is being widely discussed. A real difficulty and a real danger are beginning to be perceived. Endeavors are being made to solve the problems. Organized labor has been so successful in forcing from Government and industry greatly increased pay that salaried men and women of many vocations are being strongly tempted to unite in some way with the American Federation of Labor.

A reasonable competence must be assured to professional men and women, including scientists and teachers, or our country will not long maintain its present eminence in any line, much less advance.

Of the importance of the services of its professional engineers in war, in industry, and in public works the nation has had unusual opportunities for learning during these past few years. Heretofore engineers have organized almost solely for consideration of technical subjects. Two years ago the Engineering Council was created by the four great national societies of civil, mining, mechanical, and electrical engineers to deal with questions of general interest to engineers and the public as the representative organization for the 200,000 professional engineers of the United States. In the performance of its functions during the war and since the armistice the Engineering Council has rendered services to the nation, the community, and the profession. Among the problems considered compensation, employment, and standing of engineers in governmental and corporate employment have received much active attention. During the war the names of 4,000 engineers, carefully selected, were furnished to the Army, Navy, and other departments for a great variety of technical services. In January, 1919, when the City of New York without notice forced 350 of its subway construction engineers out of employment, the Engineering Council held a public hearing at the request of the Chairman and Chief Engineer of the Public Service Commission and of a number of engineering societies. Facts brought out were submitted to the City Government, the Governor, and many civic organizations. Other steps were taken to aid the reinstatement of these engineers for the public interest and safety. Partial success was achieved.

The Engineering Council also has a committee actively engaged upon the study and promotion of the proper classification and compensation of engineers. It is working on three sections, dealing with engineers in employment of (1) Federal Government, (2) the railroad system, (3) municipal and State Governments. J. PARKE CHANNING,
Chairman Engineering Council.

HUGHES AND SMITH ASSAIL BOLSHEVISM

Governor and Ex-Governor Are Speakers at Cornell's Semi-Centennial.

FREEDOM'S FIGHT NOT WON

Justice Hughes Calls for Reign of Law Among Nations—Cornell Ace Thrills 5,000 in Stadium.

ITHACA, N. Y., June 20.—Five thousand alumni and friends of Cornell attended commemorative exercises, marking the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Cornell University by Ezra Cornell, held this morning at Schoellkopf Field, the university stadium. The speakers included Governor Alfred E. Smith, former Governor and former Justice Charles E. Hughes, Chief Judge Frank H. Hiscock of the Court of Appeals, and President Jacob Gould Schurman. The exercises were opened with the firing of a salute of fifty guns by the university's field artillery unit.

The guests were thrilled with a spectacular aerial exhibition by Major James A. Meissner, '18, of Brooklyn, Cornell's flying ace, who executed loops and turns over the heads of a huge crowd in the stadium while the opening exercises were in progress. The city was extensively decorated for the semi-centennial events, which will end Monday with the annual commencement.

In his address, Governor Smith made a powerful plea against allowing the influence of Bolshevism to spread in New York State, and said nothing would be left undone to prevent a spread of the radical ideas which, he declared, were threatening the very foundation of the State. The radicals, he said, could have their choice—"education or the nightstick." He paid a tribute to the universities for bringing helpful individualists to the light.

"General O'Ryan has told me," Governor Smith said, "that the outstanding characteristic of the American soldier in France was that of individual intelligence. It is against a force in the State which is aiming at property and property rights, and even at the State itself, that this intelligence must work. There are two things that can be done with these ultra-radicals, but we would like to educate them and show them what the United States really means. But we may have to suppress them, and that will be the work of the State, in which it will not hesitate. Never in the past has there been such a need for education, and for Cornell."

Address of Ex-Justice Hughes.

Former Justice Hughes began his address by saying that this country emerged from the war "with many questions and few answers." He said, in part:

"The arms of the victorious nations representing the sentiment of liberty and the conscience of civilization have destroyed autocracy, but the difficulties of democracy have been multiplied. The great war brought to young manhood the most severe test.

"No conscription law could create courage or conscience or the leadership by which the potency of the hosts of democracy could be converted into a conquering army. The young men of America met this test from every walk of life.

"We shall miss one of the great lessons of the war if we fail to recognize that, with willingness to follow or to lead as the authority representing the power and decision of the nation should determine, the men trained in our colleges and universities went forth to battle for their country as simply and devotedly as brave men have ever risked their lives in the cause of liberty. They furnished a pattern of what the ideal citizens of democracy should be.

War Found Our Boys Unprepared.

"The American boy, like his nation, was not as well prepared as he might have been. It is true that he soon made amends by his keenness and alertness, but the defect should not go unremedied.

"With the world in ferment, we are appraising the steadying and conserving influences, and we look to the university for something more than the discharge of its primary and distinctive function in instruction. What aid may we expect to counteract the destructive aims of those who would wreck free government and enthrone the tyranny of class hatred?

"Our victory has preserved the opportunity to have democracy. But it remains for the testing days of peace to determine whether democracy itself can be preserved.

"Free speech is essential to a republic, but free speech, without the insistent demand by the community for fair speech, is the opportunity of rogues and demagogues.

"It has been said that our colleges and universities are breeding centres of dangerous doctrines and fomenters of unrest. Such extravagant assertions and unwarranted generalizations are most mischievous.

Progress by Ballots, Not by Bombs.

"But there can be no progress unless there is respect for the processes of orderly government. Against all those who counsel violence and anarchy, we stand united and resolute. Whatever our differences, we propose that they shall be determined by discussion and the ballot box and not by bombs.

"To the would-be destroyer of society, to every one who seeks to produce a reign of terror, to all the apostles of revolution, there is but one answer, and that is that they will be treated as a pestilence and their activities ended as swiftly as the power and processes of the nation will permit. We shall not for a moment tolerate those who attempt the life of the republic.

"The battle for free government is never completely won. It is an age-long struggle against foes without and more insidious and dangerous foes within. Now, with tyrants overthrown, and autocracy destroyed in its last citadel, we must fight anew.

"Democracy demands loyal acceptance of the determinations of the majority, but the majority to which it requires obedience is that of free citizens of equal political privilege.

"Democracy is the antithesis of class rule. It demands respect for its own institutions, as such. If they function imperfectly, strive for their improvement.

"They who would bring into contempt the essential tribunals of justice, who sow the seeds of scorn for the processes through which alone men can substitute law and order for brutishness and violence, are traitors to democracy itself and bring a curse upon their own house.

Hughes Sees United Nation.

"The war has brought us a fine sense of unity, but it may easily be impaired. The new opportunities of emancipated races have naturally led to the development among us of an intense race feeling manifested by organized racial groups. There is more need than ever for the gospel of Americanism which unites those of all races and creeds in a supreme love of country.

"The strong patriotic feeling heightened by the war should become the motive power of national endeavor, which should bring us into helpful co-operation for the reconstruction of a stricken world without injury to any of our national interests. We should be a people of one language and of one allegiance, unwilling to impair our strength, but glad to use it generously in the advancement and defense of civilization.

"As we must insist on justice at home, so our paramount international concern is not in organs expressing a temporary political expediency, but in the establishment of international justice—in agreement upon principles of international conduct and in provision for tribunals through which the interests of peace may be made secure under the reign of law.

"It is not the function of our universities to train partisans or propagandists, to support this or that political theory or foreign policy, but to send out men thoroughly trained, the foes of every sort of oppression, who know the significance of the victories that have been won, and who are loyal in every word and act to the institutions of freedom which have blessed them with opportunity."

Schurman and Hiscock Speak.

Speeches tracing the development of Cornell during the last half century were made by President Schurman and Judge Hiscock.

"We realize," said Judge Hiscock, "that the war was won not more by the heroic bravery of the men in the fighting line than by the labors of the engineer, the chemist, and the farmer. Without the others, neither could have been victorious. As the result of this experience, naturally, we may expect that the demand for instruction in scientific and vocational lines will increase. But this demand will never be allowed to crowd out that instruction and those influences which will develop good citizenship and a sane conception of democracy and representative Government.

"Germany has at once furnished us a lesson and a warning. The scientific training which she imposed upon her people gave them a technical excellence and superiority, but she did not teach her students the fundamentals of proper political and ethical conduct."

In his address, President Schurman said:

"The half century that marks the life of Cornell University has not only been a period of great, bloody and destructive wars. It has been characterized by amazing improvements in all the arts, conveniences, and comforts of life; it has witnessed the invention of new and quite miraculous methods of production, transportation, and communication; it has seen a mighty expansion of trade and commerce, both domestic and foreign; it has beheld a rapid and extensive multiplication of international contacts and intercourse, commercial and social alike; and it has felt the new throb of a common life pulsating among all the peoples that dwell on the face of the globe, for the great currents of the intellectual and material civilization of the modern world sweep even the remotest shores and fold every country within the circle of their wide embrace."

Professor Edward L. Nichols, retiring head of the Physics Department, was entertained at a dinner last night by the Faculty and alumni. He received a handsome silver service from his former students.

Many alumni meetings are being held as a part of the celebration. Nearly every class that has graduated from the university is represented at the reunions.

$1,000,000 GIFT TO CORNELL.

C. M. Schwab Said to be Donor of New Chemistry Building.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., June 20.—Cornell University received a generous "birthday present" in the announcement by President Schurman at a university dinner tonight that he had received funds for the erection of a new chemistry building. It is understood the gift may approximate $1,000,000.

President Schurman did not reveal the name of the donor, but the impression prevails here that he is Charles M. Schwab, the steel magnate, who is a member of the Cornell Board of Trustees.

The new chemistry building will replace Morse Hall, destroyed by fire several years ago, and will be the "finest of its kind in America," President Schurman said.

ADMIRAL BENSON RETURNS FROM PARIS

Ranking Naval Officer Has Completed Work as Adviser at Peace Conference.

WILL RESUME POST HERE

Entitled by Rank to be Chief of Operations—Says League May Reduce Armaments.

Admiral William S. Benson, the ranking officer of the navy and Chief of Operations of the Navy Department at Washington, arrived from France on the dreadnought Arkansas yesterday. Admiral Benson has been away eight months, acting as naval adviser to the American Peace Commissioners in Paris. With the four-starred pennant of Admiral Benson flying from her main truck, the Arkansas passed Quarantine early yesterday morning.

The dreadnought was escorted by the destroyers Nicholson, O'Brien, Dixon, and Winslow, which had met her 150 miles east of Sandy Hook. As the Arkansas passed the superdreadnought Pennsylvania, flagship of Admiral Mayo, the retiring Commander-in-Chief of the Atlantic Fleet, that vessel fired the Admiral's salute of seventeen guns, while officers and men stood at attention along the rails. The Arkansas anchored in the Hudson off 110th Street.

Shortly after the Arkansas reached her anchorage Admiral Mayo, with Admiral Rodman, who is to proceed to the Pacific as Commander-in-Chief of the new Pacific Fleet, and the division and ship commanders of the fleet now in the Hudson called on Admiral Benson.

Tells of Work Abroad.

"I am getting home after eight months and two days' absence in Europe," said Admiral Benson. "I went over in October of last year with Colonel House and was in time to aid in fixing the armistice terms signed by the Germans on Nov. 11 last. After that I was the naval adviser to the American Commissioners. The most interesting subjects of news I can think of are the League of Nations and naval aviation. If the League of Nations becomes a fact it will automatically reduce armaments, but you must emphasize the 'if.' That is about all that I can say about the League of Nations or the future policies of the American or other navies of the world. I firmly believe, however, that Mr. Wilson's ideas and plans can be brought to fruition. But keep in mind that I was in Paris as naval adviser, and things that touch on the political are out of my realm. Along political lines I do not wish to make any statements.

"As for naval aviation, that is a branch of the service that is certain to play an important part in any future war. I believe that we should go ahead developing the aviation arm of the navy seriously and enthusiastically. The navy's policy regarding aviation is to follow lines of proved knowledge, without being spectacular, and always keeping at the problem in hand."

Mrs. Benson Also Returns.

Returning with Admiral Benson was Mrs. Benson, who went over on the George Washington in the President's first party. Mrs. Benson is the first woman to take a long trip on an American warship.

"There was no particular reason why I should return on a man-of-war," said Admiral Benson. "When it was arranged that I was to come on the Arkansas I made arrangements to bring Mrs. Benson with me. There are 57,000 first-class passengers in Europe trying to get home, and for this reason we brought as many with us on the Arkansas as we could. Besides Mrs. Benson, we brought sixteen army officers and nine field clerks from Brest, and would have brought more if we could have accommodated them."

Admiral and Mrs. Benson left for Washington at 8 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The War Camp Community Service has made elaborate plans for the entertainment of the sailors with the ships of the Atlantic Fleet detachment now anchored in the North River. Tickets have been issued to every sailor for Steeplechase Park at Coney Island. Sailors will be taken about the city at the rate of 400 a day in the War Camp Community Service sight-seeing buses, and tickets for Broadway shows will be distributed at the rate of 250 a night. Special entertainments for the sailors will be given on the Madison Square Garden roof.

TO OFFER SPECIAL PRAYER.

Late Bishop Greer on Deathbed Approved Supplication.

In every Episcopal Church throughout the Diocese of New York tomorrow there will be delivered a prayer, approval and sanction of which was the last official act of the late Bishop David H. Greer, for the success of the Every Name Canvass recently launched by the Church. Bishop Greer entered enthusiastically into the campaign, the committee for the direction of which, including some of the most prominent business and professional men of New York, was appointed by him. In furtherance of the cause, he delegated Suffragan Bishop Charles Sumner Burch, to prepare a prayer which would be especially adapted to the movement. This prayer was approved by Bishop Greer as he lay on what proved to be his death bed in St. Luke's Hospital. The prayer is as follows:

"Stir up, we beseech Thee, Almighty God, the wills of Thy people throughout this diocese, that they may, with a spirit of true consecration, enter upon the united effort through the Every Name Campaign, to lengthen the cords and strengthen the stakes of Thy Kingdom here at home and throughout the world. Grant to the workers in full measure the help of Thy Holy Spirit; fire their hearts with purpose and zeal; sustain the efforts of Bishops and other Clergy and all the devoted men and women who shall engage in this worthy task, that they may be filled with a more real appreciation of their true fellowship in Christ and a true apprehension of the responsibility facing them to come closer to Thee and to each other in a common venture for Christ and His Church. We ask all in the name of Him who went about doing good to all men. Amen!"

FILE MRS. GREER'S WILL.

Provisions Similar to Those Made by the Late Bishop.

The will of Mrs. Caroline Greer, who died on June 17, a month after the death of her husband, Bishop David H. Greer, was filed for probate yesterday. The document shows that Mrs. Greer and her husband made mutual wills, under which she was to have his estate for life if he died before her, and he was to be the beneficiary if she predeceased him.

A Daughter to Mme. Teiusanu.

BURLESON ANSWERS GALLIVAN ATTACK

Hints That Killing of Pneumatic Tube Service Contract Is Cause of Enmity.

REPRESENTATIVE REPLIES

Says Burleson's Response Shows Him "More Craven Coward Than I Described Him in My Speech."

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Postmaster General Burleson sent a letter today to Representative James P. Buchanan, in which he said that the attack made upon him yesterday by Representative Gallivan of Massachusetts might have been based upon the fact that he (Burleson) was responsible for the discontinuance of the pneumatic tube service. The letter read, in part:

"In reply to your telephone inquiry as to the reason for the hostile feeling of the gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. Gallivan, toward the Postal Service, and particularly toward the Postmaster General, I beg leave to direct your attention to the fact that upon my recommendation the pneumatic tube service has been discontinued.

"For years this useless appliance was an incubus on the Postal Service, occasioning waste of millions of dollars of postal revenue. Every postal expert now agrees that the prediction of the late Mr. Justice Moody, made when he was a member of the House and at the time this bankrupt commercial concern was unloaded on the department, that it would 'ultimately prove a stain on the Postal Service' has been thoroughly verified. Representative Moody then stated that a prominent member of Congress, pending the adoption of this tube service by the Government, had been offered as a gift stock in this concern, and that the scheme to fasten it on the Postal Service had been 'conceived in sin and born of iniquity.'

"As stated above, on my recommendation this stain on the Postal Service was removed by the last Congress.

"I feel honored by the disapprobation of such a man. I would not ask you to waste your time in making reply to any statement he might make."

Mr. Burleson inclosed a memorandum in which it was stated that on January 15, 1917, a list of the stockholders of the American Pneumatic Service Company on June 10, 1916, was printed in the Record.

"It shows," the memorandum continues, "among the list of stockholders James A. Gallivan, address House Office Building, Washington D. C., and that he owned eighty shares."

Representative Gallivan in a statement tonight referred to the Postmaster General's reply as a "lying suggestion that I ever owned stock in any company which ever had any legislation before Congress when that legislation was up for consideration." He said Mr. Burleson's response "shows that he is even a more craven coward than I described him in my speech."

Engaged to Lieut. D. G. Morrison, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Clucker of Flushing, L. I., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Helen Clucker, to Lieutenant David G. Morrison, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Morrison, also of Flushing. Lieutenant Morrison has just returned after twenty months' service as Battalion Adjutant of the 318th Infantry of the 80th Division.

A Son to Mrs. Charles G. West, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. West, Jr., of Westbury, L. I., are being congratulated upon the birth of a son on Thursday at their Westbury home, Whitegate. It is their first son and third child. Mrs. West was Miss Madelaine Horne, a daughter of Mrs. E. M. Horne of New York Pittsburgh and Southampton.

'BIG BILL' DEVERY DIES OF APOPLEXY

nent writ of prohibition in the courts restraining the board from trying him on the ground that the board was not bi-partisan.

He continued then in his old position until Jan. 7, 1898, when he was made an Inspector. This was within a week after a new board had taken office. For a month and a week he was detailed in the Borough of Brooklyn. On Feb. 14 he was appointed Deputy Chief of Police and assigned to the Borough of the Bronx. A few weeks later his assignment was changed to Manhattan.

On May 2[illegible] 1898, he was made Acting Chief of Police, and it is said that his first official act was to send out a notice to all boroughs announcing the retirement of Chief McCullagh and his own appointment. This was the short statement he made of the matter at the time:

"I have nothing to say now. I may say something later. I have just been notified of my appointment as Chief and I am going ahead to perform my duties."

Made Deputy Police Commissioner.

Mayor Van Wyck, on Feb. 2, 1901, dubbed him "the best Chief of Police New York ever had." Just twenty days later Devery was removed from office by act of the Legislature, passed over the Mayor's veto. This act abolished the position of Chief of Police.

On the same day he was removed as Chief of Police, he was appointed Deputy Police Commissioner by Police Commissioner Murphy. On Sept. 17, of that year, he was arrested on a warrant of Justice Jerome on charges of neglect of duty and oppression. He was found not guilty and discharged on Dec. 26, of the same year. This office he held for a short time.

Devery always claimed that he should have been retired on a pension, and after a lapse of ten years a bill was got through the Assembly granting to him a pension of $3,000 a year. The bill provided that he would receive nine years' accumulation. Mayor Gaynor vetoed the bill July 11, 1911, with this brief indorsement:

"The beneficiary of this bill lost his office as Chief of Police by legislation in 1901. His claim that he should be pensioned may have had some equity at that time, but he has hatched equity for more than ten years, and it has become stale."

His Characteristic Reply to Gaynor.

Devery, who was then running a real estate office in Far Rockaway, made the following statement:

"In view of the fact that Mayor Gaynor seen fit to veto my pension bill causes me no annoyance whatever, but both Houses of the Legislature put the Mayor in a position to right a wrong, which he failed to do. Nevertheless I thank the Mayor for the courtesy he extended to me in permitting me to call on him and state my case.

"I also thank the members of both Houses of the Legislature (Senate and Assembly) for the honor they conferred on me in passing the bill granting me a pension."

Later in talking with a reporter for THE TIMES he said:

"After waitin' nine years for a Democratic Legislature to set you right, an' then to have a Democratic Mayor turn you down! It don't seem right. For more'n twenty years I paid in my little 2 per cent. of my salary every month as Captain an' Lieutenant, an' as everything from patrolman to Chief. I got somethin' comin' to me, an' I'm going to get it. If the State courts won't give me me rights, I guess the United States Courts will. This thing ain't through yet by a whole lot."

Turning again to the Mayor's memorandum, he said: "'Stale!' Stale! Well, the Mayor may know more of them equity things than me. If I had equity ten years ago, it looks to me as if I had it now. There ain't no time set when equity becomes outlawed, so far as I ever heard. Perhaps I ain't so stale as some people may think I am. We'll see about that later on."

Under the emblem of the pump, Devery ran for Mayor of New York City in 1903 as an independent candidate. When he received only a few more than 2,200 votes out of 1,000 election districts in this city in the November election he declared that he was through with politics for all time. He declared there was a deal between Tammany and the Republicans to defeat him.

When asked in 1913 about the report that he was a candidate for postmaster of Far Rockaway, he said:

"I am not a candidate for postmaster of Far Rockaway. Let me see, that job pays $3,100 a year, if I am not mistaken. Now, kindly, get this down right: When it comes to handing out patronage, I don't want a ham sandwich. Take it from me, son, there is indeed nothing in that report. The story about me is like an airship that went up in the air and never came down. It must have gone clean to St. Petersville."

Two years later an effort was made to get him to run for Mayor of Far Rockaway, and in remarking that he wasn't eligible because one has to vote there for five consecutive years, he said:

"What they ought to do is to make me Chief of the New York Police Department again, pro, con or otherwise. There's no need for me to be on this extended vacation. I've got a gold shield that must have cost $100, and I'm all ready to jump in and clean the town up.

"I was never fired and never was brought up on charges. My office was just legislated out of existence. I'm Chief of Police of New York yet, only they ain't no such office any more."

His Philosophy of Life.

Devery's philosophy of success in life was summed as follows: "Take success in life as 100 per cent," he said. "My idea is that 75 per cent. of it is energy, 20 per cent. knowing how, and 10 per cent. luck. But luck ain't goin' to walk in and shake hands with any man."

When he was asked what he thought of the then Police Commissioner Woods, the former Chief said:

"Mr. Woods—he's a classy gentleman in every shape and form. If he had a man to handle the force for him, a man who pounded the pavement for twenty-four years, for instance, a uniformed man to handle the uniformed force, and he handled the executive and financial matters, he would be in clover, wouldn't he?

"Take a banker, broker, Admiral, General, Colonel, Captain, or any other classy gentleman, and put him in charge of that quasi-body of wild Indians which is the New York police force, and them quasi-Indians will pull wool over his eyes.

"Take McAdoo, General Greene, Partridge, and they was all fine gentlemen, but this bein' a quasi-military body, the police force of which we are speakin,' it is entirely different from a military body. Military bodies follow orders. Policemen need discretion.

"Classy gentleman as he is, if Mr. Woods now should have a heavy homicide break at night he would have to get his lieutenants and other officers around him for advice. What a heavy homicide needs is prompt action."

Ex-Chief Devery was very successful in his real estate undertakings and he was considered wealthy. On Feb. 18, 1902, he bought real estate through his agent, J. J. Byrne, valued at $377,800. In March of the same year he paid off a mortgage of $261,800.

He was proposed for membership in the Democratic Club by Croker on Sept. 26, 1901, and a year later he was elected Tammany leader in the Eleventh District.

His Remarks on His New Abode.

New York's "best chief" moved in the latter part of December, 1907, to his new $40,000 mansion at 574 West End Avenue, and had been at his new home only a week when he gave expression to some well-defined views he held relative to the section. He termed himself "house broke." He still thought of the people down in Twenty-eighth Street. "The people I have been looking after down there know where to find me," he said. "I've moved into a new home, but I'm the same Devery. I'm not going to lose my interest in the people who stood by me when I bought a reserved seat in the political game and Tammany Hall made me sit in the gallery.

"There is one thing I have noticed about this neighborhood that is different from my old camp down in Twenty-eighth Street," he continued. "There wasn't any race suicide down there. Most of the people were poor in money, but they were rich in kids. It was a stingy wife that didn't present her husband with half a dozen. Up around here there are not so many children and a whole lot more dogs. I never knew there were so many breeds of dogs as you can see along West End Avenue and on Riverside Drive." The former Chief then told of how they dressed the dogs in that neighborhood and declared that it made him "sore" to see a dog with sealskin pants on and to think of some boys he knew down on the west side who wouldn't have had any pants at all if their father hadn't thrown a pair into the discard once in a while because the seat was worn out.

One of the last times that the former Police Chief figured in the news of the city was in April, 1917, when he saved ten families from a burning tenement house at 238 West Thirtieth Street, the house being part of the real estate holdings of Devery. He was silent on his rescue work when questioned, but added: "I wish you'd say for me I'm mighty proud that the United States is waking up and going after Germany at last. We ought to have done it long ago."

Mr. Devery was born in this city sixty-five years ago. Surviving are his widow and two daughters, Mrs. Edward N. Frink and Mrs. Florence Oliver.

Mourned by Men of the Force.

The death of former Chief Devery was received with general regret in police circles. Announcement of the death was received at Police Headquarters, and word was flashed through all the precincts of the city to patrolmen, detectives, and officers. Expressions of regret were many.

One patrolman, who had been on a post at Twenty-eighth Street during the Devery administration, recalled how his former chief had on frequent occasions gone the rounds of the precincts, fraternizing with his men, and doing everything in his power to establish the most pleasant relations with those under his authority. The sentiment of this patrolman was echoed throughout the city by hundreds of patrolmen who had been in the department when Devery was Chief.

HAYS FINDS WEST SATISFIED

Republican Chairman Says His Party is Pleased with Congress.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Will H. Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, who has arrived in Washington after a tour of the West, expressed the opinion today that the Republicans of the country were satisfied with what the Republicans had done since they came into control of Congress.

"I found everywhere that the Republicans are virile and eager for the campaigns that confront them, whether State or municipal," he said. "Everywhere there is a spirit of dissatisfaction with the socialistic trend of the present Administration and a condemnation of its autocratic methods. It is because of this revolt against autocracy and socialism that the plain people out West are satisfied with the record that the Republican Congress is making.

"There is appreciation everywhere of the fact that the Republicans are carrying out all the promises they made in the campaign and are fulfilling all expectations."

LAUNCH BOOM FOR LOWDEN.

Chicago Republicans Put Governor Forward for Presidency.

CHICAGO, June 20.—Governor Frank O. Lowden's candidacy for the Republican nomination for President was launched at the Hamilton Club in this city today.

In order to get around the inhibition in the club's by-laws that it shall not take sides in primary contests, the leading members of the big Republican organization formed the "Hamilton Club Lowden League."

After the election of officers and much oratory extolling Lowden's availability and fitness for the job, formal resolutions were adopted, sending the message to the nation, as they put it, that the Illinois Governor is the one man on which all factions of the party can unite.

RUMANIAN GOLD STOLEN.

That about $400,000 in Rumanian gold was stolen, in addition to 20,000,000 marks in notes, from Julius Turt, in the Spandau suburb of Berlin, during the Spartacide riots in March is indicated by the following dispatch, found in the Volksstimme of Frankfort:

"BOCHUM, May 12.—Three persons went to the Reichsbank and asked to have 700,000 lei in Rumanian gold exchanged. It was brought out that this was part of the 2,000,000 lei in Rumanian gold stolen in Berlin some time ago. The three persons were arrested."

As told in a special cablegram sent to THE NEW YORK TIMES on April 28, the stolen Rumanian money was part of 30,000,000 lei brought to Germany by the German Economic Commission when Rumania was evacuated.

CELEBRATE 100 YEARS.

Series of Services at Church of the Sea and Land.

The first of a series of services that will terminate a week from Sunday, in commemoration of its one hundredth anniversary, was held last night in the Presbyterian Church of the Sea and Land, at Market and Henry Streets. The service consisted of prayers, congregational singing, and a sermon by the Rev. Carl Elmore of the Briarcliff Congregational Church. This service was in preparation for the Communion service on Sunday at which the Rev. Orrin G. Cocks, former pastor of the church, will officiate.

The centennial celebration service will take place on next Friday evening with the Rev. H. G. Mendenhall, Moderator of the Presbytery of New York, presiding. Among those expected to be present and make addresses are Governor Alfred E. Smith, the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, the Rev. THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Conditions and general forecast:

Pressure is low over the Middle and Northern Plateau and nearly normal elsewhere, although with a falling tendency. There were local thunder showers in the Plains and Gulf States, the Central Valleys, the Lower Lake, and Southern Upper Lake regions, and quite general showers in New England and the Middle Atlantic States. In the South Atlantic States and from the Rocky Mountain region westward the weather was fair.

Temperatures were high for the season over all interior districts, except the Gulf States, and they were especially high in the Plateau region and the extreme Northwest. Local thunder showers are probable Saturday in Southern New England and the Middle Atlantic States. There will be no temperature changes of consequence.

New Jersey, Delaware.—Probably local showers Sat., Sun. fair, little change in temperature.

Eastern Pennsylvania.—Unsettled Sat., probably local showers; Sun. fair, little change in temperature.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

3 A. M.	57	68	4 P. M.	65	79
6 A. M.	53	64	6 P. M.	61	79
12 M.	62	76	11 P. M.	56	66

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 72; for the corresponding date last year it was 60; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 70.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 56; at 8 P. M. it was 67. Maximum temperature, 82 degrees at 3:20 P. M.; minimum, 63 degrees at 7:20 P. M. Humidity, 90 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 95 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 30.07 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 29.97 inches.

CORRECTION

On Sunday afternoon, June 21, steamer leaves Desbrosses St. 1:40 P. M., W. 42d St. 2:00 P. M., W. 129th St. 2:30 P. M., for Bear Mountain, West Point, Newburgh and return to 42d St.

This is incorrect—it should have read:

On SATURDAY afternoon, June 21, steamer leaves Desbrosses St. 1:40 P. M., W. 42d St. 2:00 P. M., W. 129th St. 2:30 P. M., for Bear Mountain, West Point, Newburgh and return to 42d St.

SHERIFF'S SALES.

SUPREME COURT, NEW YORK COUNTY.—BANKERS TRUST COMPANY, Plaintiff, against NATIONAL SECURITIES CORPORATION, Defendant.

By virtue of a certain writ of execution to me directed and delivered, and duly issued after a judgment in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant in the above-entitled action duly made and entered in the office of the Clerk of the County of New York on the 22nd day of March, 1919, I will expose to sale at Public Vendue on the 27th day of June, 1919, at twelve o'clock noon, (standard time,) at the rotunda of the County Court House of the County of New York, in City Hall Park, in the City of New York, Borough of Manhattan:

I. All property, debts, credits and effects and all rights and shares of stock, with all interest, profits and dividends thereon or therefrom, of National Securities Corporation in the possession or under the control of Guaranty Trust Company of New York, or which may come into the possession or under the control of Guaranty Trust Company of New York, including specifically all the right, title and interest of National Securities Corporation in and to the securities and cash held by Guaranty Trust Company of New York, as Trustee under a certain Trust Agreement, dated July 1, 1914, securing Ten-Year Six Per Cent. Prior Lien Gold Notes, and the interest, profits and dividends thereon or therefrom, the right to redeem said securities and cash from the lien of said Trust Agreement, and all right, claims and demands which National Securities Corporation has or may hereafter have upon or under said Trust Agreement; the securities and cash now held by Guaranty Trust Company of New York as Trustee under said Trust Agreement being as follows:

(a)	6% Notes of Idaho Power Company, due July 1, 1924, for the aggregate principal amount of	$3,299,000.00
(b)	1,500 shares of Idaho Power Company 7% Cumulative Preferred Stock, par value	150,000.00
(c)	149,984 shares of Idaho Power Company Common Stock; par value	14,998,400.00
(d)	500 shares of the Capital Stock of Electric Investment Company; par value	50,000.00
(e)	Cash	304.42

II. All property, debts, credits and effects, and all rights and shares of stock, with all interest, profits and dividends thereon or therefrom, of National Securities Corporation in the possession or under the control of Electric Bond and Share Company, or which may come into the possession or under the control of Electric Bond and Share Company, including specifically all the right, title and interest of National Securities Corporation in and to 173 shares of preferred stock of Idaho Power Company, or the proceeds thereof, held by Electric Bond and Share Company under a certain agreement between National Securities Corporation and Electric Bond and Share Company dated November 30, 1918, and all payments made or to be made under said agreement, and all rights, claims and demands which National Securities Corporation has or may hereafter have upon or under said agreement.

III. All rights, title, interest and claim of National Securities Corporation to demand and receive from the United States Collector of Internal Revenue for the Second District of New York the sum of $218.73, with any accrued interest thereon, representing an excess payment of Federal Income Tax made by National Securities Corporation for the year 1917.

This sale is made pursuant to and in compliance with an order of the Supreme Court of the State of New York in the above entitled action entered in the office of the Clerk of the County of New York and bearing date the 16th day of May, 1919, as resettled by further order of said Court entered in the office of the Clerk of the County of New York and bearing date the 29th day of May, 1919.

Dated New York, June 20, 1919.

DAVID H. KNOTT,
Sheriff of the County of New York.
JOHN J. MURRAY, Deputy Sheriff.

Oil Bids for Navy

Bids were opened by the Navy June 17th for the delivery of approximately 8,000,000 barrels of fuel oil. The Shipping Board has in operation 14 tank steamships, of about 125,000 dead weight tons. Those under construction aggregate 737,000 tons. All require fuel oil for operation. The significant fact attached to this programme for our own Navy and government-controlled shipping is that every great naval power is committed to the same policy.

Report That Germany Accepts Peace Treaty Sends Prices Up Rapidly.

For the first time this week yesterday's stock market appeared to respond to the advices from abroad concerning the peace negotiations. The early reports that the German National Assembly had voted to accept the Peace Treaty seemed to inspire Wall Street with new enthusiasm, and, despite the subsequent tentative denials of the acceptance, the market continued to move forward, exhibiting its greatest strength and activity in the closing hour, when practically all stocks were strong, and the industrial favorites were almost sensationally so. The industrials, of course, attracted most attention and were easily the more active, but the railroad shares were in better demand and at more favorable prices than at any time in several days. All in all, it was a better rounded market than the Street has been seeing of late, and certainly the tone was all that the most rampant bull could desire.

The share turnover was far under some of the recent big trading affairs. In this respect the market looked more active than it really was, taking it on the basis of a full five-hour day. While the advance was well distributed, trading went by fits and starts, with a dull period in the middle of the day and a good deal of activity crowded into the last hour. However, the total sales were well over 1,000,000 shares, a fact which causes the present sequence of big days to equal the record of "million share days" established in the Spring of 1901, which terminated with the "May 9 panic," when the sequence ran to 44.

In the foreign exchange market nothing of consequence happened until late in the day, when bills on Paris moved upward very sharply, advancing about 13 centimes in a few minutes. The early reports of German acceptance of the Peace Treaty had brought about a remarkably strong and prompt action in stock prices, but exchanges were listless until near the close, when the quick advance in francs occurred. Sterling and lire were dull and moved within narrow ranges. Sentimentally, the signing of the treaty should help these exchanges some, but it is a question as to just how much. In some quarters it has been felt that the sentimental influence would be pronounced, while elsewhere the opinion prevailed that it would take concrete developments to move rates substantially. Of the two opinions, the latter appears the more logical, although those who insisted that the stock market had "discounted" the signing yesterday were inclined to retract.

The trade reviews of the week were couched in no uncertain terms. "Activity in demand, strength of prices and optimism as to the outlook, stand out more clearly than at any previous date since the armistice," says Bradstreet's, and Dun's Review, in commenting on the situation, says: "Commercial advices are such as to leave no doubt as to their meaning, and questionings of the genuineness of the business revival steadily diminish as concrete evidences of progress multiply." The June daily average of bank clearings, as compiled by Dun's, shows a figure of $1,288,325,000, which is $134,500,000 greater than the daily average of May, the previous high record.

The rate for call money yesterday was never above 6 per cent. for mixed loans, and at the close had fallen to 5 per cent., with the industrial quotations fractionally higher. Unless the end of the month demand develops earlier than expected, it now appears probable that next week will see no upheaval, but, at the same time, bankers are inclined to be cautious in their predictions and do not attempt to minimize the June 30 and July 1 requirements, and the part they may play in altering the call money rate.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Market Record Equaled.

With yesterday's turnover of more than 1,000,000 shares a stock market record made as far back as 1901 was equaled. There have now been forty-four consecutive million share days, the Saturday short sessions, of course, being eliminated. The present run started on April 21, and at times since then the trading has touched close to the 2,000,000-share mark. The prospect of Germany signing the Peace Treaty was a pronounced factor in yesterday's dealings. The entire list displayed strength, some of the recent favorites with the speculative following moving to new high levels. The advance was, however, orderly, without the sensational performances which have been in evidence during the recent past.

Interest Revived in the Rails.

While the industrial shares in yesterday's stock market received their full share of attention, one of the features of the day was the revival of interest in the rails, which, after a day of comparative dullness, firmed suddenly and closed with prices substantially higher. Not only were the majority of the high-priced railroad stocks in much better demand, but issues which have not been traded for several days became active and on limited transactions sold up. One instance of this sensitiveness was displayed by Colorado Southern, which on sales of fewer than 500 shares gained 3 points. St. Louis & San Francisco gained more than 2 points, Missouri Pacific closed with a net gain of 2⅛, New York Central was up ⅝ points, Reading the same, and Southern Pacific sold 1⅝ higher.

April Freight Ton Mileage.

Had it not been for the continued heavy passenger traffic on the railroads through April, the income showing for that month would have been much worse than it was, according to the Bureau of Railway News and Statistics. The bureau says the decrease in freight ton mileage for the month was 24.5 per cent., but because of the freight rate increases put in effect by Director General of Railroads McAdoo in 1918, the freight receipts showed an increase of not quite 1 per cent. over April, 1918. The bureau submits the following table of results in April for the last five years:

	Operating Revenue.*	Operating Expense.*	Income after taxes.*	Operating Ratio.

*000 omitted.

Virginia-Carolina Chemical Favored.

Virginia-Carolina Chemical attracted enough following yesterday to carry the stock up to 83⅝, but profits proved too tempting for some holders and the closing price was a full point lower at 82⅝. There were rumors that when the Directors meet for dividend action next week there may be an increase in the present rate. There were also reports of pool activity in the stock.

Corn Products a Feature.

Corn Products Refining, one of the issues which in past years has been a continued disappointment to those speculatively inclined, was one of the outstanding features in yesterday's trading. As one of the so-called food favorites the stock, on a turnover of considerably more than 55,000 shares, sold as high as 73⅝ after opening at 70. This gain was fairly well maintained, even when profit-taking sales came later in the afternoon, the issue closing at 72½, with a net gain of more than 1½ points. Bullish talk on the stock embraced the report that the company was opening offices in Europe for a broad selling campaign.

Copper Price Higher.

Although there is a quite tone to the copper market, the price for the red metal continues to show firmness, even a slight advance being recorded yesterday when 17⅝ cents a pound was quoted for immediate delivery. Apparently the factor of demand is not in itself influencing greatly the price of copper at the present time. The producers hold the reins and the price can be anything which they ask. There is undoubtedly an urgent need for copper in many industries, but the producers are able and willing to wait for the business to develop. At the same time there is a warning contained in the recent fractional advances that the price for the metal may be even higher for those who postpone purchases for any great length of time. August delivery is already on an 18-cent basis.

Auto Trade Busy.

An indication of the extent of the recovery made by the automobile companies in the transition from a war to a peace basis is shown in the productive figures of the Chandler Motor Car Company. The output of cars last week was 627, compared with sixty-five cars a week during the latter part of 1918. At the present rate of production the output for the year will be about 30,000 cars. The same degree of activity, it is said, exists with regard to other prominent automobile companies.

Tobacco Products Rights.

Contrary to the usual procedure when rights are listed on the big board, Tobacco Products rights yesterday persisted in advancing, whereas normally they would show a decline, due to realizing sales. The rights were even stronger than the stock, the gain for the day being 2⅝ points, while the stock advanced 2 points. The opening for the rights was at 15⅝. The high for the day was 16½ with a reaction at the close to 15⅝.

Bid and Asked Quotations.

A matter of a little difference of 150 points existed yesterday between the bid and asked quotations for Texas and Pacific Land Trust Certificates. The bid for even lots was 450 and the asked was 600. During yesterday's trading odd lots to the extent of 60 shares changed hands between 450 and the close of 470.

Maturities July 1.

Corporate maturities on July 1 next approximate $96,000,000, divided among industrial, public utility, and railroad companies. This compares with a total of nearly $50,000,000 on June 1 and $120,250,000 July 1, 1918. Of the coming maturities $25,000,000 are railroad bonds and notes, $54,350,000 are public utility issues, and approximately $18,000,000 are industrial. It is not considered probable that much new financing will be done, particularly for the railroads, as it is expected that several of these maturing issues will be extended.

American International.

American International Corporation shares were in active demand during the late trading yesterday. The advance of this issue has been fought to a moderate extent by the shorts, some of whom were evidently forced to cover when the stock became strong. While little tangible is known as to American International affairs, rumors have been afloat for some time regarding the benefit which the company was deriving from profitable investments in the market.

Texas & Pacific Soars.

There was lively bidding for Texas & Pacific Railway shares yesterday, this issue, with a gain of 8⅝ points, being one of the foremost speculative favorites. The action of the stock savored strongly of pool operations, the gain of yesterday topping a substantial gain made the day before.

Interest in Royal Dutch.

Both classes of Royal Dutch stock moved forward easily yesterday, the New York shares gaining 5⅛ points and the American shares 4⅝. The gain seemed to be predicated on a more favorable interpretation of the plan for increasing the capital of the company as related to the rights for the old stock. The subscription right applies to one new share for every four shares of old stock held.

COLORADO & SOUTHERN.

The report of the Colorado & Southern Railway for 1918 shows $1,376,371 net income after the deduction of war taxes and charges, which compares with $2,493,456 in the preceding year and is equal, after the deduction of first and second preferred dividends, to about $2.24 a share earned on the $31,000,000 common stock. In 1917 $5.83 was earned on the common.

After the deduction of operating expenses and war taxes from the road's Federal compensation, which amounted to $2,481,212, there was a net remaining which amounted to $2,421,211. This was compared in the corporate income account with $3,512,621, which was the 1917 operating income, less net equipment and joint facility rents. Other income, including lapover charges by the Federal Administration, was $1,457,681, making gross corporate income $3,878,892. From this was deducted interest, rents, and miscellaneous and overlap charges amounting to $2,502,521. Deducting also $680,000 for dividends left the road's surplus for the year $696,371. The surplus in 1917 amounted to $1,813,456.

To Close Mexican Rubber Factory.

Directors of the Intercontinental Rubber Company have decided to close the factory at Torreon, Mexico, for an indefinite period. It is stated that the influencing factors in the decision were the low level of prices for crude rubber and the conditions in Mexico which made supplies of raw material both precarious and costly.

COTTON GOES HIGHER ON PEACE REPORTS

Prices for New Crop Months Run Into Highest Figures Seen This Season.

BUYERS ARE ENCOURAGED

Market Reacts Slightly in Afternoon, but Remains Well Above Previous Closing Figures.

The early reports that the German National Assembly had agreed to sign the Peace Treaty and that the German Government had fallen gave the cotton market further stimulus and sent prices for the new crop months into the highest figures seen this season, surpassing even the high records of May 26. July cotton, which rose to 32.75, was within 5 points of the May 26 high. These advances, which represented gains of 67 points for July and 75 to 84 points for the new crop months, were on top of Thursday's advance of 100 points or more, and made the market look stronger than at any time since the reaction set in the end of last month.

The buying in yesterday's market was general. Local ring traders and local commission houses and Wall Street houses were conspicuous early in the day, and the South sent in buying orders, too. Foreign purchases were made for the account of Liverpool operators, and it was rumored around the ring that Japanese agents also were buying. Little was heard of other European demand, however, although the trade is still talking about the expanding export business.

Regarding the overseas trade, yesterday's clearances totaled 32,950 bales, making the full week's total 157,741 bales, the best so far this season. For the week the three great Southern ports—Galveston, New Orleans, and Savannah—all have done particularly well, while New York and Boston have contributed to the movement. In the trade yesterday it was reported that the Leviathan, which sailed for the other side yesterday, is now making its last voyage as a troopship and that she will be turned back into the merchant trade upon her return to this country in about three weeks. Cotton men took this to mean that the cotton forward movement will be quickened shortly.

The afternoon cable advices failed to bear out the early reports of German acceptance of the peace terms of the Allies, and then cotton prices reacted from their previous high levels. They remained well above Thursday's closing figures, though, and finished the day at net gains of 16 to 22 points for the new crop positions and 4 points up for July.

Yesterday's quotations follow:

To Redeem Bethlehem Steel Notes.

The Bethlehem Steel Corporation has called for redemption, on July 30, all of the 7 per cent. gold notes of Series B and C not previously exchanged for consolidated mortgage, 30-year sinking fund, 6 per cent. gold bonds, Series A. The notes are part of an original issue of $50,000,000. The Series A, 7 per cent. notes to the amount of $7,500,000 mature on July 30, so that with the calling of the B and C issues the debt is reduced by $22,500,000, as the last two issues mentioned are for the same amount as Series A. This is without taking into account the conversion into the Series A bonds, no announcement being forthcoming as to the extent to which the privilege has been exercised.

C., B. & Q. EARNINGS DROP.

The corporate income account of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company contained in the annual report for 1918 shows a net income, after charges and taxes, amounting to $22,792,499. This was equivalent to $20.58 earned on the $110,839,100 capital stock, as compared with $26.53 earned on the same stock in the preceding year. The Federal income account covering the operation of the property for 1918 shows a net operating income amounting to $27,357,987. The Federal compensation amounted to $33,360,683, leaving a deficit for the Railroad Administration of $6,002,726. The Federal net operating income would have been equal to about $15.14 a share earned on the stock.

The balance sheet of the company shows a decrease in the cash item from $10,172,968, to $1,801,473, while loans and bills receivable increased to $5,053,998, from $4,065,740. An item in the balance sheet of U. S. Government deferred assets was for $69,646,309. This is offset to some extent by Government deferred liabilities amounting to $43,196,167 on the liability side of the sheet. Appropriated surplus increased in 1918 to $109,123,376, from $96,968,516 in 1917. The following items are from the combined corporate and federal income account for purposes of comparison.

Operating expense	112,173,072	73,032,942
Net revenue	32,000,697	49,910,845

Under the head of maintenance of way, expenditures amounting to $19,996,286 are set down in the consolidated statement, as compared with $12,984,869 in the preceding year. This would indicate that nearly $7,000,000 more was spent on maintenance on this carrier in 1918 than in the preceding year.

THE CONDITION OF TRADE.

The trade reviews this week are more optimistic than they have been in some time. Both Dun's and Bradstreet's report a high degree of enthusiasm in trade and insist that the commercial revival has now reached very substantial proportions. In commenting on the situation of the last week, Dun's Review says, in part:

Commercial advices are such as to leave no doubt as to their meaning, and questionings of the genuineness of the business revival steadily diminish as concrete evidences of progress multiply. Much of the hesitation engendered by economic and political uncertainties has been dissipated, and the prevailing condition is no longer one of waiting for a clearer insight into the future, but rather of a confident embarking upon important commitments. Within recent weeks the change of sentiment has been sharply manifested and the reversal of purchasing policy which has resulted not alone demonstrates the pressure of consumptive requirements, but also reflects a wider acceptance of the belief that high prices are to continue, and that tardy buyers may later face a shortage of merchandise. Scarcity of supplies, in fact, is now a not uncommon feature, and many manufacturing interests, seeing order books already filled, are withdrawing salesmen from the road and are concentrating on making deliveries within the specified time limits.

Bradstreet's for the week says:

Activity in demand, strength of prices, and optimism as to the outlook stand out more clearly than at any previous date since the armistice. As to the first, it might be said that the list of things sought is a virtual roll call of the country's products, with articles of wearing apparel and luxuries most wanted, and the chief concern expressed being as to deliveries of goods, with prices to be paid a secondary matter. Even the great industrial lines that have hitherto lagged—iron, steel, and, to a lesser extent, coal—show buying increasing and output enlarging, with the view frequently expressed that the entry into the market of the railroads is the only thing lacking to put these great industries on a permanently higher basis. After early weakness, due to the rise in call money rates to the highest price in seven years, coupled with the showing by the associated banks of the Clearing House of the first deficit in required reserves reported since the Federal Reserve system was established, the stock market turned strong and regained a great deal of lost ground, with indications multiplying that the market is pluming itself for another flight.

TELL OF BURNED EQUIPMENT

Soldiers Assert They Saw Destruction in France.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Stories of wanton destruction of clothing and other army equipment, old and new, were recited today to the House Committee investigating war-time expenditures of the War Department by three members of Company L, 23d Engineers. Their testimony was largely along the line of that given yesterday by Sergeant C. B. Malcolm in opening the inquiry.

The witnesses, Corporal Charles W. Seymour of Chicago and Privates Thomas C. Johnson, Ontario, Ore., and W. T. Gardner, Portland, Ore., who were members of Malcolm's squad, were in charge of German prisoners working on a road between Souilly and Ippecourt, France, last March.

The witnesses said that the fire was extinguished as soon as they complained to their commanding officer of the destruction of the property. The equipment burned, they said, belonged to the Seventy-ninth Division, then preparing to return home.

CURB SILK HOSIERY IMPORTS

British to Authorize Only 50% of Quantity Admitted in 1916.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Temporary restrictions on the importation into Great Britain of silk hosiery and cotton hosiery containing 25 per cent. or more silk by weight were announced today by the British Embassy.

The licensing authorities in London, however, will authorize importations up to 50 per cent. of the quantities imported in 1916.

New York Railways Company

To Holders

First Real Estate and Refunding Mortgage 4% Bonds, due 1942:

The Court has announced that the interest due July 1, 1919, on the above-named bonds will not be paid. A large amount of bonds has already been deposited and the Committee urges all bondholders, who have not deposited, to do so immediately. United action is necessary in view of the certain default in the payment of interest.

The Committee wishes to call your attention to the fact that June 21, 1919, is the last date upon which the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, Depositary, will receive bonds for deposit under the Deposit Agreement dated March 7, 1919. Bonds will not be received after that date, except upon such conditions as the Committee may decide to impose. Certificates of Deposit representing deposited bonds are listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

BRITISH-AMERICAN TOBACCO COMPANY, LIMITED

Notice to Holders of Share Warrants to Bearer for Ordinary Shares.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that by Resolution of the Company passed on the nineteenth day of May 1919, it was resolved as follows:

RESOLUTION.

That of the rest of the unissued Ordinary Shares 2,131,773 shares shall be offered to the members on the register of Ordinary Shareholders on the Fifth day of June 1919 and the holders of Share Warrants to Bearer for Ordinary Shares on the same date in the proportion of one share for every three existing Ordinary Shares (ignoring shares which are not complete multiples of three and not allowing Registered Shares and Share Warrants to Bearer to be added together for the purpose of application or allotment) held by them at the price of £1 per share payable to one of the Bankers of the Company in London on the acceptance of the offer namely on the Fifteenth day of August 1919 and that such offer be made as to Registered Shareholders by notice specifying the numbers of shares to which the member is entitled and stating that if it is not accepted and payment made on or before the above-mentioned date it will deemed to be declined and as to holders of Share Warrants to Bearer for Ordinary Shares by such advertisement as the Directors shall deem advisable. Such advertisement shall state that holders of Share Warrants to Bearer for Ordinary Shares must in the first instance and on or before the Fifteenth day of August 1919 deposit with one of the Bankers in London an appropriate coupon (to be indicated by the Directors) as evidence of ownership Provided always that the dates in all or any of the before-mentioned cases may be extended to a later date in the absolute discretion of the Directors. Upon such deposits being made the Company shall be deemed to make to the depositor an offer of the number of shares to which he is entitled and the advertisement shall require the depositor in every case to forthwith sign a form of application for such shares which will be supplied for the purpose and to pay the sum of £1 in respect of each share applied for. If in any case a shareholder shall not signify his acceptance by payment of the said sum within the time specified or such extended time as may be fixed by the Directors as aforesaid the offer will be deemed to be declined and the Directors may dispose of all shares not applied and paid for within the prescribed time in response to such offers in such manner as they may consider expedient in the interests of the Company. The said Shares shall rank for dividend as from the Fifteenth day of August 1919 or such later date as payment with the consent of the Directors may be made therefor.

To enable holders of Share Warrants to Bearer for Ordinary Shares to subscribe for the new shares to which they are entitled, they must deposit on or before the fifteenth day of August 1919 Coupon No. 73 attached to each Warrant held by them at one of the undermentioned Banks, namely:

LLOYDS BANK LIMITED, Westminster House, 7 Millbank, S. W. 1, or 72, Lombard Street, London, E. C. 3.

The COLONIAL BANK, 29, Gracechurch Street, London, E. C. 3.

Upon such deposit being made the Company shall be deemed to make to the depositor an offer of one Ordinary Share in respect of every three Ordinary Shares held by the depositor but not for numbers less than three and the depositor must forthwith sign an acceptance form and pay the sum of £1 for each share accepted.

Forms of application can be obtained from the Company's Office at Westminster House, 7, Millbank, S. W. 1, or the Company's Office at 511, Fifth Avenue, New York.

Coupons and applications must not be transmitted to the Company's Bankers through the post but must be lodged personally or through a Banker. If any Coupon accompanied by an Acceptance be not so deposited on or before the fifteenth day of August next or such later date as the Board may in any case allow, the offer shall be deemed to be declined and the right in respect of such Share Warrants to participate in the offer shall cease and determine, and the holder thereof shall have no claim in respect of this offer against the Company or any Directors thereof.

The new Shares when allotted will in due course be registered and may be exchanged later on if desired for Share Warrants to Bearer upon payment of the usual fee and stamp duty.

The new Shares will rank pari passu as from the date of payment therefor with the existing Ordinary Shares.

Registered Shares and Share Warrants to Bearer cannot be added together for application or allotment purposes.

No Chance to Mark Tickets.

Advances in the silverware line have come so fast that ticket marking hasn't had a chance to keep up with them. Salesmen for one of the representative houses, in getting at their selling figures, have to take out pad and pencil and do sums in percentage. The recent advance amounted to 15 per cent. In the jewelry lines the same situation prevails, and manufacturers state they see no end in sight to the upward tendency.

Big Order for Talcum Powder.

One of the largest export orders taken for toilet goods was reported yesterday. A buyer from Brazil purchased eight tons of talcum powder in tins. Foreign buyers state that the scarcity of toilet goods throughout the world has made this country the leader in their production. Reports from other South American representatives agree that the field for domestic manufactures of this sort is a very large one in their respective countries. Buyers from Australia, China, Denmark, and Japan have also been seeking toilet goods.

Hosiery Is Sold Up.

Marked shortages in certain hosiery have now developed into what is a general scarcity. There are very few mills that will take any additional business, and the rest of the trade is sold up several months in advance. Cotton goods have been cleaned out, and in silks the same situation prevails, although the silk end is giving the most trouble at present because of the insistent demand. Hosiery makers are not inclined to take the risk of orders at a future date because of the uncertainty in the raw material market.

Contrast in Dress Goods.

The policy which many houses in the dress goods line have adopted for the present situation seems to be to sell 50 per cent. of their production at a fairly profitable figure and then dispose of the rest at whatever they can get from buyers. The local selling agent for one mill organization was comparing this practice yesterday with the situation that existed a short time ago when, if an advance of 5 cents a yard was made, it would be a case of haggling with the buyer before it could be obtained. Advances of even a dollar a yard are by no means uncommon now.

Silk Makers Hesitant.

What might be described as a wave of hesitation has come over the silk market. The large factors in the trade are not willing to accept orders beyond a certain date because of the many uncertainties of the future. The price of raw silk and production that drags along are giving the silk men cause for thought and, despite the insistent demand and the premiums offered for merchandise, they have decided to take no chances with the future. To be caught with a stock of silk bought at the prevailing high prices and production costs higher than were figured on are not matters the trade regards lightly.

Gray Goods Again Active.

First hands were again active sellers in the local gray goods market yesterday, the deliveries ranging all the way from spot to the end of the year. For 38½-inch 64-60s, first 15¼ and then 15⅜ cents was paid. Sales of 39-inch 68-72s were put through at 18¼ cents, but toward the close of the day bids of this figure did not bring goods out. Sellers were asking at least a quarter of a cent a yard more. For 39-inch 72-76s, 21 cents was paid. Sales of 38½-inch 60-48s were put through at 13¼ cents. Not a great deal was done in sheetings, but good-sized sales of sateens and twills were made at full prices. In the fine-yarn end of the market, prices were firm on the basis of 25 cents for 40-inch 88-80, 3.50-yard combed lawns, which sold at that figure.

Buying Bargains as Usual.

Although reports from all branches of the retail trade indicate that consumers are buying better qualities of merchandise than ever before, executives of leading stores freely admit that bargain sales are patronized just as much as ever. "The only way I can explain it," said the manager of one store yesterday, "is the overpowering attraction a special sale has for a woman. If she were short of money she would be buying cheap 'regular' goods, but this is not the case. Incidentally, I can tell you that it is not only women of average means that the special sale attracts. Some of the best-known women in the city have given our sale the 'once over' this week and bought the stuff we have been offering. And, believe me, they are good judges of values."

Few White Costumes Seen.

Apropos of the recent assertion of a wholesaler of dress fabrics to the effect that the call for white goods has been relatively better from the smaller cities this season, a TIMES reporter yesterday made a survey, in an endeavor to see how local women stood on the matter of white garments for street wear. It was necessarily limited in scope, but on a journey across Forty-second Street, down Fifth Avenue to Thirty-fourth Street, across Thirty-fourth Street to Broadway, and up Broadway to Forty-second Street, made early in the afternoon, only six women of the many passed by the reporter were seen wearing white dresses or the combination of a white waist and white skirt. Only one of these women would come in the category of the "natty dressers." Another thing noted was the number of Summer furs slung over the forearm instead of worn around the neck.

Fur Buyers Getting Busier.

The apparent death of the movement in Congress aimed toward the immediate repeal of the so-called luxury taxes was held in the fur trade yesterday to be responsible for the increased buying of manufactured furs, both for August sales and for the regular Fall season, that has been noted here recently. So long as a prospect of an early repeal of the title containing the taxes existed, retailers were not keen about buying goods with the extra 10 per cent. tacked on to them, especially merchandise wanted for sale purposes. Now that the repeal movement has assumed at least a state of suspended animation their confidence has returned. One of the present features is said to be the demand for women's coats, in which Hudson seal is showing up strongly in spite of talk earlier in the season of a possible turning to something else with which to meet the popular demand.

Are Fabrics Prices Too High?

The contention of some of the retail buyers of dress fabrics that present prices on many lines are out of all proportion to the increase in manufacturing and raw material costs seems to be borne out in the charges made in certain quarters of the wholesale trade that this situation is due to too enthusiastic views on the part of selling agents. These men, it is charged, are constantly nagging the manufacturers, often against the best judgment of the latter, to squeeze the last cent possible out of the goods. As a rule they "get away with" their arguments. The attitude of the agents is not wholly unselfish, for selling on a commission basis, the more they get for the goods the more they make. But, as was pointed out yesterday, it is not they who will have to "stand the gaff" when the bubble bursts.

HOLDING LAND FOR STATE.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., June 20.—George D. Pratt, State Conservation Commissioner, while visiting the State Mineral Springs reservation here today, announced that large tracts of land recently purchased at The Geysers, adjoining property already owned by the State, have been bought by him personally until such time as the State may be in a position financially to acquire deed to the land and provide for the construction of a large bath house and other essentials for a "cure" resort modeled after those of Europe.

The Commissioner said that such development of the State Reservation has been planned by the Conservation Department for some time and that in the absence of a State Association he had advanced the funds himself.

Purchase of the property, comprising many separate tracts, aggregating several hundred acres, has been quietly under way for some time. The State already maintains two bath houses on the reservation and a third will be completed early in July.

FEDERAL CONTROL GOOD, SAYS ASHTON

Tells Railroad Men That Concentration Under Administration Benefited Nation at Large.

RETURN APPROVED BY ALL

But Will Find Owners Facing One of the Greatest Constructive Periods Ever Weathered.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 20.—Representatives of every big trunk line in the country concurred here today in the prediction of R. H. Ashton, President of the American Railroad Association, made before the mechanic sections of that organization, that the transportation systems, when returned to their owners on January 1 next, are "going to be up against one of the greatest constructive periods they ever have gone through."

Stating very frankly that he did not believe there is a dissenting voice on the question of the return of the lines, either from Congress, the people, the Administration, or from railroad men, President Ashton, who was the executive head of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad before he was made Regional Director for the Northeastern region under the Railroad Administration, insisted, nevertheless, that concentration under Government control was a very good thing for the nation at large under the existing circumstances.

"I am one of those who do not believe that in the future the selfish conditions which have prevailed in the past are going to continue in the railroad business or any other business of this country," was the message he left to the amalgamated railway bodies of the nation.

"I believe that the time has come when all men must work together, and I believe that the welding together of all the railroad associations into one big force is going to be to the advantage of all of us," was another conclusion shared by traffic and construction experts. "It was the Railroad Administration that held us together and said not only what must be done, but how we should do it," he declared. "We have made mistakes, lots of them. They made mistakes in all of the allied countries, but on the whole if it had not been for the centralized control of the Railroad Administration I doubt if we could have gotten through the job as well as we did. In fact, I know we could not have done so.

"I firmly believe that the day has come when individual idiosyncracies and all that kind of thing, which cost considerable money when applied to railroads, and which in the end the public must pay for, will disappear, and I believe that the American Railroad Association, which war brought to pass, is going to tie this railroad system together and make a smooth working machine of it when the central direction, as represented in the Railroad Administration, lets go.

"I want you to know, speaking for railroad Presidents, that we are all traveling together, and that we must work out this problem together. There is no one man who is going to do it, but it is the hundreds and thousands of men who are thinking about practical railroad problems who are going to bring about the results which are so much to be desired."

Construction heads, who played a large part in solving congestion problems on eastern lines, referred today with pride to the statement of W. T. Tyler, Director of Operations of the Railroad Administration, that there has never been, so far as he knew, a discordant note in that organization. "Now that condition prevailed naturally, you might say, during the period of the war as a result of the patriotism of the members; but it has continued after the signing of the armistice in just exactly the same degree as it did before, and it still continues even when the minds of individual members very naturally are largely turning to the return of the railroads," said the Director. Mr. Tyler gave the construction men to understand that he is hopeful that before the roads are finally returned, there will be a complete organization of all the functions of the operation of the lines in one smooth working body.

Many leaders asserted today that the new combined association of all the railroad bodies affords the only agency in sight for effecting co-ordination under private control that will be essential if the best transportation results are to be forthcoming.

Dispatchers for Government Control

CHICAGO, June 20.—Unanimous indorsement of Government control of railroads was voted today by the 250 delegates to the National Association of Train Dispatchers. C. L. Darling, Secretary, explained that the organization thought some form of general control of all systems was necessary. "The Government control during the war has been fairly successful," he said. "We therefore believe that it should be continued, especially through the reconstruction period."

BANKERS GIVE SONS START.

Chicago Bond Firm Launched for Mitchell-Hutchins Heirs.

CHICAGO, June 20.—Founded by wealthy fathers for the benefit of their sons, the new firm of Mitchell, Hutchins & Company, representing families long identified with the Illinois Trust & Savings Bank, will engage in underwriting and distributing new issues of bonds and notes here.

Among the partners, it is understood, besides the Mitchell-Hutchins interests, are J. Ogden Armour, Chauncey Keep, William Wrigley, Jr.; H. M. Byllesby, Charles Garfield King, and W. E. Stanley. They have bought the preferred stock of the new concern.

William H. Mitchell is to be head of the company. James C. Hutchins, Jr., also actively identified with it, recently returned from service in France.

"We have organized the company in order to give the boys a start in life," said John J. Mitchell, President of the Illinois Trust, today.

SEND KOSHER MEAT ABROAD

In celebration of the first shipment from this country of Kosher meat for the starving Jews of Galicia, exercises were held yesterday on board the steamship Ashburn, at Pier 33, East River. The ship will leave with a cargo of 500 tons of meat within a few days.

The shipment, which represents a value of $242,000, is made by the Joint Distribution Committee of American Funds for Jewish War Sufferers.

Among those who attended the exercises were Rabbi Nathan Krass, Rabbi M. S. Margolies, Rabbi S. G. Jaffe, Cantor Jacob Rosenblatt, and Albert Lucas, Secretary of the committee.

COMMODITIES PRICES.

In spite of the fact that the declines shown in Dun's list of wholesale commodities prices this week are outnumbered nearly three to one by the advances, the revisions in the foodstuffs are almost equally divided between the two. No market in the list showed very much of an excess one way or the other. There were 41 advances this week in 56 changes, compared with 38 upturns in 69 revisions last week.

The following list gives the minimum prices quoted on selected standard commodities this week. They are quoted to yesterday, and with them are given comparative prices for last week and the corresponding week a year ago:

	This Week.	Last Week.	Year Ago.

No change in flour prices took place this week in the local market, but both hams and bacon were higher here. At Chicago declines were shown by live hogs and Middle Western lard, with mess pork unchanged. Live beef, live sheep, and short ribs contributed the advances. The dairy products changes were fewer than for some time. No revisions in butter prices were listed, but the best cheese was slightly lower. Both nearby fancy and the best Western eggs moved up a cent a dozen, and now show quite liberal margins over the corresponding prices for 1918.

Save for rice, all of the changes in the vegetables were downward. Choice pea beans broke in price, and cabbage lost the gain of 75 cents a barrel it made last week. For the second week in succession potatoes dropped 25 cents a barrel. The biggest drop was $1 a bag in onions, but they are still held at $5 a bag against $2 at this time a year ago. Both the fresh and dried fruit lists were bare of changes for the first time in quite a while. Further advances took place in the basic Brazilian coffees, and low Japan tea also was higher. No changes were listed in the spices.

Corn, oats, rye, and malting barley all contributed advances to the grains list. Declines were lacking. The advances in the combined list for drugs, chemicals, dyestuffs, and oils outnumbered the declines by 12 to 4. Features included the strength of several varieties of oils, and the advances in Russian ergot, menthol in case lots, and Canadian fir balsam. The last-named went up $1 a gallon during the week, and all three of these commodities are considerably higher than last year's corresponding quotations on them.

No changes were shown in the leather list, but in the hides advances were recorded in five of the ten grades quoted on. These were No. 1 native packer, No. 1 country steers, No. 1 heavy cows, No. 1 buff hides, and No. 1 kips. The metal changes consisted only of a rise in lake copper and declines in spelter and lead. In the naval stores a rise in resin offset a drop in turpentine, after the latter had advanced steadily for some weeks. Raw silk prices were higher generally, and hemp and hops also were quoted higher. Crude rubber closed off.

In the textiles an active inquiry and a shortage of merchandise resulted in further advances in burlaps. In the colored cotton goods the only rise reported was in staple ginghams. Several constructions of gray cottons also gained ground as a result of the more active buying that took place during the closing days of the week. Silk and woolen prices also showed an upward tendency.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

The property, which was acquired by the seller several weeks ago, has a frontage of 50.6 feet and an irregular depth, containing about 25,000 square feet. Post & Flagg will build at once a six-story building for their exclusive occupancy from plans by George B. Post, architect.

The site purchased by Post & Flagg is located just north of that recently acquired by the Seaboard National Bank at the northeast corner of Broad and Beaver Streets, where the bank is about to begin the demolition of buildings for the erection of its new home. It adjoins a larger plot at 43 to 47 Broad Street, bought last month by the Alliance Realty Company, abutting the Broad Exchange Building, which the same company owns. Frederick Southack and Alwyn Ball, Jr., negotiated the sale.

In the same section the Importers' and Exporters' Insurance Company of 17 South William Street has purchased as a site for a building for its exclusive use 47 and 46 Beaver Street, 32 by 100. Robert R. Rainey and the Charles F. Noyes Company were the brokers in the transaction.

Resale of West Street Plot.

The Broadway John Street Realty Company resold to the King Chemical Company the six-story building at 122 West Street and 87 Dey Street. It is understood that extensive improvements are to be made to the structure. Pease & Elliman negotiated the transaction.

Uptown Apartment Sales.

The Pierce Contracting Company, represented by Herman Graef, attorney, sold the five-story apartment house, 25 by 100, held at $40,000, at 260 West Ninety-ninth Street, 100 feet east of West End Avenue, to a purchaser who contemplates altering into small apartments. Nassoit & Lanning negotiated the sale.

Oppenheimer Brothers & Vieth sold the six-story elevator apartment house, on plot 100 by 113 by 120, at 720 West 181st Street, to L. Scheschter and others. The property faces Bennett Avenue and accommodates sixty families, paying an annual rental of about $23,000. It was held at $250,000 and was sold through J. Rosenbaum and I. Rosenthal.

Max N. Natanson purchased from the estate of Melvin E. Boas the southeast corner of 162d Street and Broadway, a six-story elevator apartment house, on plot 100 by 100, and having thirty-eight families and seven stores. This property has a rental of $35,000 and was held at $275,000. Samuel Kronsky was the broker. The buyer is the owner of the northeast corner of Broadway and 162d Street.

The Nehring Company has sold for a client to H. Eisenberg for investment the five-story new-law apartment house, on a plot 37.6 by 100, at 563 and 565 West 173d Street, renting for $7,000 and held at $45,000.

Irving Judis resold to the Wians Realty Corporation (J. Wiegan President) Convent Court, a six-story elevator apartment house, at the southwest corner of Convent Avenue and 149th Street, on a plot 100 by 100. The property is arranged for forty-two families, rents for $34,000, and was held at $250,000. It was acquired by the seller about three weeks ago from Max Marx. Louis Fine was the broker.

The Excelsior Savings Bank has sold the six-story elevator apartment house at 250 and 252 West 112th Street, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues, held at $85,000. The buyer is James Lago, private banker, who will hold the property for investment. The Duross Company and the Rowantree Schley Company were the brokers.

Ike Stein bought from a client of J. Friedus the six-story apartment house, 50 by 100, held at $62,000, at 250 and 252 West 146th Street. Abraham Leichter, attorney, represented the buyer. Negotiations for a resale are pending.

Private Dwellings.

Walter H. Knapp sold the four-story dwelling, on lot 16.9 by 92, at 217 East Nineteenth Street, to Moses Herzog, through Douglas L. Elliman & Co.

Joseph Haberman sold the three-story and basement dwelling, 16.8 by 100, at 248 East Sixty-first Street, through Joseph F. Seitz.

John D. Walton sold 226 West 137th Street, a three-story dwelling, on lot 16 by 100, through John H. Pierce. The same broker sold for Delia F. Brennan, 240 West 137th Street, a three-story dwelling, on lot 17.6 by 100. The buyers will occupy the premises.

Tenement Deals.

Edward H. Burger, lawyer and operator, purchased the five-story tenement with three stores at 1838 Madison Avenue, in an all cash transaction, subject only to a first mortgage held by the Title Company.

The two-story apartment houses at 341 to 345 East 120th Street, have been purchased by an operator. They cover a plot 75 by 100, between First and Second avenues, and are owned by Elizabeth L. Thomasson, Mary A. H. Glasson, and others, according to the ownership records.

Realty Notes.

J. Irving Walsh was the broker in the sale of the apartment house at 122 Waverley Place by John J. Long to Hal Marchbanks.

The Bronx Market.

The Ashton Holding Company, Inc., sold the six-story apartment house on plot 137 by 89, irregular, held at $90,000, at 999 Fremont Street, including the corner of Longfellow Avenue and West Farms Road, through Alexander Selkin, David Mintz, and Theo. Tenney.

Abraham Frank sold the property at 3,800 Third Avenue, near Claremont Parkway, to the Dub Realty Corporation through Fred Oppenheimer.

Thomas Conroy sold the three-story and basement dwelling at 51 Adrian Avenue, near 225th Street, on lot 33 by 100, to the Acre Realty Company through Fred Oppenheimer.

The Eberhart Building Company sold a five-story apartment house, 37.6 by 100, 2,003 Vyse Avenue, to Samuel Bernstein through Maurice Strunsky.

Martha Armbruster sold the two-story two-family frame dwelling on lot 25 by 100 by 24.1 by 111.7 at 1,417 Crotona Avenue to Harry Spooner. The seller was represented by the Title Guarantee and Trust Company and A. P. Fox represented the buyer. Fox & Fox were the brokers.

Clara M. Johnson sold the two-family dwelling at 726 East 230 Street to Ferdinand Leake through F. William Eggert.

The Henry Morgenthau Company has sold to the City of New York a plot having 230 feet frontage on Leggett Avenue, 260 feet on Southern Boulevard, and 280 feet on Fox Street, as a site for a school.

The Benenson Realty Company has purchased through Henry Schwelbert the four-story building, with stores, on a plot 28 by 75, at 408 Claremont Parkway.

Roman Catholic Church of St. Philip Neri, on the west side of Grand Concourse and Boulevard, opposite 202d Street, has purchased an adjoining lot, 25 by 112, irregular, from Edward Williams.

Brooklyn.

The Midwout Holding Corporation bought three sixteen-family apartments, 100 by 120, renting for over $27,000, at 1,004, 1,010, and 1,014 Eastern Parkway. The buyers were represented by Vogel & Marlon, attorneys, and the brokers in the deal were George L. Long, Charles Smith, and Joseph T. Froehlich.

Dr. Joseph Monday bought the brick store and apartment building at 672 Franklin Avenue through Charles Partridge.

The four-story and basement brownstone dwelling on lot 20 by 100 at 258 Clinton Avenue was sold by the Bulkley & Horton Company for a Mr. Dougherty.

May Graham sold the two-family dwelling at 360 Sixteenth Street to Margaret Flynn through F. C. Sauter.

Meister Builders, Inc., sold 929 Sixtieth Street, a two-story two-family brick house on a plot 20 by 100, to a client for occupancy.

Realty Associates sold a two-story two-family dwelling on a lot 23.8 by 100 at 2,030 Eighty-fifth Street to Bessie Miller, a similar house at 2,014 Eighty-fifth Street to Irwin Stern through Leon Luft, and a two-story and basement dwelling, 23 by 100, at 145 Heyward Street, to K. Kreitzer through Morris Wolff. The same organization bought the southeast corner of Flatbush Avenue and Farragut Road, taking in 1,425 and 1,427 Flatbush Avenue, and 2,708 and 2,714 Farragut Road, three buildings containing stores and flats, having a frontage of 69 feet on Flatbush Avenue and 165 feet on Farragut Road. In part payment for this property it gave a plot 120 by 250 feet on the east side of Ocean Parkway, 120 feet north of Avenue P. This exchange was made by I. Weinbach and S. Welch Sons.

PROVINCE OF MUNSTER
COUNTY CORK, IRELAND.
Five miles from Clonakilty Station, on a branch line of the Cork, Bandon, and South Coast Railway, and 40 miles from Cork.

THE MARINE RESIDENTIAL ESTATE of CASTLE FREKE
divided approximately between Grounds and Woods about 300 acres, Arable and Pasture Land about 500 acres, and rough land near the Foreshore about 300 acres.

The Estate is situate nearly midway between Kinsale and Cape Clear, and has a coast line of 3½ miles.

The Castle is a fine building occupying a bold situation and commanding magnificent views over the Atlantic. The main part was partly rebuilt about eight years ago and the whole thoroughly modernised in all respects, with bathrooms, central heating and electric light, while the offices are complete, and the gardens and grounds inexpensive to maintain.

The Home Farm is well equipped, the engine in connection with the electric light installation driving also the Farm machinery.

The Estate is well timbered, no trees having been cut or sold during the war.

For SALE, by AUCTION in London on an early date, unless previously sold privately.

BANKRUPTCY SALES.

NOTICE OF SALE. UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, Southern District of New York.—In the Matter of JOHN B. ROSE COMPANY, Bankrupt.—In Bankruptcy, No. 25949.

Pursuant to a Decree of Sale dated May 7, 1919, duly made and entered herein by Honorable John J. Townsend, Referee in Bankruptcy herein, and a Decree dated June 18, 1919, duly made and entered herein by the said Referee, setting aside the sale had on May 28, 1919, under the terms and provisions of the Decree of Sale dated May 7, 1919, at the Trial Court Room in the County Court House in the City of Newburgh, New York, vacating the Decree dated June 2, 1919, confirming the said sale had on May 28, 1919, and directing a resale of all the properties and assets described in the said Decree of Sale dated May 7, 1919, the properties and assets of the above-named Bankrupt mentioned in said Decree of Sale, dated May 7, 1919, and in said Decree directing a resale dated June 18, 1919, will be offered at public sale by the undersigned Trustee at the office of Hon. John J. Townsend, Referee herein, at 31 Nassau Street, in the City of New York, N. Y., on July 2, 1919, at 11:30 o'clock A. M., in accordance with and in the manner provided for by said Decrees dated May 7, 1919, and June 18, 1919. The said sale to be had July 2, 1919, will be conducted by the said Referee, Hon. John J. Townsend, or under his direction. Bids will then and there be received by the undersigned Trustee pursuant to the terms of said Decrees, dated May 7, 1919, and June 18, 1919, copies of which may be obtained at the office of the said Referee. The properties offered for sale include the merchandise of the bankrupt estate, the business of the bankrupt estate as a going concern, the good-will thereof and all trademarks, tradenames, patents, cash on hand, stock in trade, merchandise, barges, machinery, equipment, fixtures, supplies, materials, tools, designs, patterns, accounts receivable, outstanding customers' accounts, contracts, bills and notes receivable, stock, notes, bonds, prepaid insurance, mortgages, and other securities, all claims of the bankrupt estate against individuals, corporations or allied companies, and all chattels and receivables of the bankrupt estate and all the real estate of the Bankrupt and all the right, title and interest of the Bankrupt in any real estate wheresoever situate.

The said properties and assets will be sold in bulk as a going concern for cash and in no other form or manner.

A purchaser will be entitled only to a conveyance or transfer of the right, title and interest of the Bankrupt and the Trustee herein in the property sold without warranty of title or the accuracy of the description of the said properties and assets. The said properties and assets may be inspected by prospective bidders at any time before the sale on application to the Trustee and inventories or catalogues thereof will be available for inspection at the office of the Trustee or his attorneys at least five days before the sale.

The said Referee at the aforementioned time and place, after all bids are received, or at such adjourned time as he may fix thereat, will entertain application or motion for, and will make such orders of sale and confirmation of sale or in reference to the administration of the estate of the above-named Bankrupt or the disposition of its assets or the adjustment, release, adjudication or confirmation of any matters affecting the administration of the said estate, as shall be proper; and an order confirming said sale or otherwise affecting the administration of the estate herein may, in the discretion of the said Referee, be made at said time and place or at such adjourned time as he may fix, without further notice to any creditor, the Bankrupt or any other person or party in interest.

The real property hereinafter described, with the buildings and improvements thereon, and such fixtures as are appurtenant to and form a part of the said real estate, and all the right, title and interest of the estate of the Bankrupt herein and the Trustee hereof in the real property hereinafter described and in the buildings and improvements thereon and in such fixtures as are appurtenant to and form a part of said real estate, will be offered for sale at the aforementioned time and place:

All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the town of Marlborough, bounded as follows, to wit: On the north by lands formerly of George W. Lawson, Phoebe Sands, on the west by the highway leading from the village of Milton to the village of Marlborough, on the south by lands formerly occupied by Henry R. Prentice, formerly owned by Samuel Ackerly, and on the east by the Hudson River. Containing about thirty-seven acres of land be the same more or less. It being the same premises owned and occupied by John Lawson at the time of his decease and by the executors of the said John Lawson conveyed by deed dated the 15th day of June, 1867, to Benjamin A. Rose, and conveyed by said Benjamin A. Rose and others to Mary Ann Haviland, wife of James Haviland, by deed dated June 22, 1867, and recorded in Ulster County Clerk's office July 9, 1867, in Book No. 144 of Deeds, at page 77.

All that certain lot, piece or parcel of land situate at Marlborough, New York, and more particularly described as follows:

Beginning at a point at the northeasterly corner of a lot hereby conveyed on the westerly line of lands of the New York, West Shore and Buffalo R. R., and south line of lands of J. B. Rose, and running thence along said Rose's land north, eighty-six degrees five minutes west, one thousand five hundred and seventy feet to a point on the dividing line, which is six feet north sixty-eight degrees twenty-four minutes west from an iron pin on south side of wall, thence south, sixty-eight degrees twenty-four minutes east, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-three feet to the west bounds of the New York, West Shore and Buffalo R. R., passing at nine hundred and five feet from west corner an iron pin. There is also an iron pin at the end of this line; thence along the west line of said R. R., about five hundred and sixty-five feet to point of beginning. Containing 9.97 acres be the same more or less.

All that certain piece or parcel of land with the buildings and improvements thereon erected, situate in the town of Marlborough and County of Ulster, formerly owned by Samuel M. Ackerly, and bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning on the west shore of the Hudson River in line of lands now or formerly of James Chatterton, and running thence along the line of the lands last mentioned, south, eighty-eight degrees and thirty minutes west, thirty chains and twenty-nine links to the middle of the road leading from the village of Marlborough to the village of Milton, thence along the same, south three chains and twenty-two links, thence south, seventeen degrees east, five chains and twelve links, thence leaving the road and running along a stone fence south, sixty-one degrees and thirty minutes east, twenty-nine chains and thirty links to the west shore of the Hudson River aforesaid, and northwardly along the same to the place of beginning. Containing fifty acres and eighty-seven one-hundredths of an acre more or less. Being the same premises conveyed to Emily M. Salmon by Samuel M. Ackerly by deed dated October 16, 1861.

Subject to the reservations contained in said deed; excepting and reserving nevertheless the following described premises, being that portion of the property above described which was released to John J. Tyler, by release dated the 6th day of October, 1881, and recorded in Liber 231, pages 518, &c., viz.:

All that parcel of land situate in the town of Marlborough, beginning at a point on the division line between the lands now or formerly owned or occupied by Walter Duncan and John J. Tyler, and running thence northerly along and following the course of a surveyed centre line of the proposed railway route of the New York, West Shore and Buffalo Railway Company, designated upon and shown by the map and profile thereof, on file in Ulster County Clerk's Office, one thousand five hundred and sixty feet more or less to the land now or formerly owned or occupied by Mary A. Haviland; said parcel of land being one hundred feet in width along the southerly boundary, and throughout its entire length or course and is estimated to contain three and fifty-one one-hundredths (3.51) acres more or less. Being the same premises described in a deed by John J. McCarthy and wife to Michael F. Tobin, dated January 3, 1907, recorded in Ulster County Clerk's office January 8, 1907, in Liber 399 of Deeds, at page 580. Except so much of said premises as were heretofore conveyed to John B. Rose, by Michael F. Tobin and wife and also except the portion of said premises which were heretofore conveyed to the County of Ulster for highway purposes.

Subject to the reservations and conditions contained in any of the previous deeds affecting said premises or any part thereof.

All that certain lot, piece or parcel of land, situate, lying and being in the town of Marlborough, County of Ulster and State of New York, and bounded and described as follows, to wit: Beginning at the southwest corner of lands formerly of Lewis Quick, where the same adjoins the state road leading from the Village of Milton to the Village of Marlborough, and at the northwest corner of the lands hereby conveyed in the middle of said state road, and running thence easterly along the south line of lands formerly of Lewis Quick, and south line of lands formerly of William Quick to the west shore of the Hudson River thence southerly along the west shore of the Hudson River to the northeast corner of lands formerly of John Lawson now owned by John B. Rose, thence westerly along the north line of lands of said Rose to the lands formerly of George W. Lawson, now owned by George Churchill, thence northerly along the east line of lands of said Churchill to the northeast corner of said Churchill's lands, thence westerly along the north line of lands of said Churchill to the centre of said state road, thence northerly along the centre of said state road about three chains one rod and six inches to the place of beginning. Containing about 22 acres of land be the same more or less.

Excepting, however, two parcels of land which were conveyed by Phebe Sands and David Sands, her husband, to the New York, West Shore and Buffalo Railway Company by the two following deeds, to wit:

1. Deed dated September 3, 1881, recorded September 15, 1881, in Ulster County Records of Deeds in Book No. 230, page 481.
2. Deed dated June 22, 1883, recorded in said Records of Deeds in Book No. 245, page 148.

The premises hereby conveyed were conveyed to Frank Sands by the two following deeds, viz.:

1. About four acres thereof by deed from Phebe Sands, dated January 2, 1896, (Book 327, page 464) and about eighteen acres thereof by deed dated February 18, 1902, made by Mary Gertrude Sands and others (Book 370, page 97).

All real property of the Bankrupt, other than that described hereinbefore, if any, wheresoever situate and all the right, title and interest of the Bankrupt estate in such other real property.

TO MAKE A SERIES OF LOANS TO BUILDERS

HAS FAITH IN REAL ESTATE

Members of West Washington Market Association Say City Charges Them Excessive Rentals.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company announced yesterday the first of a series of loans which it will make to builders of non-elevator apartment houses to relieve the housing situation. According to Walter Stabler, the Controller of the company, this follows upon a period when it was impossible for the company to make such loans because of its heavy investments in Government bonds. The first loan was made to the Queensboro Corporation for the construction of another block of eleven "garden" type apartment houses in the block bounded by Twenty-first and Twenty-second Streets, Polk and Fillmore Avenues, in the Jackson Heights section of the Borough of Queens. The new houses will cost approximately $1,000,000 and will contain 185 suites of 3, 4, 5, and 6 rooms each.

After stating how his company had suffered from losses paid as a result of the influenza epidemic, and had been compelled to borrow many millions to cover its subscriptions to the Liberty Loans, Mr. Stabler pointed out that the company had to adjust its finances to pay back what it had borrowed and to strengthen itself against a recurrence of the epidemic.

"These are the facts in the case," he continued, "at least so far as this company is concerned, and when we recently announced that since time must elapse before we could again consider applications for loans on real estate or new building operations, we meant precisely what we said.

"We did not make that announcement because we did not wish to make new loans, or because we had lost any of our abiding faith in real estate as good security, but because we had gone in debt to help our Government during its time of trouble, and because these debts must be paid now as quickly as possible."

"We nevertheless are fully cognizant of the seriousness of the housing situation and wish to do our bit toward relieving it. We therefore determined recently to lend a few hundred thousand dollars for the construction of apartment houses and to increase the number of our new loans from time to time as we were able."

While some of the city authorities are bending their efforts toward eliminating rent profiteering, one of the city departments is engaged itself in profiteering, according to the tenants of West Washington Market. At a meeting of the West Washington Market Association, held yesterday afternoon at 431 West Fourteenth Street, the members voted to obtain a hearing as soon as possible with Jonathan C. Day, the Commissioner of Markets, so that they may lay before him their claims. According to the market men, the rents have recently been raised from 86 2-3 cents and $1.04 per square foot to $2.08, and in other sections of the market from $1.08 to $2.60 a square foot, whereas rentals in private buildings in the neighborhood which are used for the same purposes average $1 a square foot, and that figure, they contend, is the one the Commissioner should settle upon.

George F. Hinrichs, president of the association, who presided at yesterday's meeting, said that the trouble with the Commissioner's figures were that they were calculated to make the obsolete market building carry the overhead charges which could only be carried if a modern building were erected. He also held that the fixtures which had been installed by the tenants themselves were worth more than the building itself.

In a letter received yesterday by the Mayor's Committee on Rent Profiteering, it was pointed out by W. H. Hosking, who lives in the Charleston Court, 3,905 Broadway, that changes of agents as well as changes of owners, were used to raise rents. He said that on April 1 he had been raised from $1,080 to $1,320, and that on May 15, when another agent took charge, he was again raised, this time to $1,486, to take effect on October 1. This, Mr. Hosking said in his letter, he thought was a profiteering scheme of the owner and possibly of the agent of the building.

SHELL NEAR TRAFFIC COURT

It became known late yesterday afternoon after Magistrate Frederick B. House had left for his home that an unexploded high explosive shell weighing approximately sixteen pounds had been found at 7:55 o'clock yesterday morning in an ash can close to the Mott Street entrance of the Traffic Court. This is the entrance used by defendants and patrolmen and is unusually busy at that time of the morning.

The utmost secrecy was maintained by the Police Department. It was learned, however, that the shell was found by a woman living in one of the Italian tenement houses opposite the Court House and turned over to Patrolman John Furlong, Custodian of the building. He in turn is said to have made a report to police headquarters and Inspector Owen Eagan of the Bureau of Combustibles took the shell away with him. Patrolman Furlong had evidently been instructed not to disclose the facts, for he not only refused to discuss the finding of the shell but denied that such a thing had taken place even in the face of the fact that several Traffic Court attaches had seen the shell. The shell was said to be of the type of a number exploded recently in the Bronx, injuring several children and killing one boy.

MEMORIAL PROJECT FAILS.

Freeport Committee Says Citizens Are Indifferent to Fallen Heroes.

"The war is over; our boys are dead and buried; let's go to the movies."

That inscription appeared yesterday on the blackboard in the auditorium of the public school in Grove Street, Freeport, L. I., as a summary of the sentiment of the people of Freeport regarding the proposition to erect an $18,000 monument in memory of the boys of that place who lost their lives in the war. It was inscribed by Henry J. McCord, Chairman of the Publicity Committee of the General Memorial Organization.

Subscription pledges by which it was expected to raise the amount necessary for the memorial were to have been collected at a public meeting called for last Wednesday evening in the school house. The committee was on hand to welcome the expected crowd. Six persons appeared. The committee decided to hold no more meetings, and to report back to the village trustees that the people of Freeport apparently do not care whether the memories of the community's soldiers are honored or not.

ALL TO HELP THE CHILDREN.

Queen of Rumania Drafts Population Into Relief Association.

Queen Marie of Rumania has drafted every housewife, owner of a moving picture theatre, store-keeper, hotel owner and landlord in her kingdom into a national army to contribute to the support of the Rumanian Children's Relief Association, which has been organized to continue permanently the work of child-feeding begun by the American Relief Administration.

In an appeal just issued to her people, described in a cable message received from Mr. Hoover in Paris at the offices of the Administration, 42 Broadway, Queen Marie has requested that all Rumanian families refrain from eating dinner one day each month and contribute the amount thus saved to the funds for child relief.

SUES MME. ALMA CLAYBURGH

The filing of a suit by Albert Clayburgh, a cotton converter, for a divorce from Mme. Alma Clayburgh, concert and opera singer, of 270 Park Avenue, became known yesterday when an order was signed in the Supreme Court substituting John V. Bouvier as Mrs. Clayburgh's counsel in place of Charles S. Whitman. It was learned that Mrs. Clayburgh left her husband's home at 318 West Eighty-first Street five months ago to take a Park Avenue apartment, and the suit was filed later. The divorce papers are sealed.

Mrs. Clayburgh, who is the plaintiff's third wife, married him in Philadelphia eleven years ago. She was then Miss Lachenbruch, and met the plaintiff through his interest in music. Her attorney said yesterday that she will ask that her husband be compelled to make a liberal allowance for the maintenance of herself and two children.

RULES FOR PACIFIC FLIGHT.

Transocean Contest Open from September to February, 1920.

LOS ANGELES, June 20.—Licensed aviators of any nationality may compete in the proposed transpacific airplane flight for which Thomas H. Ince has offered a prize of $50,000 according to rules governing the contest made public today. The flight may be attempted from either side of the Pacific, but if made westward Venice, Cal., must be the starting point and the landing made on the mainland of Australia, the Japanese Islands, or the continent of Asia. If made eastward, Asia, Australia, or Japan may be the starting point and the finish made on the mainland of the United States.

The contest will be open from next September to February, 1920. The flight must be completed within 12 days.

If the flight across the Pacific is not completed, Ince said, the aviator reaching the Hawaiian Islands in the shortest time would receive $10,000. If no contestant reaches the Hawaiian Islands the aviator who flies the furthest in that direction will receive $5,000.

WATCH WAS HIDDEN IN WILKINS HOUSE

DETECTIVE BURNS IS CALLED

Reviews Physician's Account of Encounter with Burglars Who, He Says, Killed His Wife.

MINEOLA, L. I., June 20.—A mass of circumstantial evidence went today before the jury which is trying Dr. Walter E. Wilkins for the murder of his wife, Julia, at Long Beach, L. I.

Two police detectives were put on the stand to testify that they had found, wrapped in a blood-stained cloth and hidden in the springs of a couch, a Swiss watch. This testimony was intended to discredit the contention of Dr. Wilkins that burglars had killed Mrs. Wilkins and then robbed the physician of a watch and other things. Dr. Wilkins had asserted, however, that the watch stolen from him had a Waltham movement. This watch was stopped at 9:38. The crime is alleged to have been committed at 9:20 o'clock in the evening.

Policeman Nicholas C. Cocks of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station, Manhattan, was called to give testimony suggesting that the hammer used in the murder had been wrapped with paper by Dr. Wilkins. The witness said that on May 23 he arrested a man who broke into a haberdashery store and attacked the haberdasher with a hammer wrapped in paper. He said that he had later discussed the case, and particularly the manner in which the hammer was wrapped, with Dr. Wilkins.

This hammer was tied with a piece of string having sixteen strands.

County Detective Carman Plant testified that he had found a similar piece of string with eighteen strands in the basement of the Wilkins home.

Finger Marks on Lead Pipe.

Marks found on a lead pipe used in the crime were identified by a finger-print expert as those of Dr. Wilkins. This evidence had been discounted somewhat by evidence that Dr. Wilkins had told of picking the pipe up after the murder of his wife. District Attorney Charles H. Weeks sought, however, to draw a fine distinction here by proving that the marks established that Dr. Wilkins had gripped the pipe hard, whereas Dr. Wilkins was quoted as saying that he merely picked it up and dropped it.

Testimony intended to prove that the crime was committed by some one who remained on the premises, and not by burglars who fled, was obtained from Dr. Charles Norris, chief medical expert for New York City, who told of making analyses of stains on a towel found in the Wilkins home and discovered that they were blood stains.

County Detective Plant identified a blood-stained collar as one that Dr. Wilkins had worn on the night of the murder. He said that he asked how the stains got there and that Dr. Wilkins replied:

"They must have come from my wife's body when I was attending her outside."

Plant said that there were bloodstains on the physician's hat and that he had accounted for them by the same explanation. He said that Dr. Wilkins told him that the burglars had beaten him over the head, but he could see no marks on the doctor's head or face.

William J. Burns testified that Dr. Wilkins had also told him about being attacked and beaten by the burglars, but that the doctor's skull disclosed no evidences of the blows.

"They must have hit you with something soft, like a fist," Burns said he told the doctor.

"It probably was," replied the doctor.

Gives Wilkins's Explanations.

The detective said that he remarked, after hearing the doctor's account of the circumstances of the murder:

"It is strange you would go home and find the front door unlocked and see burglars, and yet go in and close the door after you."

"Well, I didn't realize the danger I was in," was Dr. Wilkins's reply, according to Burns.

"It's strange that the burglars dealt so gently with you," Burns remarked, according to his testimony, and the Doctor replied:

"Yes, it is strange, but those are the facts, and that is all I can say."

Burns admitted that he had submitted a bill for $1,256.64 for his connection with the case in March, and $823.12 for April.

"Isn't your organization under investigation by the State of New York?" he was asked by Mr. Wysong, counsel for the defendant.

"No," replied Burns; "by the Pinkertons, my rivals."

When pressed further about the investigation, Burns said:

"The Pinkertons are investigating my organization as a result of the robbery of the J. P. Morgan offices, when some English and French papers were stolen by German agents. The District Attorney prosecuted me instead of the thieves. I was fined $100, but the fine was revoked by two upper courts."

Witnesses on Thursday of the discovery of a love-knot pin, which had been found pinned to the lining of a pocket in one of Dr. Wilkins's suits. It had been previously asserted that Dr. Wilkins stated that this pin had been taken from him with the watch by the burglars; who, he said, killed his wife and robbed him.

Testimony was introduced to show that some of the garments worn by Dr. Wilkins on the night of the murder had disappeared and that Dr. Wilkins had said later that he did not know what had become of them.

ARRESTS IN MEAT STRIKE.

One Woman Is Sent to Workhouse for Disorderly Conduct.

Mrs. Sadie Lina of 205 East 102d Street was sentenced today by Magistrate William Sweetser in Harlem Court to serve five days in the workhouse after being found guilty on a charge of disorderly conduct in connection with the kosher meat boycott in Harlem. The complainant, Mrs. Tillie Caparbo of 303 East Ninety-ninth Street, told the Magistrate that after buying a chicken in a butcher store at 102d Street and Second Avenue several women, including the defendant, surrounded her. The defendant, she alleged, snatched the chicken from her and destroyed it.

Two other women, Mrs. Lena Duchowney and Mrs. Gussie Loebman, both of 116 East 108th Street, were arraigned on a charge of disorderly conduct preferred by Meyer Pass, who conducts a butcher store at 52 East 110th Street, and who alleged that the two women created a disturbance in front of his store by interfering with customers. They were held in $500 bond each for examination on June 24.

SUSPECT WAR FIRMS IN TAX FRAUD CASE

MAY MAKE THIRTY ARRESTS

District Attorney Expects Important Results from Rosenblum Charge —Also Scan Books for 1917.

Government accountants began work yesterday on the accounts of twelve firms after alleged frauds on the Government in income tax returns had been reported by Morris Rosenblum, an Internal Revenue inspector, after his arrest on the charge of conspiring with tax dodgers.

A large room on the top floor of the Federal Building was packed yesterday with books of firms, alleged to have hired the Sterling Accounting and Auditing Company to falsify their accounts so that their income and excess profits tax would be cut down by about 90 per cent. Eight accountants were put to work on the books yesterday under the direction of Assistant District Attorney Benjamin P. De Witt. It was said that, when the evidence of other frauds was thoroughly sifted, several rooms in the Federal Building would be required by accountants working on this one case.

At least thirty arrests, it was said yesterday, would follow the disclosures of wholesale tax-dodging following the arrest of Rosenblum and men said to have been connected with the Sterling Accounting and Auditing Company. It was said yesterday that, in obtaining the books of this company, the Government had made a haul of unexpected importance because the District Attorney not only got the accounts of the auditing firms, but of several business houses which were employing the firm.

Hasty examination of these books, it was said, showed that several new firms, which had suddenly gained wealth from war contracts, had turned their books over to the firm for the purpose of concealing their profits from the Government as far as possible. These firms were in a particularly advantageous position, as far as the plan to deceive the Government was concerned, it was said, because of the lack of a record of earnings in other years which would have given a clew to their profits.

The accountants were busy yesterday with the year 1917, because it is believed that many of the alleged tax dodgers cheated the Government in returns for 1917 as well as for 1918.

It was said yesterday that accountants also were at work on the books of the Pictorial Review Company, the Secretary of which was arrested several days ago on the charge of attempting to bribe an Internal Revenue agent to join in a conspiracy to make false returns which would defraud the Government of hundreds of thousands of dollars. It was said that it would take two weeks more to complete the investigation of the accounts of this company. The firm's accounts for 1917 also are being scrutinized.

Seek $10,000 for Orphan Home.

The managers of the Leake and Watts Orphan House for boys and girls, Yonkers, have issued an appeal for $10,000, in order to care for many New York city children made homeless by the war. It is intended, with the funds to be collected, to establish a home farm school at Tivoli-on-Hudson, where the boys may combine vocational and regular school work. The property at Tivoli was bequeathed to the institution by Gen. John Watts de Peyster, grandson of one of the founders of the Leake and Watts House. Dr. Howard Duffield is president of the charity, and Albert S. McClain is superintendent. The trustees include Mayor Hylan, Dr. W. T. Manning, Richard Delafield, Herman H. Cammann and Dr. David J. Burrell.

Found Husband Had Another Wife.

Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum signed a decree yesterday annulling the marriage of Madeline M. Piercy, of Belleville, N. J., to Robert George Quennell, son of a former rector of the Church of the Ascension, on the ground that when the marriage occurred last fall the defendant had a wife from whom he had not been divorced. The plaintiff first learned that she was not Quennell's only wife when he took her to his home and introduced her to his mother.

13S FILL HAMBY'S RECORD.

Figures and Friday Form Coincidences Since Bank Murder.

Another "13" loomed up yesterday in the case of Gordon Fawcett Hamby, who has confessed that on Friday, Dec. 13, he killed two men in the East Brooklyn savings bank, and wounded another, during the robbery of the bank, from which he took $13,000. It was today observed that the attorney who has been engaged to defend him has his office at 1,113 Temple Bar Building, Brooklyn. Other "13's" in Hamby's case are as follows: He was brought back to Brooklyn from Tacoma, Wash., on June 13, also a Friday. The number of the patrol which brought him to and from Police Headquarters was 13. He will be tried before Judge Lewis L. Fawcett, whose name has 13 letters in it, as has also that of Deputy Sheriff James J. Shortel, who will have charge of him during the trial.

Preparations were being made today to accommodate the large crowd that is expected when the trial opens next Monday morning, at which Hamby will be tried for first degree murder. Part 8, of the criminal term, Brooklyn Supreme Court, with every available chair, cannot accommodate 250 persons, and it is expected that many more than that will seek admission. A table has been set up for the 20 to 25 newspaper people who are to attend the trial.

NAMES HER SISTER IN SU

Mrs. Ehrgott, Seeking Separa... Says Husband Wanted Her ... Divorce Him.

Mrs. Mildred Ball Ehrgott brought in the Supreme Court yesterday ... separation from George M. Ehrgott, ... president of the Broadedge Apartments, 333 Central Park West, in which she ... cases her own sister, Mrs. Edith ... Moss of 143 West Ninety-sixth ... of winning her husband's affections.

In a petition for alimony ... brought an allowance of $25 a ... from Supreme Court Justice White, Mrs. Ehrgott said her husband had been attentive to her sister for three years, and she learned of it first from her sister's husband. She said her husband asked her repeatedly to get a divorce, and gave her a list of incidents which he told her would be sufficient evidence. Her brother, Harold L. Brown, ... Ehrgott gave the Moss family an apartment free to have Mrs. Moss near her. Mrs. Moss divorced her own husband last December, the petition says.

Ehrgott denies improper conduct, and says he was civil and kind to Mrs. Moss because she was his wife's sister. His wife is a victim of insane jealousy and had struck and beaten him, he says.

REVOLUTION OPENLY URGED

Socialists Offer Bolshevik Platform —Bloodshed Is Predicted in Change of Government.

The Rand School of Social Science, in the building formerly used by the Young Women's Christian Association, at 7 East Fifteenth Street; the headquarters of the Left Wing Socialists at 42 West Twenty-ninth Street, and the local offices of the I. W. W. at 27 West Fourth Street, were raided yesterday afternoon by State constables and the police, who acted under search warrants which had been obtained by the Legislative Committee, of which Senator Clayton Lusk is Chairman, and which is now investigating the activities of Bolshevist, anarchistic, the I. W. W., and other radical organizations in the State. It was the biggest raid of the kind in the history of the city, and several truck loads of documents, letters, and other printed and written data were seized for the inspection of the committee.

The raids were made simultaneously and in each instance came as a complete surprise to the raided organization. In all of the places the State authorities said they had reason to believe valuable information regarding extreme radical activities in New York was obtained. In each instance the local heads of the organizations whose premises were searched denounced the action as an outrage and made it plain that legal steps will be taken immediately for the recovery of everything that was carted away. The raids were made at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon, and the loading of the material taken at the Rand School was still under way at 8 o'clock last night. Two hours was enough to complete the work of assembling all the documentary and other evidence seized at the I. W. W. and Left Wing headquarters.

In the offices of the Left Wing a mass of documents was obtained which proved to be clear-cut demands for revolution in this country and the setting up in Washington of a Bolshevist Government. Another interesting document found in the same place calls for the expulsion of all Socialists from the party who do not subscribe to the radical Bolshevist program adopted by the Left Wing.

The most spectacular of the raids was the descent upon the Rand School. The warrant for the search of the offices of the school, the bookstore, the storerooms, and the offices of the American Socialist Society and the Workers' World, which are in the same building, was signed by Chief City Magistrate William McAdoo, while that for the search of the Left Wing and the I. W. W. headquarters was issued by Magistrate Alexander Brough, who issued the warrant under which the State Constables acted when they searched the embassy of Ludwig C. A. K. Martens, the unrecognized Bolshevist "envoy" to the United States, a week ago last Thursday.

Fifty in Raiding Party.

The Rand School was a very quiet place when the State and city searchers, to the number of about fifty, arrived. The raiding party marching by twos swung into Fifteenth Street, from Fifth Avenue, at exactly 2:30 P. M. On the steps of the building were a score or more of young persons of both sexes, while inside were probably a hundred other persons, among them Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, the I. W. W. agitator; George Goebel, who was in charge of the school; Alderman Abraham Beckerman, and many radicals, not so well known to the public. Scott Nearing, Alderman Algernon Lee, Louis P. Lochner, the Ford Peace Ship man; Ludwig Lore, the editor of the German Volkszeitung, and other persons, whose names were mentioned in the affidavit filed with the search warrant were not in the building.

John Reed, who for a time was employed in the Bolshevist Foreign Office at Petrograd, when Trotzky was Foreign Minister, was named as the person in charge of the Socialist Left Wing office. Reed, however, was not present, and it was said that he was in Atlantic City. Nothing of interest was

BORAH THREATENS ANTI-LEAGUE PARTY

Says He Will Bolt Republicans Unless They Make Covenant a Political Issue.

ANGERED BY "ROUND ROBIN"

Urges Referendum and Declares People Will Insist on "Expressing Their Sentiments."

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Vehemently denouncing the "round robin" of twenty-eight Republican lawyers, bankers, and others of prominence in New York, headed by former Attorney General Wickersham, which called upon the Senate opponents of the League of Nations to drop partisanship and prepare to ratify the League covenant, Senator Borah of Idaho today in the Senate declared he would oppose the League if he had to stand alone.

If the Republican Party does not make a party issue of the League of Nations, Mr. Borah said, and make every effort to defeat it, a new party would be created, through which the American people at the next election would have opportunity to "express their sentiments."

The Idaho Senator challenged Senator Hitchcock, ranking Democrat member of the Foreign Relations Committee, who took issue with him as to the attitude of Americans toward the League of Nations, to agree to submit the League project to a referendum vote. Mr. Hitchock said he would not accept the challenge, but he maintained that polls taken by Republican and independent newspapers throughout the country indicated the vast majority of readers favor the League.

Senator Borah excoriated the Republican Party for not having declared against the League, which, he argued, traverses American rights. He criticised the attitude of Republican National Chairman Hays, who has advocated aloofness from party alignment against the League.

Attacking the "round robin," which was directed to Senators Wadsworth and Calder of New York, Mr. Borah said that conspicuous among its signers were Mr. Wickersham and Henry W. Taft, partners of ex-President Taft, who, he said, had been going around the country in a special train advocating the League. Mr. Wickersham had been converted to the League idea, he said, after going to Europe, where he "got into a different atmosphere." Before that trip, Mr. Borah said, the former Attorney General had opposed the League, on the ground that it conflicted with Washington's admonition against entangling alliances.

Declines to Yield.

Senator Borah alluded to the presence at the Capitol of Oscar Straus of New York and Theodore Burton of Ohio, who were in the corridors trying to induce Republican Senators to swing to advocacy of the League. No matter who tried to influence his action, Mr. Borah said, he would decline to yield in his antagonism to the League covenant.

Before Senator Borah made his attack Mr. Straus talked with Senators Wadsworth and Calder and many other Republicans. So far is is known he gained no converts. Mr. Wadsworth told THE NEW YORK TIMES that he had not received a copy of the "round robin."

"What the twenty-eight Republicans say in it, according to newspaper reports," he said, "is nothing more than they have been saying all along. It does not interest me much, for I have my views as to the League."

Mr. Wadsworth is known to favor amendments to the covenant. Senator Calder's attitude has not been expressed. He is believed to favor putting the covenant through without amendment rather than delay operation of the Peace Treaty.

"I have not read the 'round robin,'" said Mr. Calder. "I will be glad to get the version of those who sign it. I cannot say whether their letter will affect my attitude."

Senator Johnson of California said the "round robin" would have no effect on him. "As an American, I have positive views about the League of Na-

QUALIFY TREATY ON RATIFICATION, SAYS ELIHU ROOT

WANTS OUR RIGHTS STATED

Unrestricted Withdrawal, Independence in Home Problems, and Monroe Doctrine.

BACKS KNOX RESOLUTION

But Holds Qualifying Resolution Equally Effective—Republicans Welcome His Suggestions.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Elihu Root, ex-Senator and ex-Secretary of State, in a letter to Senator Lodge, Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, which the latter made public today, outlines the policy which the conservative opponents of the League of Nations covenant among the Republicans are expected to pursue when the treaty of peace comes before that body.

Mr. Root advises that, as important objections raised by opponents of the League of Nations have not been embraced in the redraft of the covenant, the logical way to emphasize these objections is through a qualifying resolution, adopted with the ratification of the treaty.

Mr. Root urges that, by resorting to the qualifying resolution, the Senate put itself on record as to the matters from which it dissents, the matters not to be binding upon the United States in any dispute over them that may later come up in the League of Nations.

In his letter Mr. Root expresses approval of the Knox resolution, which urges the Peace Conference to write a clause into the treaty of peace allowing nations to determine, after the treaty is signed, if they wish to join the League of Nations. But if the covenant is not to be separated from the treaty, he advises that the Senate resort to the alternative of acting through the qualifying resolution. By resorting to this method, Senator Root argues, the United States will definitely make known its dissent where it exists and save itself from accepting obligations from which later it may want to withdraw.

Mr. Root's letter, which was written to Senator Lodge under date of June 19, after Mr. Root had been asked for his opinion by Mr. Lodge, marks the drawing of a definite line of attack upon the treaty of peace which the conservative element among the Republicans is expected to follow. It comes after the fight for the Knox resolution is admitted by majority leaders to be hopelessly lost.

Through Mr. Root coming into the breach the battle against the League of Nations, it now becomes evident, will be concentrated upon an effort to express the Senate opposition after the treaty reaches the Senate, instead of trying to have the covenant separated from it before the treaty is signed.

Welcome Root Proposal.

Mr. Knox's resolution was not moved to a vote in the Senate today, and it was regarded as a foregone conclusion that if it were brought to a vote next week it would be defeated by an overwhelming vote.

With defeat facing them, advocates of the Knox measure welcomed Mr. Root's arrival at the capital yesterday, when, in conference with Republican leaders, he outlined the policy expressed in his letter. When the letter became public late today Senators who had manifested impatience over the failure of Mr. Knox to move his resolution hailed it as the logical alternative in the battle against the League covenant.

Senator Lodge himself has advocated a qualifying resolution, if the Senate is unable to amend the body of the League covenant. After he made public the Root letter today, his only comment was that action through a qualifying resolution would "come to the same thing" as direct amendment of the covenant.

Mr. Root's letter had a decided effect upon the trend of developments in the League of Nations fight. Mr. Lodge gave it out while Oscar S. Straus of New York and ex-Senator Theodore Burton of Ohio, ardent Republican advocates of the League of Nations, were at the capital urging upon Senators to head the call in the "round robin" of Republican bankers and others in New York yesterday for acceptance by the Senate of the League covenant.

That Mr. Lodge had decided to abandon the effort to put through the Knox resolution and to turn to the Root proposal as the only practicable way out

COBLENZ, June 21, (Associated Press.)—A state of siege has been declared in the district of Münster, in Westphalia, northeast of Cologne, because of Spartacide disturbances, according to information reaching American headquarters here.

General von Watter, commanding the German 7th Corps, with headquarters at Münster, has appointed General von Brauschitch military commander of the district.

NITTI MAY TAKE ORLANDO'S PLACE

TITTONI IN FOREIGN OFFICE

ROME, June 21.—King Victor Emmanuel has requested Francesco Nitti, former Minister of the Treasury, to form a Cabinet, the Giornale D'Italia announces semi-officially.

Ex-Premier Tittoni will be Foreign Minister, it is added.

PARIS, June 21, (Associated Press.)—The Italian peace delegation does not expect Vittorio Orlando to return to Paris to sign the German treaty, as Signor Crespi, Baron Sonnino, and the other two delegates here have full powers to sign and it will not be necessary for the head of the delegation to attach his signature.

While the delegation has not been advised of any probable change in membership, the delegates expect that a new member probably will be designated to replace Signor Orlando when a new Italian Government is formed.

The Temps says that Tomaso Tittoni, whose appointment as Foreign Minister in the new Italian Cabinet seems probable, will replace Signor Orlando as principal delegate to the Peace Conference.

Nitti Friendly to America.

So far as Professor Francesco Saverino Nitti himself is concerned as prospective Premier and Minister of the Interior—for the Premier usually holds the portfolio of the Interior—and so far as his slate reads, with Luigi Luzzatti as Minister of Finance and Senator Tittoni as Minister of Foreign Affairs, he is constructing a Government based on ideas which appeared to be most obnoxious to the Chamber when it overthrew the Orlando-Sonnino Government last Thursday by a vote of 239 to 78.

For Nitti resigned as Minister of the Treasury last January, denouncing the extreme demands of the Italian delegation at Paris; the veteran economist and statesman Luzzatti has a project for a quadruple financial and industrial entente with France, England, and the United States; while Signor Tittoni is the ardent friend, as his entire diplomatic career shows, of both England and France, whose attitude toward Italy at the Peace Conference was roundly denounced by the Deputies, when Orlando's appeal to keep faith with Italy's allies precipitated the adverse vote.

Many Italians believe that the master hand is that of Signor Giolitti, who for thirteen years, until Salandra rebelled against his "boss rule," in 1914, held the politics of Italy in the hollow of his hand. His known ideals of Teutonic conciliation made him unpopular in Italy in 1914-15, for he preached that Italy could secure all rational concessions from Austria-Hungary without war. He has even been called "the Italian Caillaux." In several of his former Governments both Luzzatti and Tittoni were his associates.

At all times the portfolio of the Interior is the most important in the Government, for the holder of it appoints the local prefects, or State Governors, and supervises the elections; now, however, with complications abroad and industrial troubles at home, the portfolios of Foreign Affairs and Finance crowd it for first place.

Signor Nitti, of open, even jovial, personality, as all who met him in the Summer of 1917 as a member of the Italian mission here will remember, is a professor of finance at the University of Naples and, as a writer on industrial and financial topics, is as well known as his colleague, Luzzatti, and ranks as an authority on his subjects with Vincenzo Rosal and Giuseppe Toncolo. The great irrigation works of Italy and the electrification of her waterfalls are in a measure due to his political initiative. His foreign policy, as expressed here in 1917, was based on the principle that "the friendship of England, France, and the United States is the most valuable asset for Italy a future," and since then, "of more value than acres of grottoes on the Adriatic."

Signor Tittoni, who is spoken of as also succeeding Orlando at the Peace Conference, was Ambassador at Paris from April, 1910, until Nov. 1, 1916. He had been twice Foreign Minister under

INTERNED FLEET SCUTTLED

All Big Warships but One and Many Smaller Craft Go Down.

SOME BEACHED BY BRITISH

REST OF CREWS ARRESTED

LONDON, Sunday, June 22, (Associated Press.)—The German officers and sailors, forming the complements of the German ships interned at Scapa Flow, sank most of their fleet yesterday.

All the big ships, the battleships and battle cruisers, excepting the Baden, and numerous smaller craft were sunk, while others went ashore in a half-sunken condition.

Eighteen destroyers were beached by tugs, four are still afloat, while the remainder went under.

The hoisting of a red flag at noon was the signal for the crews to scuttle the German warships.

The crews took to the boats and rowed toward the shore.

The guardships fired at the Germans, who jumped overboard and swam ashore, where they were rounded up.

The wholesale sinking of the German ships, which went to Scapa Flow after their surrender under the terms of the armistice, was carefully arranged by officers and crews.

All explosives had been removed, and, therefore, the only means of destroying the fleet was by opening the seacocks. The ships went down slowly, with the German flag, which the crews had hoisted, showing at the mastheads.

The crews, composed entirely of Germans, under the terms of the armistice—which did not permit British guards aboard—took to the boats when the vessels began to settle.

While making for the shore the boats were challenged and called upon to surrender. Some of them ignored the summons and were fired upon, a few casualties resulting.

This stroke apparently was an entire surprise, and the first news reached London through a correspondent who was informed by farmers in the neighborhood that they had seen the German ships sinking with their flags aloft.

The German officers and crews have been made prisoner. None of the officials tonight would offer an opinion as to how they are to be dealt with.

The Admiralty at first denied the report of the sinking, but later confirmed it and issued an official statement.

The statement says:

"According to the latest reports from Scapa Flow all the interned battleships and battle cruisers have been sunk, except the battleship Baden, which is still afloat.

"Five light cruisers have been sunk, but three have been beached. Eighteen destroyers were beached by local tugs.

"Four destroyers are still afloat. The rest of the destroyers have been sunk.

"A German Rear Admiral and most of the Germans from the ships are now in custody aboard British ships. Some boats from the ships refused to stop when ordered and were fired on. A small number of Germans were killed or wounded.

"In accordance with the terms of the armistice, the German ships were interned with skeleton crews as caretakers and without British guards aboard."

The first news of the sinking of the German fleet was contained in a Thurso dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company.

Early in the afternoon a report was circulated by the Exchange Telegraph Company that virtually the whole German fleet at Scapa Flow had been sunk, but a few minutes later the news agency asked that the dispatch be canceled.

The Sunday Observer says that while naval opinion at Portsmouth holds that it would have been better to have had British guards on the German ships, the sinking may be considered

Rhenish Provinces Are Pressing Hard for Peace, Fearing Reprisals by French and Belgian Troops

BERLIN, June 19, (via Copenhagen.)—The pressure at Weimar for signing the Peace Treaty is said to have come mainly from the Central and South German States, which feared a French and Belgian occupation worse than Spartacism.

The Rhenish provinces, too, have been rebelling against the idea of serving as a base for foreign occupation of the rest of Germany. Rumors have been circulated in all the Rhenish and Westphalian towns and cities that the French and Belgian authorities have selected for the occupation of Germany only such troops as hail from French and Belgian districts which were devastated by the Germans during the war and are naturally filled with bitter hate against them.

The story has been going around that the Belgian and French troops, if commanded to march, will devastate everything, and especially will destroy all machinery in the Ruhr factory district. The constituencies in these districts of the Socialist and Centrist Parties have simply swamped their representatives in the national convention and the party leaders at Weimar with telegrams pleading that the treaty be signed.

Appeals of the same kind have flooded the representatives of the South German States.

FRENCH ARMY SET TO RESUME FIGHT

EAGER TO END ARGUMENTS

Activity of Allied Troops Convinces Rhineland Germans Should Sign the Treaty.

MAYENCE, June 20.—The change from the doubts and recriminations of the Paris atmosphere to the single-minded spirit of the French Army is like a plunge into cool waters on a hot day. The army is untroubled by eleventh-hour self-questionings as to whether severity toward Germany will be right or just or politic. To the soldiers there is just one factor in the situation—the old enemy is trying to argue who was really the victor and they are not only ready but also exceedingly eager to show him.

By sundown tonight every man in the French Army of the Rhine will have reached what might be called a battle position, awaiting the signal for the bound forward at any moment. During the past two days troops have been pouring through Mayence, sweating, dusty and travel-stained, but wholly cheerful and keyed to topnotch by the thought that their inactivity may be over and the advance is about to be resumed.

According to schedule the Corps Headquarters will make a jump of twenty-five or thirty kilometers the first day, with auto-mitrailleuses and galloping cavalry before them. Frankfort will be occupied an hour after the start.

As for the inhabitants of the occupied zone, they are unchanged in the air of indifference they have worn since the French arrival. Burning patriots may curse deeply in private, but on the street and in cafés, concerts, theatres, and cinemas the mass of the population behaves precisely as usual.

"We have enough to eat, we have peace at last, and order, if not prosperity. Why should we worry about Berlin?" seems to be the general attitude. In the upper classes particularly there is a feeling that anything, even annexation if it had to come, would be better than Bolshevism, and right down through the people there is a growth of sentiment that Prussia and Prussia's troubles no longer concern the Rhineland.

POINCARE WARNS OF GERMAN INTRIGUE

Says That Even When Treaty Is Signed It Will Be Far from Execution.

PARIS, June 21.—President Poincaré, speaking at a service in the Law Courts in honor of French lawyers who died for France, said that peace was not yet signed, and even when signed would be far from being executed.

"The enemy is always on the watch," M. Poincaré said, "and works in his usual way—by attempting to spread divisions among the Allies. Shall we commit the folly of letting the light which for five years has illuminated our road go out?

"The League of Nations instills in each of the associated countries respect for the character and traditions of that nation. France will remain the foundation upon which universal solidarity will establish itself sooner or later.

"Community of race, identical interests, unity of language—all these forces build to form a fatherland. And it empires parcel out nations and place their chains upon them, urge the peoples ardently to demand their right to life and independence.

"Let us assert ourselves to maintain France on the pinnacle where her victory has placed her. France will be, thanks to genius, clearness and justice, one of the most trustworthy guardians of the future peace, and one of the best workers for universal progress."

FOCH ALL PREPARED FOR GERMAN BALK

Plans to Surround the Country Instead of Overrunning the Whole Area.

WARSHIPS ARE MOBILIZED

Line of Troops Would Run Through Bremen, Prague, Austria, Russia, and Poland.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COBLENZ, June 20.—Germany is due for a rude awakening, ardent army authorities here, if by a refusal to sign the peace terms she starts a movement of the allied troops eastward. A careful study of the utterances of Germany's leaders as to the situation indicates, they say, an absolute lack of conception of what the allied troops can do to Germany.

Should the Germans throw down the gauntlet to the Allies it may be only a matter of days before she will find herself encircled by armies and fleets and cut off by land and by sea from the rest of the world, and with half her territory and population under the military domination of Marshal Foch.

The allied plan, it is said, is not for a mere advance into German territory for the purpose of frightening the German people, nor to overrun Germany and to occupy the whole country. The Allies would adopt a far more subtle, ingenious, and effective plan.

Starting at Bremen, on the northwest, the Allies plan a line south along the Weser River to the vicinity of Cassel, then along the eastern edge of the Thuringen Forest to the vicinity of Plauf, at a point where the old Austro-Hungarian border line makes a sharp turn, then eastward through Prague and on through Czechoslovakia northward over the old Austro-Russian boundary and north through Poland to the neighborhood of Danzig. From Danzig eastward the line would be carried on by allied warships, shutting up Danzig, Lubeck, Hamburg, and controlling the Kiel Canal, back to Bremen.

Thus Belgian, British, American, French, Czechoslovak, and Polish armies and sea forces would surround what would be left of Germany. Westphalia, Hesserhine Province, Baden, Württemburg, and Bavaria would be under allied control.

Would Cut All Communication.

Germany would be cut off from Switzerland, Holland, Denmark, and Russia. Germany would be absolutely within the power of the allied blockade regardless of the refusal of neutral nations to participate in the blockade.

Instead of there being any truth in the German propaganda statements that the refusal of Germany to sign the peace terms would place the Allies in a bad military situation, a refusal would place the Allies in an immeasurably stronger military position from which to put pressure on Germany. Not only are they able to cut her off from the rest of the world, but they are able also to paralyze the industrial life of Germany by holding the richest half of her country, containing the vast majority of her manufacturing establishments, her coal mines, and her iron fields. Furthermore, half her population would be under allied control.

Marshal Foch has ample troops at his disposal to put this plan into execution. The line from Bremen, south to Prague, some 400 kilometres, is not as long as the Rhine line now held by the allied troops.

Germany has approximately 500,000 available soldiers, with efficient equipment. She could not hope to turn these successfully in more than one direction. Keeping that fact in mind it may be seen that the execution of the allied

Majority Socialists Strong For Signing Peace Treaty

WEIMAR, June 20, (Associated Press.)—Caucuses of the three principal parties, voting Thursday night on the question of signing the Peace Treaty, resulted as follows:

Majority Socialists, 75 in favor of signing the treaty and 30 against.

Centrists, 4 in favor of unconditional acceptance and 69 for conditional acceptance.

BERLIN, June 21, (Associated Press.)—A new German Cabinet has been formed under the Premiership of Herr Bauer, formerly Minister of Labor, with Dr. Herman Müller, the Majority Socialist leader, as Minister of Foreign Affairs.

The other members of the Cabinet are:

Minister of the Interior—Dr. EDUARD DAVID.

Economics—Herr WISSELL.

Labor—Herr SCHLICKE.

Treasury—Herr MEYER.

Posts and Telegraphs—Herr GIESBERTS.

Held Back New Note to Allies.

Following its decision to send the Entente another note containing conditions regarding the immediate entrance of Germany into the League of Nations, the limitation of the indemnity to 100,000,000,000 marks in gold and renunciation of the allied efforts to have the former Emperor surrendered, the retiring German Government lost its nerve, for the note ended with the declaration that it was impossible otherwise to get a Cabinet that would sign the treaty.

Although the note was written and ready to be dispatched, it was withheld until the eleventh hour, as it was feared that the Entente would reject the German proposals.

It was known that difficulty was being experienced in securing a majority without the German Democrats for the formation of the new Government, and the conditions named were those upon which the Democrats would re-enter the majority bloc.

The Centre Party also declared that it desired similar concessions, but its position as to this was not regarded as unshakable.

Denounces Intervention for Kaiser.

Discussing the suggestion that the signing of the peace terms be agreed to upon condition that a plebiscite be granted in West Prussia and that the demand for the surrender of the former Emperor be abandoned, the Vorwärts says, editorially:

"We consider such a condition an impossibility and even a monstrosity. The demand for a plebiscite in West Prussia, it may be comprehended, might be approved, but it would be a gigantic national disgrace and a moral slap on its own face on the part of the German people if it concluded to make its future destiny dependent upon the fate of a single man and that man exactly the one to whom, in a great measure, it owes its misfortune, and whom, in a great part, the German people now are cursing because of it."

A league of German officers in a public appeal denounces the demand by the Allies for the former Emperor's surrender as "the most humiliating of all conditions." The appeal continues:

"It would dishonor us for all time. We cannot defend our former commander with our bodies, but no Parliament and no Government which calls itself German dare ever consent to yield up William II. In the same spirit we shall defend and shall place ourselves solidly in front of our illustrious commander and comrades who are in our midst."

Cabinet in All-Night Session.

WEIMAR, June 20, 11 P. M., (Associated Press.)—The Cabinet changed its determination not to meet for forty-eight hours at a late hour tonight and went into another all-night session in an attempt to find a new Cabinet that would take the responsibility of signing the peace conditions.

Dr. Eduard David was for a time the leading candidate for Premier, but was unable to surround himself with men of the same mind as himself.

The Cabinet held a meeting this morning and gathered for another session this afternoon, party leaders being present at the second sitting.

Socialists Reject Centrist Move.

COPENHAGEN, June 21.—An attempt by the Majority Socialists and Centrists to reach an agreement on the Peace Treaty, a despatch from Berlin says, failed because the Socialists refused to accept responsibility for a note to the allied powers in which it was to be declared that the treaty would be accepted only on condition that Germany was not required to acknowledge sole responsibility for the war, or to hand over guilty persons to the Allies.

Reports regarding the sending of a note to the Peace Conference at Paris inquiring as to its attitude toward the Centrist party's proposed modification of certain clauses in the treaty and also requesting the extension of the time limit for signing the treaty, according to advices from Weimar, are "not in accordance with the facts."

Gustav Adolph Bauer, who has been asked by President Ebert to form a new German Cabinet, and Herman Müller, who, it is reported, will hold the portfolio of Foreign Affairs in it, were comparatively unknown even in Germany outside of Social Democratic circles before the revolution, although Bauer's name had been connected with the secession of the minority in 1916.

Herr Bauer had been Commissioner or Minister of Labor in all Governments since the Chancellorship of Prince Max, which succeeded that of von Hertling on Oct. 1, 1918, at the dawn of Germany's petition for an armistice. Several times in the course of the war Bauer, however, from his seat among the Independent Socialists in the Reichstag, had attacked the internal policy of the Government—the suppression of strikes by force, the censorship, the prohibition of free speech—and, on one occasion, June 4, 1918, the military regime.

Herman Müller was one of the most conspicuous German delegates at the International Socialist Conference which met in Berne last February. He acknowledged the guilt of Germany, as far as the Kaiserlich-Junker parties were concerned, but affirmed that German Social Democrats had always been opposed to militarism. He said in the session of Feb. 5:

"The young Republic of Germany is ready to consent to a general disarmament on the condition that all other countries do the same."

In a recent speech Dr. Müller said that the former Emperor was not responsible in Germany and that he "belongs in a pathological ward."

The name of Eduard David has been linked with that of Philipp Scheidemann, one of the leaders of the German Social Democratic Party in the Reichstag since the beginning of the war. From 1915 to the outbreak of the revolution last November Dr. David in his speeches in the Reichstag opposed a war of conquest by Germany.

Dr. David was a member of the original German delegation to the Peace Conference, but retired in favor of Herr Landsberg on account of ill health.

ALLIES HOLD TO TIME LIMIT.

Americans Learn of Sentiment in Germans for Signing Treaty.

PARIS, June 21.—The newspapers, commenting on the resignation of the Scheidemann Ministry, are unanimous in believing that unless something unforeseen happens, Germany will sign the treaty.

In circles close to the Peace Conference, the papers add, it was declared last night that under no pretext of holding a plebiscite, or of a ministerial crisis, would the allied and associated powers give Germany further time in which to make known her decision.

The German provincial press has been strongly urging the speedy signing of the treaty. Berlin advices to the American delegation summarizing the situation in Germany show the sentiment throughout virtually all of the nation to be in favor of accepting the peace terms. The advices cover Leipsic, Dresden, Chemnitz, and other representative regions.

Geographically analyzed, the advices indicate that the South German States are all favorable to the acceptance of the treaty, while the Prussian regions are maintaining some opposition.

Conference circles are cheerful over the outlook. Information received by the American delegation apparently is confirmed by advices to the other delegations.

The eighty-two attachés of the German peace delegation remaining at Versailles have been kept informed of developments in Germany by press telegrams received by correspondents of German papers. They appear to interpret events as favorable to the signing of the treaty and are receiving news from Germany with manifest joy. A special dinner was ordered for them tonight, with "peace champagne."

See Germans Playing for Time.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 20.—Although lacking official confirmation of the report that the Scheidemann Government is out, Peace Conference officials are considering the possibilities which may arise from the formation of a new Cabinet in Germany. There has been expectation here that Scheidemann would retire.

In spite of the fact that Noske is regarded as opposed to accepting the Allies' terms, the new political situation is considered favorable to peace, particularly as Erzberger is apparently working with Noske, and he is credited with anxiety to have the treaty signed.

A contingency noted in recent dispatches to THE NEW YORK TIMES—the overthrow of Scheidemann at the time the Germans would be called upon to say whether they would sign or not—seems to have come to pass.

It is pointed out that the time for the signing of the treaty might be extended to give the German Government a chance to put its house in order, provided it gives assurance its plenipotentiaries will sign. In some high quarters here the belief prevails that the Germans are seeking to create reasons for postponing the signing until the next harvest is available in August.

The German plenipotentiaries have sent a note to the Council of Allied Powers, claiming modifications in the final allied note inconsistent with treaty provisions. They ask an answer by courier.

This and other happenings indicate the Germans are playing for time. Marshal Foch appeared before the Council of Four this afternoon and his plans for military operations against Germany were approved.

The general opinion held at the Peace Conference is that the overthrow of the Orlando Ministry does not affect his status, as he got credentials from the King of Italy and not from the Italian Government.

PARTY LINES BROKEN IN WEIMAR TURMOIL

STEADY DRIFT TO SIGNING

Peace Delegation's Stand Against Treaty Served Only to Cause Delay.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WEIMAR, June 19.—The political situation, since my last message, has moved with some speed toward the inevitable crisis which will clear the air. One fact stands out this evening. Now there is no probability of an unqualified "no" as the answer to the Entente's revised conditions, but another and old fact remains. It is that which I have always insisted on; namely, that the treaty will not be signed by this Government.

When the Peace Delegates, with their unanimous decision not to sign, met with the Government yesterday, they first scored some success. The unanimity of the delegation so composed—it is made up of a diplomat, a pacifist, a merchant, a jurist, and two labor leaders—naturally made considerable impression on the Government.

During the day, however, they continually lost ground. Domestic, political and economic conditions were represented with such force against the delegates' arguments that at the end of the day they had to consider themselves defeated. The discussions continued till midnight, not being interrupted even for meals which were brought to the conference room.

When the long debate was over, this decision had been arrived at: That on account of the lack of unanimity—the non-signers being in a slight majority—the matter could not be settled by the present Government, and the scene of the struggle would, therefore, have to be transferred to party conferences and the National Assembly.

The chief non-signers in the Government are Scheidemann, von Brockdorff-Rantzau, Giesberts, Landsberg, and Dernburg, while Ersberger, David, and Noske definitely favor signing. Some minor members of the Government cannot yet definitely be labeled.

Old Coalition Now Broken.

Now, the present Government being a coalition administration, by its decision really dissolves itself into the parties from which it rose. Today all parties have been in long consultation with the object of finding out exactly how they stand as parties and in relation to each other. When definiteness on those two points is reached—and it has been practically achieved with regard to the first—then it will be a case of creating a Government which will be an expression of the National Assembly majority.

That in that body there is now a majority of signers admits of little doubt, for opinion has been gradually swinging round to the ayes until it is practically certain that they have it.

What is the position in the parties? The Independent Socialists are solid for signing, and the Socialist Majority Party is divided, the non-signers being in a minority. However, its unity has been endangered by its attitude of opposition toward the Independents. Most of its leaders are compromised, but for the party it is a question of preserving its unity that so its vote on "yes" or "no" will be recorded as "block vote," which will carry the party as a whole to the side of the signers.

When the final decision comes the leaders who have compromised themselves will go to the Centre, or Catholic Party, being in the main the party of the agricultural laborers and industrial workers, and having naturally been greatly influenced in the matter of their attitude.

The majority in the Democratic Party is against signing, but its members will be free to vote as they please. Further to the right stand the more conservative elements, among whom there are only a few in favor of acceptance. So much for the parties.

Independents Not to Join.

What about the new Government? The Independent Socialists and the Democrats will not be in the new administration, so that it will consist of Majority Socialist and Centrist members. By tomorrow evening there should be some definite signs as to its composition.

As for the Premiership, it is generally held that Noske should remain in his present post. Erzberger is much spoken of, but he would probably be as unfortunate a choice as that of von Brockdorff-Rantzau has been as Chief Peace Delegate. The choice may eventually fall on Hermann Müller, Chairman of the Majority Socialist Executive Committee.

It is very improbable that the crisis will be solved within the time limit fixed by the Entente. A request will most likely be made for an extension of that period, for it is obvious that the work to be accomplished before the final decision is by no means inconsiderable.

Unless, then, something unforeseen at present should arise within the next few days, Germany's answer will eventually be a definite "Yes." In some political quarters, however, there is talk of qualifying that answer on some points and leaving it to the Entente to decide whether the reply, so qualified, is acceptable.

Urges Signing to Save Germany.

That there has been a strong tide flowing in the direction of signing among advanced Liberals is shown by an expression of opinion in a leading article in the Frankfuter Zeitung, which has caused no little sensation in political circles here. It maintains that Germany's loud "no" when the terms were first known was understandable and that the Government has nothing to regret in putting forward its counter-proposals, despite their failure to achieve a great deal.

"The time will come," it goes on, "when the world will read the German counterproposals much more readily than it does today. When the enemy proposals show themselves to be impossible of fulfilment we shall be able to point to our counterproposals.

"When first we received the enemy's conditions, the question of 'yes' or 'no' did not immediately arise, but now our position is quite another one, for we stand before an ultimatum. Of the two tragic paths before us we must choose that by which we shall ensure to the German people the possibility of continued existence until we reach better times. If we refuse, then we must be defenseless."

Having pointed to the miseries and dangers which the country will have to endure in case of the terms being accepted, the Zeitung insists that signing will at least permit the German people to continue to live and that the economic as well as territorial conditions will and must be revised.

"For the time will come," it says, "when all peoples will refuse to endure that naked force and brutal materialism which have created this treaty. Then a new and real peace treaty will be made and our one duty now is be sure that the German people will be there to make it."

The Eastern question continues to be a great and sinister one, dominating the whole situation. Herr Winnig, High Commissioner of West Prussia, by his fiery proclamation stating that the Germans there will defend their land with armed force, has called forth many others in a similar tone.

He is working with Otto Hoersing, who is now High Commissioner of the three Silesian and Posen. They are making all possible preparations for resistance to the Poles and every message from the eastern regions shows that popular passion is rapidly rising to a point at which it will no longer be controllable.

plan would not only place an iron circle about Germany, but would put Marshal Foch in a position to control, beyond the chance of a misadventure the best efforts the German military machine might put forth. Should Germany, in blind rage, make a stab at Poland, and the Allies should decide to help her, there would be a free passageway from Bavaria through Czechoslovakia to Poland. Should Germany hit southward, the Allies could rush aid to that part of the surrounding circle. Should Germany turn against the western part of the circle she would find strength enough to deal with her.

Would Keep Bolsheviki In.

There is one other good feature attached to the execution of such a plan. It would prevent Germany overrunning allied countries with Bolshevism. The German Bolsheviki who have reached France, Belgium and England have gone through Switzerland and Holland. This plan of strategy would close those exits.

According to opinion here it is not necessary to occupy all of Germany to bring her to terms.

This is cheaper and more effective. Germany, with half her territory under allied control, with an iron ring about her, with needed food cut off, with certain defeat staring her in the face in case of any military effort, it is held, would soon be a humbled Germany. Those Germans who say that Germany has nothing to lose by not signing the treaty and allowing Marshal Foch's plans to go into execution, it is felt here, are bringing upon their nation a harsh lesson at the hands of a master teacher.

PARIS, June 21, (Associated Press.)—Measures have been completed by the navy for tightening the blockade of Germany, if such action becomes necessary. The units which will take part in the blockade are ready for immediate service.

Rhineland for Signing.

Sentiment in the Rhineland has crystallized into a demand that Germany accept the peace terms. There has all along been a belief along the Rhine that the Germans should sign, and the sight of American troops on the march in the last two days has brought home the reality of the situation to the Germans in occupied territory. Seeing that the Allies mean business, they are in favor of preventing a renewal of the war. The suggestion that Matthias Erzberger, leader of the Centre Party and political idol of the Rhineland, may head the new peace commission to accept the terms, meets with the strongest approval.

The Corpus Christi holiday yesterday gave the Germans an opportunity to discuss the situation, and, almost without exception, one heard expressions of hope that Weimar would accept. The Germans here take little stock in Clemenceau's newspaper declarations in Berlin that Germany has been so insulted she cannot accept. Former army officers, who realize better than laymen what Marshal Foch can do to Germany, are strongest in advocacy of signing. A German Major expressed such an opinion to me this morning when I asked him about the strong statements of editors and politicians. He replied, when the American saloon, "You never eat a thing as hot as it is cooked."

Reports reaching here within the last twenty-four hours that Noske has come out at Weimar in favor of acceptance have greatly increased the hope that the terms will be signed. There are reports also that the Germans will ask for more delay for consideration of peace pact conditions.

A big factor in the attitude of the Rhineland Germans is that the Catholic Church favors signing the Peace Treaty. A great majority of Rhinelanders are ardent Catholics.

Corpus Christi Day was celebrated with great devotion in Coblenz. More than 10,000 persons were in the procession. Of this number fully two-thirds were children, with a marked predominance of boys—potential machine-gunners.

Great Activity in Our Zone.

COBLENZ, June 18, (Associated Press.)—Divisions of the Third Army, after being away from battlefields and war scenes for seven months, have again been plunged into the stirring activities which generally precede the actual thunder of war. An army, unperturbed by the work of the Peace Conference and thinking much of home, has suddenly been galvanized into the life the soldier endures before an armistice and endowed with renewed vigor. It is today moving forward toward the edge of the great semi-circle which marks the dividing line between the occupied areas and the uninvaded sections of Germany.

This was the most stirring day at Third Army headquarters and among the 1st and 2d Divisions holding the east bank of the Rhine since the Americans moved in about six months ago. Late yesterday orders were flashed from headquarters in Coblenz to the divisions across the Rhine, ordering them to prepare to march into the zone of concentration. Within a short time the orders were transmitted to officers commanding companies and soon non-commissioned officers were routing their superiors out of their billets and clubs and relaying the concentration orders which had come from Marshal Foch.

While the civilians in the small towns looked upon the military activities, sometimes with bewilderment, the soldiers rushed to finish their packing and to find their helmets, rifles, and gas masks, which had already been issued.

The 2d Division was the first to move, getting under way early today. Along the Sayn Valley, which meets the Rhine near Neuweid, which has been the division headquarters, the 2d, with its infantry, machine guns, artillery and all the paraphernalia of war, pushed forward. Ordinarily the Sayn Valley is cool and peaceful in Summer, but today it appeared somewhat like the Valley of the Ourcq last Summer, when the Germans, driving the Germans back to the Vesle.

All day clouds of dust followed the movement of the tractors and guns of the 17th Field Artillery, which moved from the forts of Ehrenbreitstein out to the edge of the bridgehead, where the great valley stretches away toward the north. Snorting and trembling, but always moving forward, the tractors surprised civilians along the roadway into some realization of real warfare. Tonight the American soldiers are sleeping beneath the sky in the open fields, while the country in every direction is dotted with smouldering fires where the soldiers' hurried supper was prepared. With the infantry are engineers, sanitary trains and signal corps men who strung wires as they went ahead. Even observation balloons moved up to get a better look into Germany.

The concentration of the 1st Division is well under way and will be completed before Saturday night. As the men worked and marched today they sang as only American soldiers can. Officers said the doughboys wanted Germany to sign the treaty and, after that, to go home, but if the Germans did not sign—"look out, Germany!"

Calls Our Army "Hand Picked."

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Army officials said today the American forces now preparing to advance into Germany could operate as a unit, separate from its home base for a year or more if circumstances required. They declared that the force of 225,000 men was probably the best equipped ever assembled.

The personnel was described as practically "hand-picked," with equipment of modern type. Great depots, situated in the area behind the Coblenz bridgehead, all filled with the best of the reserve supply of each division detached and returned to the United States, before the remaining surplus is concentrated further in the rear for disposal.

In the event of an advance it is the opinion here that the 1st and 2d Divisions will be the active elements, with the 3d and 4th in the immediate reserve and the 5th holding the third line.

AMERICAN ACTIVITY STARTLES RHINELAND

1st and 2d Divisions Move Into New Positions for Advance Into Germany.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

COBLENZ, June 19.—This morning brought an unaccustomed sight to the Germans at the Coblenz bridgehead. To their amazement they could see an American army quitting bivouac. Across the fields for miles and miles they saw khaki "pup" tents, they saw horses and mules tethered, they saw countless Liberty trucks drawn up along the roads—they saw an army ready to push into the heart of Germany. Villages on the outskirts of our bridgehead which had sheltered 100 or 200 Americans saw their places filled with thousands. And instead of good-natured youths seeking a chance to snatch a sly word with some fraulein they saw serious fighting men, armed and ready to go again, about the business which brought them to Europe.

The Germans had heard that if they refused to sign the Allies would advance, but movement of our troops brings home to them the stern realities of the situation.

No one gives a very convincing explanation of why the movement of our troops should begin six days before they can possibly be ordered ahead, but that lack of explanation does not change the fact that yesterday some 100,000 Americans quit their soft billets and the surroundings of the six months which have passed since they reached the Rhine and got on to the roads. And those soldier lads brought back memories of just a year ago, when they were holding the Germans at Belleau Woods and at Lethioulet. The dust flew in clouds, automobiles dashed wildly about, mule drivers cursed, soldiers sweated, and it truly looked as if the war had begun again.

After the six months these doughboys have lived among the Germans not a few have made friends at Coblenz. I went through many villages yesterday where our soldier boys were leaving, and I saw tears in the eyes of more than one German girl as she stood mutely watching the moving troops. I heard some of the older Germans say they were sorry to see the Americans who had lived among them depart. This sentiment among the Germans grows out of their having been better treated by the Americans than they were ever treated by their own authorities. It is not love of Americans in general, but of our men they have known.

There was an element of humor in moving about among our soldiers yesterday and seeing their chagrin at having to go back to wartime living. Here is a Major, who had two rooms and bath, and who tonight must sleep on his dusty bedding roll on a bare floor. Here is a Lieutenant, who had a corner room in a Rhine hotel, and now must sleep for some nights in a hay loft over a barn in a little village on the outskirts of the Coblenz bridgehead, and so on.

To understand this movement it must be pointed out that what went on and what is going on today is that the whole 1st Division has been concentrated for quick movement purposes just behind our bridgehead. The 2d Division has moved up and taken over all the old outposts of the line. This has necessitated the moving of the men from their quarters into new locations.

The infantry will be loaded into Liberty trucks on the morning the movement starts, and should it be ordered thousands will be rushed that same day to their objective in the line, setting what is said would be a record advance for any troops for one day.

These preparatory movements will probably be completed tomorrow, leaving our troops four days with nothing to do but wait. A division of French cavalry has moved through our bridgehead, taking up a position on our left, between us and the British. Meanwhile the German authorities in the territory ahead of us are cautioning their people to sit tight and to behave if the Americans advance, which is very good advice.

CONSULT AT AMERONGEN ON EX-KAISER'S FUTURE

German Visitors Continue Active —Dutch Ministry of Justice Now Guarding Castle.

AMERONGEN, June 20, (Associated Press.)—It is stated in reliable circles that the presence in Amerongen of visitors from Germany is connected with plans for the future residence of the former Emperor. Discussions are said to be in progress for the purchase of a piece of property in Holland, lying in a secluded spot within twenty miles of Utrecht, but nothing definite has been decided.

Dr. Kriege of the German Foreign Office, who is charged with realization of the former monarch's private property, is understood to have brought a report that the German Government intends to deduct a considerable sum as taxation for unearned increment. The amount is variously reported at from 1,000,000 to 20,000,000 marks.

Friedrich von Berg, former chief of the Imperial Civil Cabinet, is said to have come to Amerongen to give Herr Hohenzollern the benefit of his expert advice, he being thoroughly acquainted with the erstwhile ruler's affairs.

Other German officials who are here were busily engaged this afternoon with the ex-Kaiser. Observers are of the opinion that some movement is afoot, as the services around the castle have been changed since yesterday. The military police, under orders of the War Office, have been removed, but armed country police, under the Ministry of Justice, remain guarding the grounds.

The lanes around two sides of the castle, which hitherto have been open to villagers only, have been closed to everybody, but the other sides of the castle are still open, although constantly patrolled by police in order to prevent people from standing about. The village telegraph office, which has been open for Government purposes until 11 o'clock at night, will be closed hereafter at 7:30, while the staff has been reduced.

CONFERENCE OFFICIALS PREPARE FOR SIGNING

PARIS, June 21, (Associated Press.)—The official copies of the Peace Treaty to be signed by representatives of Germany and the Allies are now being prepared in the office of Paul Dutasta, General Secretary of the Peace Conference, according to Marcel Hutin, writing in L'Echo de Paris.

Each of the allied representatives whose names must appear on the document has been asked formally for specimens of his signature and seal.

VERSAILLES, June 21.—Officials of the Foreign Ministry and military authorities attended a meeting at the local Prefecture of Police today to make arrangements for adequate police measures on the day the Peace Treaty is signed.

The authorities visited the palace this afternoon and examined the plans for police protection previously made by M. Oudaille, former Prefect of the Department of Seine-et-Oise. It was decided to modify these plans considerably. Preparations for policing in and around the palace must be completed by Tuesday.

EBERT THANKS HINDENBURG

Text of Correspondence on Field Marshal's Retirement.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—The text of the correspondence between Field Marshal von Hindenburg and President Ebert of Germany, in which the former expressed his desire to return to private life, have been received here. The correspondence follows:

To Ebert:

Sir: Peace negotiations having commenced, I beg to make the following statement to the Imperial Government:

I have remained at the head of the army during various changes because I considered it my duty to serve the Fatherland in tim of need. As soon as the preliminary peace has been concluded I shall consider that my task is at an end. My desire then to retire to private life will, in view of my great age, be generally understood; all the more so as it is well known how difficult it is (remembering my views, my personality, and my past) to remain in office at the present time. V. HINDENBURG.

President Ebert's reply read:

To Hindenburg:

Sir: I note your resolve to retire from your office of head of the chief army command as soon as the preliminary peace has been signed. While agreeing with your wish, I take the opportunity of expressing the undying thanks of the German nation for the great services you have rendered to the Fatherland, both now, and during the war. The German nation will never forget that in the most difficult times you remained at your post and placed yourself at the disposal of the Fatherland. EBERT.

Lloyd George Has a Sore Throat.

PARIS, June 21, (Associated Press.)—Premier Lloyd George is confined to his room with a most severe sore throat. His indisposition prevented his attendance yesterday at the meeting of the Supreme Allied Council. His place at the conference was taken by Arthur J. Balfour, British Foreign Secretary.

WOLFF SEES A LACK OF BIG MEN AT WEIMAR

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

"Brockdorff-Rantzau and the other peace delegates stand like a rock, in a fluctuation of contradictory opinion, for not signing the Peace Treaty. These six men, by nature, origin, upbringing, and career so different, learned their lessons in just as varied schools of life. But on the question of signing or not signing, the pacifist and the professor with opinions exactly like those of the diplomatist and the merchant are as convinced the treaty must be rejected as are the labor leader and the expert on international law. All believe that Germany will obtain a more tolerable peace if the people have strength and determination enough to hold out just a little longer.

"It is certainly remarkable how these six got the same conviction in the Versailles atmosphere and that neither the wire entanglements nor the otherwise rather harsh French hospitality could shake this conviction.

"The sea of parties, surging around this rock, is swayed by many different winds. Some politicians change their opinions frequently under the impressions of arguments for or against signing. They are hardly to blame, because it proves that they are conscientiously weighing all arguments.

"What bothers them, perhaps, is the fear that a renewal of the blockade might cause a devastating starvation, but other economic difficulties, which have nothing whatever to do with the blockade, are prophesied by those who would sign. What the latter fear more than anything else is that some of the south German States might weaken. This might be answered by saying that the French occupation would probably be of short duration, and as far we have noticed that foreign domination only tended to strengthen the sentiment for national German homogeneousness.

"These pro-signers forget that if the treaty is accepted French troops will remain in the French provinces for fourteen years. If in a few weeks we have French occupation, must not the same be feared to an even much higher degree in the remaining Rhenish provinces if the French remain fifteen year? This is how things stand today.

"The solution of the problem seems very nebulous. The hour calls for big men, of whom there are not many in Weimar."

BIG PARTIES REJECTED CABINET'S SOLUTION

Resignation Was Forced When Centrists and Majority Socialists Turned Down Program.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, June 20.—The Weimar correspondent of the Berlingske Tidende sends the following account of the final steps which led to the German Cabinet's resignation:

"All the parties which were known to be divided in opinion held almost continuous sittings, examining every method of attaining unity, but every time a new vote was taken new results were obtained. At last the Centre Party was able to arrive at a basis as follows:

"To accept the peace terms, but to make reservation regarding Germany's responsibility for the outbreak of the war and the delivery of the ex-Kaiser and others for trial by the Allies, and to make it clear to the Allies that the economic terms were impossible of fulfilment.

"This decision was arrived at after a vote in which 79 were recorded in favor of it, while the rest of the party, whose number was not given, abstained. The result was then communicated to the Majority Socialists, who agreed except on the point that the reservations should not be held as conditions of Germany's 'Yes,' but should be presented to the Allies as separate statements.

"There then remained the Democratic Party. This party, which of all those represented in the coalition has been the strongest and most united opponent of acceptance, agreed to the Centre Party's decision, but added special clauses affecting East and West Prussia which made the decision so acceptable to the party that it was approved by a vote of 58 to 1, while seven members abstained. The one member in the negative was Freiserr von Richtofen, whose name has been mentioned in connection with the reconstructed Cabinet.

"The basis of the reply, as amended by the Democrats, was laid before the Cabinet, which by a majority approved it, and attempted to bring the Centrist and the Majority Socialist Parties into agreement also. This failed, as both parties rejected the Democratic proposal unanimously, and the Cabinet therefore had no choice but to resign."

MANY CHANGES IN TREATY TEXT

BUT REPARATIONS STAND

Alterations Affecting That Section Are Few and Purely Verbal.

WON'T RELEASE TEXT HERE

But an Unofficial Copy Is Likely to Reach the Senate Committee.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 19.—The text of the revised Peace Treaty offered to Germany, which was made public this evening, contains many changes—so many as to cause surprise. It must not be supposed from this statement, however, that in their response to the German peace delegation, which was published this week, the Council of the great powers conceded any material changes made by them in the text as originally drafted and handed to the enemy representatives May 7.

The surprise is due mainly to the complete new drafting of several of the most important sections and the countless modifications in phraseology, most of them of a minor character.

But those who attempt to study the revised version with the text of the original for comparison will find difficulty in understanding a considerable number of the most material alterations, so completely is the text revised in these particular parts.

The revised or final draft of the treaty was made public by the authority of the Peace Conference as a whole, which means by authority of the Council of the Great Powers. If each nation had had its own discretion as to making the treaty public the chances are that it would have been withheld by the American Peace Commission or the American Government from the home press. While President Wilson presumably assented to the action of the Council in authorizing the publication of the revised draft, he has stood on the precedent that the Senate as part of the treaty-making power of the United States must determine whether the ban of secrecy shall be removed from the executive communications sent it. In the present instance the revised treaty will not be made public by the State Department.

The President, it is understood, decided to follow the course which led him to withhold the original draft of the treaty from the Senate. He takes the ground that the Senate is entitled to the treaty only when the official copy is sent to it by him—that is, after the Germans have signed the document and the signed draft has arrived in Washington and has been transmitted to the Senate in confidence, with a message from the President.

The original draft of the German treaty was cabled from Paris to the State Department, but the changes which appear in the revised draft were not cabled. The State Department will get copies of the revised draft when the special courier who left Paris this evening arrives in Washington. Very few copies of the revised draft were available, and the courier carried only about a dozen of them. It is not doubted that they will be made available in some unofficial way to the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, but officially President Wilson cannot be held responsible for violating precedent and tradition.

The revised draft does not contain the provisions for the occupation of German territory by the allied troops, which appeared in the original draft. These, as already made known, have been embodied in an additional convention, the text of which was made public this week.

In view of prior explanations of the changes in the treaty text it is unnecessary to explain them in detail. The revised text shows that in addition to the plebiscite ordered to determine whether Upper Silesia shall go to Poland or remain German, the Poles will receive about ten miles less of the Baltic coast line than that granted them by the original treaty. Germany also keeps part of Schleswig taken from her by the original treaty. Most of this is along the North Sea.

Germany gains in addition through the abolition of the international commission for the control of the Kiel Canal.

No Changes in Reparations.

June 20.—Comparison of the original draft of the German treaty with the revised document shows that few changes have been made in Part 8, entitled "Reparations." To the German mind modifications, of this part were as important as, if not more so, than alterations in Germany's interest in the part devoted to Upper Silesia, with its rich coal fields.

It is apparent, however, from the comparison noted, that the modifications of the reparation clauses made by the Council of the Great Powers were confined mainly to interpretative assurances given the Germans in the Allies' final answer and were not made to any extent in the text of the treaty itself.

For illustration, Article 241, which the Germans asserted gave the Allied Reparations Commission control of German financial and taxing legislation—and, indeed, seems to have that effect—remains in the treaty unchanged. But its purpose is considerably altered in the direction of leniency toward Germany by assurances in the allied note that the victorious Governments had no intention of dictating Germany's domestic legislation for the period of thirty years the Reparations Commission might continue in existence.

One feature of the reparations section which is unchanged in the revised draft requires that Germany compensate each Allied Government for the damage done its civilian population "during the period of belligerency of each as an allied or associated power against Germany." This is being interpreted as absolving Germany from making special reparation for the murder of Americans on the Lusitania, that vessel having been sunk when the United States was not engaged as a belligerent.

Comparison of the revised with the original text of the reparation clauses shows that the changes are purely verbal, and few at that. In no clause is any modification of the terms made. The verbal alterations are so inconsequential as to be unworthy of note. This applies to both the sections and the seven annexes which comprise this long part.

DENIKINE'S TROOPS RUSH TOWARD VOLGA

50,000 REDS IN RETREAT

EKATERINODAR, Southern Russia, June 17.—The forces of General Denikine, the Anti-Bolshevist leader in Southern Russia, are advancing rapidly toward the Volga in pursuit of the demoralized Soviet troops. The Denikine forces are within twenty miles of Tsaritsin, on the Volga, south of Saratov.

Fifty thousand Bolsheviki, it is reported, are fleeing in panic toward the Volga from the River Don region and have passed Slavianak, leaving rolling stock behind them.

To the northeast, on the Donets-Tsaritsin Railway, General Denikine's troops have captured four howitzers, fifteen machine guns, and thousands of rifles.

OMSK, June 12, (Associated Press.)—The City of Ufa, east of Samara, has been evacuated by the Siberian troops of General Galitzin, according to an official announcement today. The Siberians have retired behind the Ufa River.

General Diedrichs, a corps commander of the old Russian Army, has been appointed commander of the western armies of the Omsk Government in succession to General Lanjine.

A Bolshevist wireless message received in London on June 11 announced that Ufa had been recaptured from the Siberians.

ARMY COMMISSION NAMED TO TRY MINOR

COBLENZ, June 20, (Associated Press.)—Major Gen. Charles P. Summerall, Brig. Gen. Francis P. Marshall, Brig. Gen. Fred W. Sladen, Brig. Gen. Frank E. Bamford, Brig. Gen. Wendell C. Neville, Colonel Frank H. Adams, and Colonel Raymond A. Wheeler have been appointed members of a special military commission to try Robert Minor, the American newspaper correspondent and cartoonist, who is under arrest here. Lieut. Col. Henry Stinness will appear as prosecutor and will be assisted by Captain Thomas Barber. Minor has been notified that he may select a civil attorney to defend him if he so desires.

The charges against Minor are still in the course of preparation and will probably be filed early next week. His arrest, which occurred in Paris, was reported at the time to have been in connection with the circulation of radical propaganda in areas occupied by allied troops. The commission will meet at the call of General Summerall, who is expected to return to Coblenz early next week. The hearings in the case will be held here.

Ask Report on Army Officers.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Secretary Baker is requested in a resolution adopted today by the House to report the number of commissioned army officers on duty in Washington and the number holding higher rank than that to which they are entitled in the regular army.

CLOTHES FOR WAR VICTIMS.

Red Cross Finds Garments More Needed Than Food.

The Atlantic Division Headquarters of the American Red Cross announced yesterday that sixty-five tons of knitting yarn, originally purchased by the American Red Cross for the making of socks and sweaters for American soldiers, has been manufactured into 78,000 yards of cloth and 33,000 shawls, fifty inches square, and shipped abroad to help provide for the destitute war sufferers of Europe. The cloth consists of 50,000 yards, all wool, for blankets and heavy garments, and 28,000 yards, eighty inches wide, with a cotton warp.

Since the first of the year, the American Red Cross has also shipped to Europe 1,060,617 pounds of yarn and more than 22,300,000 yards of material for the making of garments and textiles valued at $11,236,141 and including dress goods, cotton flannel, outing flannel, bathrobing, bleached and unbleached muslin, sateen, twill jeans and gingham. Large quantities of buttons, hooks, and eyes, thread, needles, and similar accessories have also been sent abroad.

This material will be used in France or sent to Belgium, Poland, and the Balkan States, where it is most needed, and will be fashioned into garments by the people who receive it. It is estimated that the German invasion of France and Belgium alone made wanderers of 1,250,000 people, and Red Cross investigators have reported the need for clothing among these and other war sufferers as being even more imperative than food.

SHIP BALKS AT LAUNCHING.

Holiday in Camden and Vessel Wouldn't Move.

CAMDEN, N. J., June 21.—Because the Sea Girt, the big passenger and cargo carrier, which was to have been launched at the yards of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation at 10 o'clock this morning, refused to move from the ways, the launching was postponed until tomorrow morning.

For twenty-five minutes 500 workmen attempted to free the vessel, but she would not move. Tide conditions then changed and the officials of the company feared to take a chance in launching the big ship in the low tide.

Today had been set aside as Jersey Day and a large crowd was present. Senator Walter E. Edge, former Governor of New Jersey, was invited to name the ship and the sponsor was to be Miss Elizabeth Thompson of Red Bank.

The Sea Girt will have accommodations for 1,500 passengers and 9,000 tons of cargo. She can be converted into a transport capable of carrying 5,500 troops. She is 535 feet long, with seventy-two foot beam.

ALLIED NOTE QUERY BEFORE THE BIG FOUR

REPARATIONS QUESTION UP

Galician Frontiers and Conflicts Between Ukrainians and Poles Also Considered.

PARIS, June 21.—The Council of Four of the Peace Conference received a note today from the German peace delegation asking if Premier Clemenceau's note explaining the reparations clauses of the Peace Treaty was a binding part of the treaty and having the same force as the treaty itself.

The Council at its morning session considered this note, calling in its experts on the question of reparation. Baron Sonnino, the Italian Foreign Minister, was present.

Before the receipt of the German note the Council had resumed consideration of the uncompleted portion of the Austrian treaty.

The Council of Five and the Council of Foreign Ministers met this afternoon to study the question of the eastern frontier of Galicia.

The conflicts between the Ukrainians and the Poles, which are continuing, were also considered.

According to a Berlin dispatch Friday night the German note to the Peace Conference cited twelve instances in which the covering note of the allied reply to the Germans announced concessions which were not contained in the altered text of the Peace Treaty. The Allies were asked, the dispatch added, how far they bound themselves to these concessions, and written confirmation was requested that the contents of the covering note and the memorandum on these points formed part of the new peace offer.

Signor Giolitti, from 1903 to 1905 and from 1906 to 1909, and Ambassador at London from 1905 to 1906.

Just as the assumption of the portfolio of the interior by Nitti will mean an overhauling of the internal government of the peninsula, so, with Tittoni in the Foreign Office, sweeping changes seem certain to take place in embassies and legations which for many years have been manipulated by the insular and ultra-Italian policy of Baron Sidney Sonnino.

ORLANDO'S FAILURE AT HOME.

Deputies Would Not Condone It After His Defeat in Paris.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, June 19.—Today's events in the Chamber of Deputies came like a bolt from the blue. No one was more surprised than Premier Orlando himself, whose speech showed that he was confident he could carry the day.

Before the sitting no unusual excitement indicated the course affairs were taking. In fact, it was noted that fewer Deputies had arrived in Rome for the opening of Parliament than is usually the case. Many Deputies, however, especially the intransigeant Nationalists, had for a long time been saying that the existing state of affairs must be ended in the interest of the nation.

The failure of the Italian delegation in Paris to satisfy the national aspirations in the Adriatic, the incessant strikes, and the high cost of living, have led to demands for a new Ministry. Many Deputies advocate the forming of a Cabinet of younger men who are ready to undertake responsibilities and dare to act. This suggestion is opposed by older Deputies, who say that young men who have had no experience would make as many mistakes as those whose heads are demanded.

Ever since Orlando's return from Paris in May without definite promises from the Allies concerning the Adriatic question his prestige has waned. A well-known Senator, speaking on this subject, said:

"We have not been treated like an ally, but like an enemy, or worse than an enemy. The Jugoslavs, who are our bitterest foes, had more consideration shown them."

The feeling against Italy's allies was illustrated by the fierce cries of protest from all parties in the Chamber today when Orlando asked the nation to keep faith with its allies.

It is felt here that the real reason for the Premier's fall was his utter failure to cope with internal troubles. The workers vied with one another in striking to see how much they could extort from the Government, knowing that the authorities would resist for a short time to save their faces and finally surrender. The inevitable consequence was that the raising of wages brought about an increase in the cost of living. Affairs had come to such a pass that a chief scavenger who had four scavengers under him got higher wages than a Major in the Italian Army.

NAMED FOR EARLY CONVOY.

Three Hundred Sixteenth Service Battalion; 319th Service Battalion, Company D and Headquarters; 345th Service Battalion, Company C; 355th, 313th, 313th, 314th, and 320th Supply Companies; 338th Service Battalion, Company D; Refrigerating Plant Company No. 493; Mobile Laundry Company No. 330; Transportation Corps' Companies Nos. 41, 164, 135, 121, 343, 344, and 376; Butchery Companies Nos. 322, 323, 347, 319, 330, 342; 447th Engineers, Headquarters and Companies C and D; 113th Mobile Ordnance Repair Shop; Balloon Company No. 101; Third Pioneer Infantry, Company G; 51th Pioneer Infantry, Detachment Company I; 395th Military Police; Motor Sanitary Train 311, Headquarters Detachment and Companies A to D inclusive; 366th Pioneer Infantry Band; Five Truck and Hose Companies 317 and 371; Railhead Supply Detachment No. 311; Salvage Company No. 6; 338th Engineers, Company D.

WILL WITHDRAW WARSHIPS.

Their Use as Transports Will End on July 15.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Battleships and cruisers now used in transporting American soldiers from France will be withdrawn from that service by July 15. Those now in Atlantic ports will not return to France, but those overseas or en route will complete present trips.

Announcement was made at the Navy Department today that the vessels would be reconverted immediately for use with the fleet. Practically all of the battleships of the pre-dreadnought type and most of the armored cruisers have been used in the transport service.

The withdrawal of the warships was made possible, officials said, by the rapid progress that had been made in returning the troops and the assigning of additional merchant vessels to this service.

WARCRAFT GROUND IN RIVER

CAIRO, Ill., June 21.—The destroyer Isabel and the submarine K-5, attached to the anti-submarine flotilla cruising in waters of the Mississippi Valley in the interest of naval recruiting, were aground today in the Mississippi River about 20 miles north of here and were said to be stuck fast. A tug is going from Cairo to assist the stranded craft.

The flotilla was hurrying south in the hope of reaching deep water before the upper river became too shallow for navigation.

SEE PERIL TO PEACE IN ITALY.

British Observers Think Pro-German Giolittians Will Gain Power.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 21.—The Italian political crisis is believed here to have created serious complications in the progress of peace. The most hopeful view taken goes no further than the suggestion that Italy may be chief, if not the only, sufferer from difficulties largely of her own making. Giollittian influences, which are more or less pro-German, are held largely responsible.

Today's news from Weimar, pointing to the German acceptance of the peace terms, however counterbalances the fear that the possible defection of Italy may be the result of Teutonic wire-pulling. Italian political parties are factions devoted to their own particular interests rather than to ideals. One section of the official Socialists is working for a revolution along Bolshevist lines.

The economic and industrial situation favors the troublemakers who applaud Lenin and Trotsky, at all their meetings and denounce the "Imperialist-capitalist" Governments of the Entente. The other main Socialist party, headed by Biasoiati, failed to assert itself in the crisis provoked by Wilson's Fiume declaration and was engulfed, like the official Socialist, in the wave of Nationalism. With the fall of the Orlando Cabinet the Giolittians are expected to become the dominant party.

QUALIFY TREATY, SAYS ELIHU ROOT

of the quandary in which the League opponents admittedly found themselves was evident through his espousal of the Root idea. As one Senator expressed it, the Root letter came as a "mattress for the Republicans to fall upon."

With Mr. Lodge favoring the Root policy the issue in the League of Nations battle becomes clear cut. The Republican leaders, it was said tonight, would immediately try to swing debate in the Senate so as to concentrate upon the Root plan. Few Senators believe the covenant could be changed through direct amendment.

To Abandon Knox Resolution.

In the meantime it is understood that the fight for the Knox resolution will be abandoned. If Mr. Knox should ask for a vote upon his measure next week, it could not come, probably, until after the expiration of the time within which Germany must sign or refuse to sign the treaty of peace. Mr. Knox would not even indicate today that he would ever ask for a vote.

While many Republican leaders have manifested advocacy of a qualifying resolution, as an expression of dissent from matters to which the Senate did not wish to agree, a radical opposition to the League of Nations, such as Senator Borah of Idaho and Senator Johnson of California, have insisted that they would not accept such a program. They want the League of Nations either amended directly or rejected by the Senate.

The Root proposal, Republican leaders say, would win nearly a majority of the Republican Senators to its support, while enough Democrats, they believe, might favor it to make adoption of the qualifying resolution possible. Advocates of the League of Nations, on the other hand, maintain that no qualifying resolution would command support of the necessary majority. They point out that only one or two Democrats can be counted upon as standing, on a final vote, for any change in the League covenant, either through a qualifying resolution or direct amendment.

In his letter Mr. Root, while attacking features of the League of Nations covenant as not safeguarding American sovereignty, concedes that the covenant embraces a "great deal of very high value, which the world ought not lose." He dwells upon the delay enforced through the League covenant in the event of serious disputes, which would prevent the world rushing headlong into war, the recognition of self-government and the establishment of governments by nations which, before the war, were under autocratic rule.

Mr. Root goes on to advise that, if the League covenant is to remain in the Treaty of Peace, the only way to eliminate features that are regarded as inimical to the importance of America would be through the qualifying resolutions, which ought to be clearly expressed by the Senate:

"1. As to Article X., under which the United States would be obliged to guarantee, with other nations in the League, the territorial integrity and political independence of all other members.

"There is nothing in the League covenant that will prevent the United States from asserting its right to withdraw under the two years' notice clause, the United States to be the judge of whether its obligations under the League covenant have been fulfilled.

"2. That the United States under no circumstances relinquish its traditional attitude of independent action upon purely American questions, these including, by immigration, the race problem and the Monroe Doctrine.

"Mr. Root is determinedly opposed to Article X., which, he says, was not embraced in the original plan of General Smuts, as submitted to the Peace Conference. If the United States agrees to this article, he says, it would probably not be able to fulfill its obligation under it. He urges against the United States being "forced into such a position."

Mr. Root advocates a straightforward assertion by the United States that it would go to the aid of any European nation—say, France—if emergency should warrant, but argues against engaging in any "indefinite alliance."

"To the Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge,
Washington, D. C.:

"My dear Senator: You were good enough to ask that, after studying the whole of the proposed treaty with Germany and the amendments already made to the League of Nations part of it, I should write you my opinion as to the amendments and as to the action which would be wise, in view of existing international conditions.

"I should be glad to see the peace terms and the League of Nations covenant separated, as proposed in the resolution offered by Senator Knox, so that the latter could be considered by the people of the country without coercion from the necessities of speedy peace.

"To avoid repetition, I inclose a copy of a letter which I wrote to Mr. Will H. Hays, March 29, 1919, proposing amendments to the League of Nations Covenant and giving the reasons for them. Amendments similar in substance were proposed at about the same time by many Americans familiar with public affairs both in and out of the Senate. The amendments subsequently made in the covenant by the Paris conference, while to some extent dealing with the subjects of the amendments so proposed, are very inadequate and unsatisfactory.

"Nothing has been done to provide for the ratification and strengthening of a system of arbitration or judicial decision upon questions of legal right. Nothing has been done toward providing for the revision or development of international law. In these respects, principles insisted upon by the United States without variation for half a century are still ignored, and we are left with a program which rests the hope of the world for future peace in a government of men and not of laws, following the dictates of expediency, and not of right. Nothing has been done to limit the vast and incalculable obligation which Article X. of the covenant undertakes to impose upon each member of the League to preserve against external aggression the territorial integrity and political independence of all members of the League all over the world.

"The clause authorizing withdrawal from the league on two years' notice leaves a doubt whether a mere change that we had not performed some international obligation would not put it in the power of the Council to take jurisdiction of the charge as a disputed question and keep us in the League indefinitely against our will.

"The clause which has been inserted regarding the Monroe Doctrine is erroneous in its description of the doctrine and ambiguous in meaning. Other purely American questions, as, for example, questions relating to immigration, are protected only by a clause apparently empowering the Council to determine whether such questions are solely within the domestic jurisdiction of the United States. I do not think that in these respects the United States is sufficiently protected against most injurious results, which are wholly unnecessary for the establishment and maintenance of this League of Nations.

What Ought to be Done?

"On the other hand, it still remains that there is in the covenant a great deal of high value that the world ought not to lose. The arrangement to make conferences of the powers automatic when there is danger of war; provisions for joint action, as of course by representatives of the nations concerned in matters affecting common interests; the agreement for delay in case of serious disputes, with opportunity to bring the public opinion of the world to bear on the disputants and to induce cool and deliberate judgment; the recognition of racial and popular rights to the freedom of local self-government, and the plan, indispensable in some form, for setting up Governments in the vast regions deprived by the war of the autocratic rule which has maintained order—all these ought not to be lost, if that can possibly be avoided.

"The condition of Europe requires prompt action. Industry has not revived there. Its revival requires raw materials. To obtain these credit is necessary, and for this there must be security for the fruits of enterprise, and for this there must be peace. Satan is finding evil work for idle hands to do in Europe—evil work that affects the whole world, including the United States.

"Under these circumstances, what ought to be done?

"I am clear that, if the covenant has to be considered with the peace terms included, the Senate ought to include in its resolution of consent to the ratification an expression of such reservations and understandings as will cure as far as possible the defects which I have pointed out. You will probably be unable to do anything now about the system of arbitration and the development of international law. You can, however, put into the resolution of consent a reservation refusing to agree to Article X. and I think you should do so; you can clarify the meaning of the withdrawal article, and you can also include in your resolution the substance of the third amendment which I proposed in my letter to Mr. Hays of March 29, relating to purely American questions, and I think you should do so. These clauses of the resolution shape themselves in my own mind as follows:

"The Senate of the United States advises and consents to the ratification of the said treaty with the following reservations and understandings to be made a part of the instrument of ratification, viz.:

"(1) In advising and consenting to the ratification of the said treaty, the Senate reserves and excludes from its consent the tenth article of the covenant for the League of Nations, as to which the Senate refuses its consent.

"(2.) The Senate consents to the ratification of the said treaty, excepting Article X, aforesaid, with the understanding that whenever two years' notice of withdrawal from the League of Nations shall have been given, as provided in Article 1., no claim, charge or finding that international obligations or obligations under the covenant have not been fulfilled, will be deemed to render the two years' notice ineffectual or to keep the power giving the notice in the League after the expiration of the time specified in the notice.

"(3.) Inasmuch as, in agreeing to become a member of the League of Nations, the United States of America is moved by no interest or wish to intrude upon or interfere with the political policy or international administration of any foreign State, and by no existing or anticipated dangers in the affairs of the American continents, but accedes and keeps us in the European States that it shall join its power to theirs for the preservation of general peace, the Senate consents to the ratification of the said treaty, excepting Article X. aforesaid, with the understanding that nothing therein contained shall be construed to imply a relinquishment by the United States of America of its traditional attitude toward purely American questions, or to require the submission of its policy regarding questions which it deems to be purely American questions to the decision or recommendation of other powers.

"This reservation and these expressions of understanding are in accordance with long established precedent in the making of treaties. When included in the instrument of ratification they will not require a reopening of negotiation, but if none of the other signatories expressly objects to the ratification with such limitations, the treaty stands as limited between the United States and the other Powers.

"If any doubt were entertained as to the effect of such action, the doubt could be readily dispelled by calling upon the four other principal Powers represented in the Council to state whether they do in fact object to the entrance of the United States into the League with the understanding and reservations stated in the resolution.

"As to these limiting clauses, I wish to say something further. As to Article X.:

First—It is not an essential or even an appropriate part of the provisions for a League of Nations to preserve peace. It is an independent and indefinite alliance which may involve the parties to it in war against Powers which have in every respect complied with the provisions of the league of peace. It was not included in General Smuts's plan, the provisions of which have been reproduced almost textually in the League covenant. It stands upon its own footing as an independent alliance for the preservation of the status quo.

Second—If we agree to this article it is extremely probable that we shall be unable to keep our agreement. Making war nowadays depends upon the genuine sympathy of the people of the country at the time when the war has to be carried on. The people of the United States certainly will not be willing, ten years or twenty years hence, to send the world to fight for causes in which they may not believe or in which they have little or no interest, if that is the attitude of the people when we are hereafter called upon to wage war under Article X., no general, definite agreement made years before will make them disposed to fight, and we shall be in about the worst possible position of having made an agreement and not keeping it. Our people ought not to be forced into such a position, and we ought not to make any agreement that is liable to force them into such a position.

"The recent controversies over the disposition of Kiau-Chau and of Shantung illustrate very well the way in which territorial arrangements are likely to be made in councils of the great powers controlled by expediency. I would not vote to bind our country to go into a war 10 years to come in defense of those arrangements.

"If it is necessary for the security of Western Europe that we should agree to go to the support of, say, France, if attacked, let us agree to that particular thing plainly, so that every man and woman in the country will understand the honorable obligation we are assuming. I am in favor of that. But let us not wrap up such purpose in a vague universal obligation, under the impression that it really does not mean any thing likely to happen.

Population Complications.

"Third—It is reported that Switzerland is much disturbed over the invitation to join the League of Nations and wishes to preserve her neutrality, because her people are partly French, partly German, and partly Italian, and she wishes to keep out of all quarrels which may involve these nationalities. In this country the census of 1910 showed that 35 per cent. (more than one-third) of our people were of foreign birth or the children of foreign parents. We can call upon these people to stand by America in all American quarrels, but how can we control their sympathies and their action if American interference in foreign quarrels and taking sides in these quarrels against the countries to which they are attached by tradition and sentiment? How can we prevent dissension and hatred among our own inhabitants of foreign origin when this country interferes on foreign grounds between the races from which they spring? How can we prevent bitterness and disloyalty toward our own Government on the part of those against whose friends in their old homes we have intervened for no cause of our own?

"Article X. confronts us with consequences very similar to those which Washington had in mind when he advised us to keep out of the quarrels of Europe, and to keep the quarrels of Europe out of America. It is by following this wise policy that the United States has attained a position of unity and of disinterestedness which enables her to promote peace mightily, because she is not a party to the quarrels that threaten to disturb peace. She is free from suspicion; she is not the object of hatred or distrust; her friendship is valued, and her word is patient.

"We can be of infinitely more value to the peace of the world by keeping out of all the petty and selfish quarrels that arise than we can by binding ourselves to take part in them. Just so far as it is necessary to modify this settled, historic American policy in order to put into effect a practical plan for a League of Nations to preserve peace we ought to go, and we ought not to go one step further. The step proposed by Article X. is not necessary for such a plan, and we ought not to take it.

"As to the statement of understanding about American questions contained in the foregoing paragraph numbered 3 the most ardent advocates for accepting the League covenant exist as it stands insist that the provisions already inserted about the Monroe Doctrine and other purely American questions mean just what this proposed resolution says. If that is true, then nobody can object to the resolution, which puts the meaning beyond question. It is important not only for the interests of America but for the peace of the world that such provisions should be free from doubt and occasion for dispute. If, on the other hand, their view is wrong, and the provisions already inserted may be construed to mean what the resolution says, then the resolution certainly ought to be included in the consent to the ratifications.

Interference in Europe.

"There is one other thing to be mentioned. That is the recital of the proposed resolution, (No. 3,) disclaiming any intention by the United States to intrude upon or interfere with the political policy or internal administration of any foreign State. I think that to be of real importance, because I perceive evidences of an impression in Europe that the part taken by the representatives of the United States at Paris in the local questions and controversies of Europe indicates an abandonment by the United States of her traditional policy and a wish on her part to relate to European affairs and control European affairs, thus assuming responsibility for those affairs.

"That impression should be dispelled. It is not well founded. I am sure that the people of the United States have no intention or wish. Such interposition in the affairs of Europe as our representatives have been engaged in was properly but a temporary incident to the fact that we had engaged in the war, and had therefore to discuss the terms of peace; and we should make it clear that we neither assume responsibility for nor intend interference in the affairs of Europe beyond that necessary participation under the organization of the League of Peace which we enter upon by the request of the European nations themselves.

"To return to the subject of arbitration and the development of international law, I certainly should not advise regarding the League covenant in its present form as the final word upon an organization for the preservation of the peace of the world. I think that when the Senate consents to the ratification of the treaty with some such reservations as I have indicated, it ought also to adopt a separate resolution not a part of the action upon the treaty, but, practically at the same time, formally requesting the President, without any avoidable delay, to open negotiations with the other powers for the reestablishment and strengthening of a system of arbitration for the disposition of international disputes upon questions of right and for periodical meetings of representatives of all the powers for the revision and development of international law.

"I think that hereafter, when the life of Europe has become settled, when credit and industry are re-established there, and Governments are stable and secure, and we know what reduction of armaments the powers are going to consent to, the United States should insist upon a revision of the League covenant. I am sure that the changed circumstances will then permit material improvement.

"Faithfully yours,

"ELIHU ROOT."

Lodge's View on Letter.

When asked his opinion of the Root letter Senator Lodge said: "It speaks for itself. No comment of mine is necessary."

"Will you subscribe to the proposal for the 'qualifying resolution?'" he was asked.

"It does not matter whether changes to the League of Nations covenant are made through a resolution of reservation or through direct amendment," replied the Senator. "One is as effective as the other."

HAYS FOR KNOX RESOLUTION.

Says People Resent "Sign Here" Attitude on Peace Treaty.

Will H. Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, who returned yesterday from Washington, was asked at National Headquarters regarding his attitude toward the Knox resolution calling for separate consideration of the Peace Treaty and the League of Nations covenant. He said:

"Of course, I am for the Knox resolution. The American people will not stand for this 'sign here' attitude. That is the way they make mortgages. Our Senators are simply indicating that the client is entitled to consider the contents of his own contract and just what it will entail. The citizenship of America is the client. That is all that is involved in the Knox resolution."

EDISON FAVORS LEAGUE.

Inventor, However, Still Sees the Need for War Devices.

IRVINGTON, N. J., June 21.—In an interview he gave today while attending the Annual Field Day for employes of the Edison plant at Olympic Park, Thomas A. Edison declared himself in favor of the League of Nations covenant.

"I think the League of Nations will be all right," he said. "It may not work out perfectly, but it is better than nothing. Any experiment that's reasonable is worth trying, I believe."

Mr. Edison said in reply to further questions that he thought that inventors in this country should continue to work on war-making devices, even though peace had come. He said that he was still doing some work for the Government.

FOR CIVIL JUSTICE IN ARMY COURTS

COL. ANSELL ITS AUTHOR

Prelude Says That Law to be Effective Must Be a Rule Fixed Beyond Control of the Army.

The Senate Committee on Military Affairs yesterday gave out a pamphlet for its use, entitled "Army Articles," and containing in parallel columns the existing military law governing courts-martial cases in the United States Army and the recent bill drafted by Lieut. Col. S. T. Ansell, who was retired from his post as Acting Judge Advocate General of the army after his controversy with Major Gen. Enoch H. Crowder, the head of that department. The bill has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Chamberlain and in the House by Captain R. C. Johnson.

In a section under the heading of "Principles of the Bill," in the first pages of the pamphlet it is pointed out that the three men who framed the bill intended that the primary principle should be the establishment of military justice and its regulation by law, "rather than by mere military command." In different language, the prelude says, the principle is to "supersede personal military power over military justice by public law." It adds that "law, to be effective for this purpose, must be law in its primary sense—a rule established beyond the control of the department and of the army, which are to administer it." The basic principles of the bill are outlined as follows:

1. It proceeds in furtherance of the fundamental theory that courts-martial are inherently courts, their functions inherently judicial, and that their powers must be judicially exercised, and it discountenances and penalizes a disregard of the sacred character of these judicial duties and functions.
2. It requires that the fundamental principles of right and justice declared to be such by our law and established as necessary to a full, fair, and impartial trial shall be recognized and observed throughout the court-martial proceeding from accusation to execution.
3. It abolishes the present intolerable delegations of penal power and instead of leaving the military commander largely at liberty to determine the offense, the punishment, and the procedure, establishes these elements with that definiteness and precision which should characterize the exercise of all penal power.
4. It endeavors to provide that military punitive action be buttressed in enlightened concepts of justice, be regulated by the principles of justice, and that it give results that can fairly be accepted as justice.
5. It obstructs a hasty resort to punitive methods, withholds the hand of the commander who would be arbitrary, and stays the power of military authority that it may be exercised considerately and guided advisedly.
6. It proceeds upon the principle that military authority itself is subject to the demands of justice, and endeavors to reestablish in the army a respect for, as it requires an observance of, those methods and processes which are necessary to justice.
7. It has regard for the fact that our soldiers are citizens; that the military status is but an incident of citizenship and that to it the rights of the citizen should not be unnecessarily sacrificed.
8. It regards grade in the army as a requisite of authority only, and not as marking a cadre with established rights of preferment in matters of justice.
9. It abolishes star chamber methods of court-martial procedure and declares the records to be public records accessible to the public as such.

1. A charge must be preferred under a special sense of responsibility, evidenced by an oath, and it may be preferred by a soldier as well as by an officer.
2. A thorough investigation must be made in which both sides shall be heard before charges are referred or forwarded for trial.
3. The restraining tendencies established are such as to prevent the trial of trivial charges, to compel a resort to the inferior courts rather than to the general court, and to preserve discipline with fewer trials.
4. No charge shall not be referred to a general court except upon the legal determination (a) that a thorough investigation has been made, (b) that the charge is legally sufficient, and (c) that the evidence is prima facie sufficient to sustain it.
5. The summary court, by reason of its importance in the field of justice and discipline—for by it men are frequently started on the road to ruin—is required to be an officer specially selected for sanity of judgment and judicial temperament.
6. In order to establish trial procedure according to law, the special and general courts are to be provided with a judge advocate skilled in the law, with a relation to the court like that which the judge usually has to a jury.
7. The right to counsel is established beyond qualification, and ample provision is made for the procurement of competent counsel, both civil and military. Provision is also made for the assignment of a specially qualified officer to prosecute in the name of the United States.
8. Membership of the court is fixed by law instead of governed by the present wide discretion of the appointing authority; the special court to consist of three and the general court of eight members.
9. It is provided, in the case of the trial of a soldier, that three soldiers be on the membership of a general court and one on a special court.
10. In addition to challenges for cause, peremptory challenges are authorized, as well also as challenges to the array which are rendered available through affidavits of prejudice. The peculiarities of the military community are demonstrably such as to require this liberalization of the right of challenge.
11. Three-fourths of the members of a general court and two-thirds of the members of a special court must concur in a finding of guilty.
12. The court and the judge advocate shall perform their functions independently of the appointing or any other authority; they shall be answerable only to their oaths and the law of the land, subservient to no military commander.
13. No action can be taken to affect the lawful judgments of courts except by way of pardon, mitigation, remission, and suspension of operating to the benefit of the accused.
14. Trial courts, notwithstanding the legal control of the proceedings herein provided, will commit errors, which will be conceded to be such in the light of more deliberate consideration. The Court of Military Appeals, composed normally of civilian judges, is created for the correction of prejudicial errors of law committed in those serious cases resulting in sentences of death, dismissal, dishonorable discharge, and confinement for more than six months.
15. The Court of Military Appeals is also given a retrospective jurisdiction to review and revise the judgments of courts-martial in the most serious cases tried during the war; this because clemency at best is inadequate to correct unjust convictions and almost completely fails in the face of an unsympathetic attitude on the part of the military authorities.
16. Offenses are defined and no longer left to the uncertain conception as to the unwritten law military entertained by men unskilled in law; penalties are legislatively prescribed within reasonable limits and not left to be fixed by military command. Specifically—

(a) Those serious military crimes, such as desertion, disobedience of lawful command, and mutiny, which require the element of fixed and deliberate evil mental attitude and proof of it as such—a matter so generally disregarded during the war—have been defined so as to accentuate the specific intent and the necessity of its proof.

(b) The general article, which subjects all members of the establishment to prosecution for the undefined unwritten military law, and under which nearly a third of our trials take place, has been made more specific by resolving it into those offenses denounced: (1) by the Penal Code of the United States and (2) by the Penal Code of the District of Columbia—with their well-defined offenses and penalties—only leaving to be prosecuted under the unwritten law military (3) those minor infractions of good order and soldierly conduct which merit but a minor court trial and punishment.

15. The bill establishes legal guidance of court proceedings from beginning to end and penalties contemplated.

The announcement with the pamphlet added that: "Judging from the generous expressions of approval and support from the citizen-soldiers, it is believed that it represents their general views as to the kind of system of military justice this country should adopt in the place of the existing archaic, cruel, and un-American system."

Sixty Dead in Mayaguez Fire.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, June 20.—Sixty bodies have been recovered from the ruins of a motion picture theatre at Mayaguez, destroyed by fire last night, according to the latest reports. The injured number 150, many of whom may die.

Cruger Murder Trial Set for Fall.

ROME, June 21.—The trial of Alfredo Cocchi for the murder of Ruth Cruger in New York in June, 1917, which was set for June 22, has been postponed until the Autumn Court of Assises at Bologna.

WARTIME DRY ACT REPEAL FAILS AGAIN

TALK OF A PROCLAMATION

Representative Dyer Says Wilson Will Act in Favor of Wets if Congress Fails.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Representative Dyer of Missouri told members of the House Judiciary Committee this afternoon that, in his opinion, President Wilson would repeal the provisions for wartime prohibition and act without authority from Congress, if Congress did not meanwhile deal with the matter.

Mr. Dyer's assertion was made to his colleagues on the Judiciary Committee after that committee, by a vote of 12 to 8, had earlier in the day defeated a proposed amendment to the pending Prohibition enforcement bill, giving the President authority to repeal the wartime Prohibition act, so far as it affects the sale of light wines and beer.

The impression that the President might so act has been gaining strength among members of Congress considering prohibition legislation. Reports have come to the committee from sources heretofore reliable that the President is prepared to issue a proclamation repealing wartime prohibition as soon as the peace terms are accepted by Germany. Mr. Dyer declined to give authority for his statement when besieged by colleagues for more definite information.

The Anti-Saloon League stated that it had no fear that the President would take such a course in the face of the refusal of Congress to act, after he had said in his message that legislative authority was necessary.

Conservative opinion is that the President will declare that demobilization has not ended and therefore that he will not issue a proclamation repealing wartime prohibition.

The House Judiciary Committee merely stood pat today when it rejected the motion offered by Representative Gard of Ohio, which would have given the President specific authority to repeal wartime prohibition.

The defeated amendment read:

"Provided, that such act or acts are hereby amended so as to give the President authority by proclamation to suspend the operation of such act or acts in so far as they include beer and wine, whenever, in his opinion, the necessity for the continuance of such act or acts as they affect beer or wine shall no longer exist."

Besides Representative Gard, Democrat, of Ohio, its author, those supporting the amendment were Representatives Dyer, Republican, Missouri; Classon, Republican, Wisconsin; Igoe, Democrat, Missouri; Steele, Democrat, Pennsylvania.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League of America, appearing today before the Senate Judiciary Committee considering prohibition legislation, urged enactment of a law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of near-beers and all malt and distilled liquors, irrespective of whether they contain any traces of alcohol. He said, however, he did not favor any action against "legitimate" soft drinks.

Mr. Wheeler also urged the committee to recommend legislation limiting the amount of alcohol in medicinal liquids and compounds, whether medicated, proprietary, or patented, to one-half of 1 per cent.

Mr. Wheeler told the committee one purpose of prohibition advocates was to eliminate near-beer saloons, through which "there would be the possibility of evading the dry laws."

Reappoints Water Commission.

TROY, N. Y., June 21.—Justice Wesley O. Howard, at a special term of the Supreme Court here today, reappointed Frank H. Deal of this city, Chairman; Roscoe Irwin of Kingston, and Charles S. Schwab of New York as members of the New York Water Supply Commission, their terms having expired.

FEMININE MOURNING APPAREL

OF COOL COTTON FABRICS FOR MID-SUMMERTIDE

MOURNING apparel that has been designed to express the mode with dignity and simplicity. And while it is commonly thought that because of its very nature, mourning apparel offers very little opportunity for creative work, one realizes in the Franklin Simon Mourning Apparel Shop that this is erroneous.

MOURNING FROCKS

FASHIONS IN GLORIFIED COTTONS
Add to the Charm and Comfort of Mid-Summertide

GLORIFIED by the weaver's art—raised far and beyond the commonality of other days—rivaling in social prominence the aristocratic silken fabrics, cotton has come into its own. And well it deserves its vogue, for no other fabric is so cool—no other fabric is so well adapted to the diversified needs of Mid-Summertide. So cotton, King in the world of Commerce, becomes Queen in the world of Fashion.

COTTONS IN BLOUSES

COTTON fabrics and blouses are as inseparable as Joan and Darby for the blouse first attained prominence through the medium of cotton. And for smart, becoming and comfortable blouses, cotton has never yielded first place to any rival. Cotton materials, from the sturdy madras to chiffon-like voile, fashion blouses suited to every informal occasion.

MINISTER MORRIS BACK FROM SWEDEN

Says Scandinavian Nations Are Looking to United States for Raw Materials.

PLAN INCREASE IN TRADE

Belgian Lad, Protege of Red Cross Worker, Held Up by Immigration Officials.

With the approach of normal conditions in Europe, the Scandinavian countries are making earnest efforts to obtain business from the United States, according to Ira Nelson Morris, American Minister to Sweden, who, with Mrs. Morris, arrived yesterday on the French liner Rochambeau. With the lifting of the blockade in the waters adjacent to Sweden and Norway, business men of those countries are mapping out a program to make the two kingdoms commercially strong, he said.

When conditions in Russia become stable again they hope to divert the business which once went through Germany to their countries for transshipment to Russia, Mr. Morris said.

"Swedish merchants want to develop a greater trade with the United States," he said. "As Sweden has only two raw materials, iron ore and lumber, she must, by necessity, purchase materials abroad, and she prefers to buy from the United States. Recently a mission was sent here to arrange for the purchase of American coal for Sweden. Always before she has bought coal in England, but labor troubles there caused the Swedish manufacturers to consider our market.

"During the war the Swedes and Norwegians made a great deal of money, and now they are willing to spend it in the United States, instead of Germany, where they formerly went for their commodities. I was told recently that at one time late in the war, Swedish and Norwegian ship owners had credits in English banks amounting to approximately $250,000,000. I believe there is a tremendous opportunity now for American business men to trade with the Scandinavian countries."

To encourage closer relationship between the United States and Sweden, Mr. Morris said, a group of prominent Swedes had formed a Swedish-American foundation, of which he was made Honorary President, to send young men of that country to American colleges. Ten young men will enter colleges in this country this year, he added.

Mr. Morris said he had an extended conference with Secretary of State Lansing and Colonel House in Paris on Russian affairs.

"I described the Russian situation as I knew it, having founded a Russian bureau in the legation at Stockholm," he said. "Members of my staff who were detailed to this bureau gave their entire time to handling questions concerning Russia. Although we have no dealing with the Soviets and do not recognize them, there are methods of communication. Through these channels I recently obtained the release of thirty Americans who were captured by the Russians at Archangel. When they arrived in Stockholm they said that though food in Russia was scarce, they got as much as any one else.

"The bureau is in constant touch with Baltic affairs. Conditions in Finland are gradually getting better. This country is badly in need of tonnage to move her products."

Miss Dorothy Donnelly, an actress, was among a group of Y. M. C. A. workers on the Rochambeau. Miss Donnelly, who was accompanied by Mrs. Patricia O'Connor Henshaw, said she had been giving entertainments for the soldiers. While in Coblenz, she said, a performance of "Seven Keys to Baldpate" was arranged, and the man who painted the scenes for the original production here in New York, now a member of the A. E. F., came forward and repeated his work. Miss Donnelly said she would go to her home at Croton Lake to rest before returning to the stage.

A commission of ten officers and civilians, headed by Colonel Francois Katskowski, sent here by the Polish Government to purchase 20,000 horses, also arrived on the vessel. He said the animals would be used by the army and for agricultural purposes.

There was no more joyful meeting at the pier than that between Mrs. J. H. Hecker of 408 West 109th Street, and her 17-year-old daughter Emilieane, from whom she had been separated eight years. The girl was in school in France, Mrs. Hecker said, when the war began. Despite her mother's urging that she come home, she stayed throughout the war. The village in which she lived frequently was subjected to German air raids and was under shellfire from the "Big Berthas."

Miss Verna Snell, a returning Red Cross worker of Gretna, Neb., brought over Frank Yoons, an 11-year-old Belgian orphan, as a protege. Because he had not been legally adopted, immigration officials refused to let him land. Rather than leave him alone on the ship, Miss Snell remained on board until she could confer further with the immigration officials.

Other passengers on the Rochambeau were the Countess Benedetta du Pont, once Princess Brigaman, and known on the stage as Ruth Mayeliff; Major Philip Gardner, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bjorkman.

BERTHOLF TO RETIRE.

Commodore Who Heads Coast Guard Tenders His Resignation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Secretary Daniels today announced the resignation of Commodore Ellsworth P. Bertholf, effective June 30, as head of the Coast Guard. No successor has as yet been appointed.

Commodore Bertholf retires after a little over thirty years' service in the Coast Guard. He was born in New York City, April 7, 1866. He entered the revenue cutter service as a cadet on Sept. 14, 1885; was graduated and appointed a Third Lieutenant on June 12, 1889. He has served through all grades of the service, on ships stationed along various parts of the coast of the United States and Alaska.

NAVAL BASE HERE SOUGHT BY GERMANS

HARBOR ON FLORIDA COAST

Indications that Germany was paving the way for the seizure of a naval base on the west coast of Florida, and had also planned to get a foothold in the Western Hemisphere by means of the Virgin Islands, are revealed in the story of Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer, former Alien Property Custodian, on "Crushing the German Advance in American Industry," which is printed in the July Scribner's.

The contemplated German naval base in Florida was said to be at St. Andrew's Bay, described as the best harbor on the Gulf of Mexico, and the nearest harbor in America to the Panama Canal.

"Here," says Mr. Palmer, "a typical Junker, a Prince of the German Empire, Forstlich Schamburg Holfkammen, had made a large investment running into millions. He seems never to have visited the property nor received any dividends or other earnings from it. But allowed the profits to be returned to the business, and further investments made until the company had acquired more than a hundred thousand acres of timber lands near the bay."

"The German Consul at Pensacola was the Secretary of the company, while its chief officer changed about every two years; in each case, however, being a man who was sent there by Germany from a similar enterprise in South America. Vigorous opposition was offered by the company to an American railroad which sought to penetrate its lands to the water's edge. Its lands were so situated that, if the American Government itself had desired to build terminal facilities for its own use upon its own harbor, to open quick and direct communication with the Panama Canal, it would have had to deal with the German Empire."

Mr. Palmer says that German agents made determined efforts by legal subterfuges to keep their control of the Hamburg-American Line property in the Virgin Islands, and describes the manner in which the legal tangle, intended to save the property for Germany, was cut by his office. Describing the formidable character of the German works in the harbor of St. Thomas, Mr. Palmer said:

"At the most advantageous point in that harbor, the Hamburg-American Line built a great terminal, consisting of land, buildings, docks, warehouses, water tanks, and cisterns, lighters, motor boats, loading paraphernalia, and coaling facilities.

"This plant had all the characteristics of a naval base; it is significant that its principal building commanding the harbor is of reinforced concrete, the plans in front of it having an eight-foot foundation of concrete fit for gun emplacements.

"When we contemplate the fact that by this convenient arrangement a ship of the Hamburg-American Line, a corporation subsidized by the German Empire, and in which the Kaiser was a stockholder, at any moment might have unloaded long-range guns from its hold, and promptly put them in position to command the entrance to the Caribbean Sea, we may have some substantial clue to the reason which prompted Germany in bringing sufficient influence to bear upon Denmark to prevent the sale, whenever America in the last twenty-five years sought to acquire the Danish West Indies."

By WALTER DURANTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 20.—American Army materials are being destroyed at other places besides Romorantin, according to The Matin. The paper says:

"The accuracy of our statement regarding the destructions at Romorantin has been questioned. Yet this information is, alas, inferior to reality as is shown in the following letter from one of our correspondents."

The letter, which was dated Chateauroux, June 15, runs:

"I can assure you that the Americans have burned at Gievres not only automobiles, but also tarpaulins. Numerous farmers who had come to buy them have had to go away bitterly disappointed after having watched these fine waterproofed canvases, which would have been so useful for protecting their hay, burned before their eyes. At Ardents, in the Department of Indre, the Americans have burned their cantonments and bedding, and have broken their stoves, &c., which they could not carry away. At Issoudun several months ago they began a direct sale to the public, but it was discontinued."

Forbes Entertains Employes.

GREENWICH, Conn., June 21.—Allan B. Forbes, President of Harris, Forbes & Co., entertained 250 officers and employes of the New York firm and their wives at his country estate, Byrdhurst, Old Church Road, at a field day and lawn party today. The trip to and from New York was made by special train, the guests arriving shortly after 2 o'clock. Such sports as golf and a football game between the married and single men were held. Supper was served on the lawn.

SEEK WOMEN REPUBLICANS.

PORT WASHINGTON, N. Y., June 21.—"How to make women feel at home in the Republican Party" was the subject of a conference of Republican men and women leaders of Nassau and Suffolk Counties today at the home of Mrs. Ruth Litt, a member of the Woman's Executive Committee of the Republican Committee.

Mrs. Ida Sammis of Suffolk County was indorsed at the conference as a candidate for re-election to the State Assembly. Mrs. Arthur L. Livermore of Yonkers, chairman of the Woman's State Executive Committee, explained the plan of the State organization to elect a Republican Assembly and prepare the way for a big vote in the Presidential campaign of 1920.

Among those present were Mrs. Charles S. Whitman of New York, Mrs. J. Sloat Fassett of Elmira, Mrs. Nathan Glauber of New York, and Mrs. John Ives of Yonkers. The conference was the second State-wide meeting of the women who propose to spend their time toward getting at least fifty new voters in each election district in the 8,000 of the State who will vote the Republican ticket.

as removing a difficulty that might have led to heartburning among the Allies concerning their disposition.

The German skeleton crews were relieved monthly and returned to Germany. They were fed only such provisions as they would have obtained in their own country.

Admiral Sir Cyprian Bridge, retired, former Director of the Intelligence Department, interviewed by The Weekly Dispatch with regard to the sinking, said:

"It is a breach of the armistice, and, therefore, almost tantamount to a new act of war, but at this juncture it appears to mean that the Germans intend to sign the Peace Treaty. It looks like a plan concerted in Berlin."

Says Allies Are Well Rid of Ships.

Commander Kenworthy, M. P., told The Dispatch he did not think the sinkings were carried out by order of the German Government, but were engineered by a few hotheads sick of existence at Scapa Flow.

"The Admiralty, or the Admiral in charge," he said, "cannot be blamed. Rather, the Armistice Commission is to be censured for not putting British crews aboard, but we are well rid of the ships, which were obsolete."

The political correspondent of The Sunday Times, commenting on the news, says that the sole topic in London was general amazement that nothing apparently had been done to safeguard the ships against the possibility of such destruction.

"The fact that the presence of British guards was absolutely precluded by the armistice should surely have necessitated more vigilant outside observation," he adds. "The public will want to know how the German commanders were allowed the free intercourse necessary for concerted action."

British Demand "Due Penalty."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 21.—Comment on the news as so far received of the sinking of the German fleet runs along two lines:

First, it is asked, what was the Admiralty doing to allow such action?

Second, it is declared that the destruction of the ships interned under the armistice is a violation of that agreement, and renders the German Government liable to due penalties.

The act is denounced as characteristic of the spirit in which the Germans throughout have endeavored to evade the terms of the armistice.

Scapa Flow, in the bleak Orkneys, was made the final resting place of the German fleet after the ships had lain a short period at their anchorage in the Firth, subsequent to their surrender to the British and American fleets sixty miles out from the Firth of Forth. They were transferred to the Orkneys in small detachments under close guard.

The surrender of the German fleet to the British and American fleets was the greatest naval capitulation in history.

The fleet comprised nine battleships, five battle cruisers, eight light cruisers, and fifty destroyers, aggregating more than 450,000 tons and, including the submarines interned at Harwich, made up practically 60 per cent. of Germany's modern battle strength.

The dreadnoughts, battle cruisers, and light cruisers involved in the surrender, in accordance with the date at which they were laid down and their tonnage, constituted the elite of the German sea force and are designated as follows:

The rendezvous appointed for the act of surrender was thirty to forty miles east of May Island, opposite the Firth of Forth. The forfeited ships were sighted by the allied columns at 9:20 o'clock, docilely following their British pilot, the light cruiser Cardiff, which, with destroyers and other small craft, had ranged ahead of the allied fleet.

The enemy studiously complied with Admiral Beatty's orders. Every vessel steaming out to meet the German vessels flew battle ensigns, and was ready for instant action, with its men at battle stations and guns in position for the prompt annihilation of the enemy's forces if their mission proved to be other than peaceful.

Our Ships Present at the Surrender.

Five American battleships—the New York, Texas, Arkansas, Wyoming, and Florida—were prepared to fire every gun in forty seconds after any signal for such action.

The allied fleet extended over a line fourteen miles long, in two columns, and it was through these that the German ships steamed when they came to surrender. Six miles separated the columns, and squarely between them the Germans sailed, led by the great battle cruiser Seydlitz, which was flying the flag of Admiral Togert. As ordered, their guns were in regular fore-and-aft positions, and, as far as powerful glasses could determine, there was no sign to provoke suspicion.

Until all the major ships had been swallowed up in the enveloping allied columns the visitors never for a moment relaxed their alert watch. Over the Germans circled a British dirigible, which acted as eyes for the allied ships. The captives were piloted to May Island, where inspection parties boarded them to make sure that all conditions of the armistice were observed. When the ships were later interned at Scapa Flow, part of the crews remained for maintenance work, while the others were returned to Germany.

Throughout the proceeding, Admiral Beatty took no chances. He knew that it would have been suicide for the Germans to attempt resistance at the last moment, but he thought that there might be such a moment when brave men would prefer death to dishonor. So, as the British and American fleets prepared to receive the surrender, they were also prepared for action. Their decks were stripped, their battle flags were hoisted, ammunition for the big guns was in the turrets, and every officer and man was ready.

Sims Can Hardly Credit It.

NEWPORT, June 21.—Rear Admiral William A. Sims, former Commander of the American naval forces abroad, and now President of the Naval War College, when told tonight of the sinking of the interned German ships at Scapa Flow said:

"I can't believe it. They are German ships, manned by depleted German crews, and the sinking of their ships would only make the terms harder for the Germans. It would be a very foolish thing for them to do."

CALL SINKING GOOD RIDDANCE.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—When news of the sinking of the interned German war vessels at Scapa Flow, in the Orkneys, was brought to the attention of prominent American naval officers tonight, most of them regarded it as a good riddance.

On account of the political and international aspects involved in the much discussed question of the ultimate disposition to be made of these German war vessels, naval officers on active duty with the Government were not inclined to permit themselves to be quoted by name for publication, but their sentiment generally may be summed up in this statement from a very high officer of the navy:

"Thank God for this news! I hope it is true, and if they are never raised they will never become part of the American Navy. From every naval point of view it would have been a mistake in my opinion to obtain any of these vessels for use by the American Navy, and I trust that the reported sinking of the German vessels at Scapa Flow will mean that they are never salvaged."

The officer who made this statement is a line officer of flag rank, and is one of many naval officers who have been opposed to the acquisition of any of these vessels by the American Navy.

Secretary Daniels tonight declined to comment on the sinking of the German warships, saying, "I don't think that I ought to say anything just now."

Secretary Daniels said that when he was at Scapa Flow he was informed that there were several hundred Germans in the skeleton crews of the vessels.

Strong Sentiment for Sinking.

Admiral William S. Benson, Chief of Naval Operations, who recently returned to Washington from Paris, where he was the ranking Naval representative of the American Government in connection with the armistice and peace treaty terms, said:

"Personally, I have always favored the sinking or destruction of the German warships. We did not want them for our navy, and would probably have gotten very few of them in any distribution that might have been made. They would have increased European armaments, and the spirit of the work at Paris has been in favor of ultimate disarmament. The United States did not enter the war for spoils. There were many reasons why I did not think the vessels should be distributed after surrender, but overwhelming reasons why they should be sunk or destroyed."

It was learned tonight that the American delegates at Paris tried to have a provision inserted in the Peace Treaty that the German war vessels be taken out to sea and sunk. They failed in this. They were willing to have a provision inserted to have them destroyed so that their material might be salvaged and used. This also was not written into the treaty, which merely provided for their complete surrender after the signing of the treaty and left the question of ultimate disposition undetermined. Up to the time that Admiral Benson left Paris this matter had not been decided, and it is understood it never was decided.

Admiral Benson's views are generally shared by other officers in the navy. Admiral Hugh Rodman, who was in command of the American warships which were with the British fleet in the North Sea, and was present when the German warships were turned over at Scapa Flow, went before the House Naval Committee, upon his return to this country last winter, and strongly urged that the German vessels be sunk.

Another high officer of the navy said tonight:

"The sinking of these war ships is a godsend to the Allies. I only hope they have been sunk in water deep enough. It would be a good thing if the sailors on board the rest of the German war ships, in neutral and German ports, would do likewise. Naval opinion in the British Navy was generally in favor of sinking the vessels, but there were political and economical reasons why there was sentiment outside of British and American naval circles in favor of distribution of the vessels among the allied and associated powers."

There were seventy-four interned German war vessels at Scapa Flow. Six of them were battle cruisers, ten were battleships, fifty were destroyers and eight light cruisers, of which two were minelayers. There were no submarines involved in the sinking. The submarines turned over by Germany to the Allies and the United States were all surrendered completely under the terms of the armistice as signed on Nov. 11 last. None of these submarines was at Scapa Flow. As their surrender was complete, they were turned over absolutely, and no German caretakers were left on board. But under Article 22 of the armistice seventy-four other war vessels, including battle cruisers, battleships, destroyers and light cruisers, were designated by the Allies and the United States for disarmament and internment in neutral or allied ports. The vessels were sent to Scapa Flow, where, under the terms of the armistice, "there they will remain under the supervision of the Allies and of the United States, only caretakers being left on board."

The water in which they have been sunk ranges from 75 to 114 feet in depth. While this is fairly deep water, it does not mean that the vessels could not be raised if the Allies should decide to raise them. The depth of the water at Scapa Flow was looked up on the maps in the office of Naval Operations at the Navy Department tonight at the request of THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent. A careful study of the chart of Scapa Flow showed that the depth there ranged from 13 to 19 fathoms. A fathom is six feet.

When Secretary Daniels was in Europe recently he went to Scapa Flow for a visit to the British fleet, and while there saw the interned German warships. Secretary Daniels was accompanied by Rear Admiral David W. Taylor, Chief Naval Constructor; Rear Admiral Robert S. Griffin, Chief of the Bureau of Steam Engineering, and Rear Admiral Ralph Earle, Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance.

Admiral Taylor was asked whether he thought the German warships could be raised.

"That will depend upon the depth of the water in which they were sunk," he replied, "and the conditions under which they went down. I would not like to give an offhand opinion."

Admiral Taylor had gone to his country house, 100 miles down into Virginia, near Gordonsville, to spend the week-end. News of the sinking of the German warships was communicated to him by the Washington Bureau of THE NEW YORK TIMES by long-distance telephone.

"I saw the German interned warships when I visited Scapa Flow with Secretary Daniels and Admirals Griffin and Earle," said Admiral Taylor. "Scapa Flow is a landlocked body of water in the Orkney Islands, north of Scotland. I should say it measures about 20 miles by 20 miles. There were British vessels there guarding the interned German vessels."

There was a disposition in some quarters tonight to suggest that the vessels might have been sunk by Reds or Bolsheviki in the German fleet. Admiral Taylor was asked what he thought as to that suggestion. He replied that he, of course, was in no position to have facts as to such a matter, but he did recall that while he was at Scapa Flow he had heard that the red flag was reported to have been raised on one of the interned German warships one night, but was hauled down before morning.

From no official source was it possible tonight to ascertain whether any real agreement had been reached as to the ultimate disposition to be made of the German vessels reported sunk.

ASSAILS GARVAN, ATTACKS PALMER

Moore Accuses Them in House In Relation to Chemical Foundation.

CRITICISES ADVISORY BOARD

Both Acting in Interests of American Dye Makers Without Pay, Their Defenders Assert.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—In the House today Representative J. Hampton Moore attacked the purposes of the Chemical Foundation and assailed Francis P. Garvan, who is acting as President of that organization, formed at the request of A. Mitchell Palmer while Alien Property Custodian, to purchase the German dye patents and protect them for the American dye industry.

Mr. Moore accused Mr. Garvan of receiving pay as President of the Chemical Foundation and criticised sharply the personnel of the Advisory Board of the Alien Property Custodian. Representative Byrnes of Tennessee interrupted Mr. Moore and explained that Mr. Garvan received no pay as President of the Chemical Foundation and that the organization itself was not a money-making concern, but one which aimed solely to preserve the German patents for American dye manufacturers.

Mr. Moore objected to an item in the sundry civil bill appropriating $500,000 additional to the Department of Justice for the detection of bomb throwers. In this connection he attacked Mr. Garvan and William J. Flynn, who have been appointed by Attorney General Palmer to take charge of the Bureau of Investigations in the Department of Justice.

"The appointment of Mr. Garvan who succeeded Mr. Palmer as Alien Property Custodian and now becomes an Assistant Attorney General reveals some of the inner workings of the departmental system that now prevails in Washington," said Mr. Moore. "I want to know why the same Frank P. Garvan, the distinguished criminal lawyer of New York, has recently been elected to and accepted the presidency of the Chemical Foundation which has taken over all the German patents in the United States for the manufacture of dye stuffs through an arrangement with the Alien Property Custodian, A. Mitchell Palmer, now Attorney General?

"I want to show you what the Chemical Foundation is. I want to show you some very peculiar methods that have obtained in the Alien Property Custodian's office under the present Attorney General of the United States.

"As to the Chemical Foundation, Inc., it is a corporation founded by certain very prominent gentlemen in New York, some of them very large financiers, with whom A. Mitchell Palmer, as Alien Property Custodian, had come into contact while performing the duties of his office, to take over 4,500 patents, which Mr. Palmer and Mr. Garvan, this distinguished criminal lawyer from New York, the successor of Mr. Palmer as Alien Property Custodian, found on file in the Patent Office, and which they seized on the ground that they belonged to certain German patentees.

"Who were these who formed this corporation? Well, this management consisted of Otto Bannard. A dye-maker? No. President of the New York Trust Company; Cleveland H. Dodge—and you remember him on this side, surely you do on the other side. If some of you do not, some remember the speech of Mr. Rodenberg on this floor in reference to his attaining through executive order or otherwise the right to send arms into Mexico when we were apparently friendly with that country.

"He was also one of the largest contributors to the Democratic campaign fund to elect President Wilson."

Mr. Moore then enumerated as others on the list George L. Ingraham, formerly of the Appellate Division of the New York Supreme Court; Ralph Stone, President of the Detroit Trust Company, and Benjamin Griswold of the firm of Brown & Sons, Baltimore.

"These gentlemen have been serving as the Advisory Sales Committee of the Alien Property Custodian for more than a year," said Mr. Moore. "Now having seized these 4,500 patents, they are going to control the dyestuff industries in the United States. This company is capitalized at $500,000, $400,000 for 6 per cent. preferred stock and $100,000 common stock. Dividends are limited to 8 per cent.

A. Mitchell Palmer, Alien Property Custodian, having advised with these men up to the point where he seized these German patents by an Executive order, obtained through himself, and conscious of their worth looked about for a President for their corporation. With the approval of Attorney General Palmer, former Alien Property Custodian, succeeded by Frank P. Garvan, they elected Frank P. Garvan President, and he is President today."

WASHINGTON, June 21, (Associated Press.)—No decision was reached today by the Senate Judiciary sub-committee, which met in executive session to discuss further procedure in the consideration of the nomination of Attorney General Palmer.

Chairman Dillingham said some committeemen desired to examine testimony given by Mr. Palmer. Senator Freilinghuysen, Republican, of New Jersey, and Merton E. Lewis, former Attorney General of New York, in connection with charges of the administration of the Alien Property Custodian's office by Mr. Palmer. Decision as to whether additional witnesses will be called will be made later, the Chairman said.

Although approved without objection, the section of the Sundry Civil Bill carrying the $500,000 fund asked for by Attorney General Palmer for the running down of anarchists, was the vehicle of bitter debate in the House among Representatives Moore, Republican, of Pennsylvania, and Byrns and Hull, Democrats, of Tennessee.

"How are we ever going to apprehend these bomb throwers," asked Mr. Moore, "if Mr. Flynn (newly appointed Chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice) devotes a large part of his time to writing sensational magazine articles, and if Mr. Garvan, who is Alien Property Custodian, is also President of the Chemical Foundation, capitalized at $500,000 for the purpose of engaging in the manufacture of dyestuffs?"

Representative Byrnes said Mr. Garvan, though President of the Chemical Foundation, "has no moneyed interest in it, and as President does not receive a single cent from it," while Mr. Hull declared the foundation was organized so that "no monopolistic conditions could arise, and in order that the fullest benefit of the dye patents might accrue to all dye manufacturers and all dye consumers in this country."

Trustees of the foundation, named by Mr. Moore as George L. Ingraham, Otto T. Bannard, Cleveland H. Dodge, B. Howell Griswold, and Ralph Stone, Mr. Hull said, "were especially selected from men who had no interest in the dye manufacture or dye consuming interest so they would be absolutely impartial in administering the trust."

Representative Kreider, Republican, Pennsylvania, declared Attorney General Palmer had failed to make a determined effort to apprehend and deport radicals until an attempt had been made on the lives of himself and other high officials. He said that with the power and forces at the disposal of the Attorney General the criminals should have been detected long ago.

WINNIPEG RIOTERS ARE SHOT BY POLICE

One Killed and Several Wounded in Fracas During a "Silent Parade."

MARTIAL LAW DECLARED

Six More Strike Leaders Are Arrested by Authorities and Jailed.

WINNIPEG, Man., June 21.—Winnipeg is under martial law tonight. After fighting this afternoon between thousands of strikers and the city and provincial police, in which one man was killed, another was probably fatally injured, and a score were hurt, Mayor Gray formally turned over the city to the Federal military forces.

General H. D. B. Ketchen, in charge of the military, announced tonight that the soldiers were in full control of the situation, and that the scores of alleged rioters were in custody.

Nearly 30,000 persons were massed on Main Street near the City Hall at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon to take part in the planned silent parade, ordered staged by labor leaders in opposition to city officials' orders against all parades.

Just as the men fell in for the parade a street car manned by non-union men and half filled with passengers, mostly women and children, approached. The car was greeted with missiles thrown by the paraders and wrecked.

A cry went up from the crowd, "Here come the bloody soldiers," and around the corner of Main Street appeared the Northwest Mounted Police. They rode through the crowd and then turning formed in two columns and with truncheons attempted to force the crowd back on the sidewalks. Many policemen were hit by rocks thrown by strikers.

The crowd, however, refused to disperse, and it was not until the arrival of Federal troops that quiet was restored.

The man killed and those most seriously wounded were the victims of an affray on Williams Avenue, where the mounted police had to fire into the mob. Mike Sokolwski, the man killed, was said by officials to be a registered alien.

Tonight troops armed with machine guns are stationed through the city and armored cars are held in readiness at armories.

Six more strike leaders, all classed as alien agitators, have been taken in custody by the mounted police. It was officially announced today. The men are charged with seditious conspiracy, and are in custody.

Winnipeg Strike Ultimatum.

Special to The New York Times.

VANCOUVER, B. C., June 21.—That the general strike must be followed by a general settlement was the ultimatum delivered today by the Vancouver Strike Committee to Mayor Gale, assurances being demanded that the city employes who had come out would be reinstated and that the jitney concessions would be cancelled. The City Council disposed of the matter by refusing to treat with the Strike Committee.

ANARCHY THREAT IN OMAHA.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, June 21.—Omaha is to be made a second Winnipeg, the Central Union today notified the City Commissioners unless the City Commissioners force employers of striking teamsters to immediately effect a settlement to the satisfaction of the strikers. Next Tuesday was made the limit for a settlement. Between now and Tuesday all unions in Omaha are to vote on calling a general sympathetic strike. The unions include the city firemen and Post Office clerks.

"It is a settlement or anarchy," President Kerrigan of the Central Labor Union said to the City Commissioners this afternoon at the close of a conference.

Recognition of the union is the principal question involved in the strike of the teamsters, who have been out ten days and are losing ground.

BRITISH COTTON STRIKE.

MANCHESTER, England, June 21.—All the cotton mills in Lancashire closed at noon today and it is expected that by Monday 38,000,000 spindles and thousands of looms will be stopped through the strike of 500,000 workers. The cotton mill owners say they will make no attempt to run the mills.

The Cotton Reconstruction Board will meet on Monday, and, as it is composed of employers and trade union officials, it is believed that it hardly will ignore the present crisis.

LONDON, June 21.—The Ministry of Labor today suggested to the parties to the dispute in the Lancashire cotton industry that the whole question be submitted to arbitration.

The Ministry pointed out that the differences between the employers and the employes have been reduced to small proportions.

CHURCHILL GIVES AIMS OF BRITAIN

Retention of America's Friendship Paramount, He Says—Both Must Aid France.

MUST GAIN LASTING PEACE

Germany to Have Her Chance After Making Amends and Red Terror to be Crushed.

By WINSTON CHURCHILL,

British Secretary for War and Air.

Copyright, 1919, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

London, June 21.—Our foreign policy should be: First, to keep firm friends with our kinsmen in the United States, and on no account lose comradeship and the sense of reunion which have sprung up during the war. This not only is first, but paramount.

Secondly, in concert with the United States, to aid and protect France, who has been so terribly weakened by the strain and injury of war.

Thirdly, to make peace with the German people and secure for them a fair opportunity, after they have made amends and given evidence of a new spirit, of putting themselves right with the world by rendering it good service.

Lastly, to sustain and encourage all those forces in Russia which are striving for destruction of the Bolshevik tyranny and the establishment of the Russian people upon a broad, genuine democratic basis.

The supreme objective of the British foreign policy is peace, speedy peace, real peace, lasting peace. Quite apart from moral or religious considerations and the intense revulsion from slaughter and destruction which is in every heart, peace is the first and greatest interest of the British Empire. No other nation has ever had so great an interest in the maintenance of peace as we, and we have never had so great an interest in peace as at the present moment.

For the British Empire is at the very pinnacle of worldly glory. Her aspirations are satisfied; her institutions have been vindicated; she covets no territory; she is burdened with immense responsibilities up to the limit of her strength. At the same time she is much exhausted by the strains of war.

We have everything to lose by war and nothing to gain. But peace will not be maintained merely by talking about it. The state of Europe at the present time is distracted. The four great Empires of Germany, Austria, Russia, and Turkey have been shattered or ruined. Those two mighty branches of the European family, the Slavs and Teutons, are plunged in the pit of disaster.

On the fringes of the Russian Empire and out of the wreckage of Austria-Hungary numbers of little States have arisen, divided from each other by violent hatreds, spurred on by passionate ambitions, destitute alike of settled Governments and disciplined armies, and oppressed by bankruptcy and famine.

Balkan Problem Magnified.

For forty years unrest in the Balkan Peninsula has kept Europe quaking. In the end it was from this quarter that came the flash which fired the mine. But now the Balkanized area has spread and stretches in a broad band to the Baltic Sea, and even to the Arctic Ocean.

The difficulties of these small States, their external aspirations, their internal weakness, their jealousies, their poverty, their racial entanglements, must inevitably confront us for a long period with profound and recurring causes of anxiety.

The war of giants is over, the wars of pygmies have begun.

But do not let us ever forget that the great and mighty masses of the German and Russian nations will not always remain plunged in their present weakness and miseries. At no great distance from the present time they will again be powerful factors in the world, and no course which it is in our power to take can prevent them from being so, even were that our wish.

Our greatest danger is that they will arise as the foes of Great Britain, the United States, and France, and, joining hands across the patchwork area of small but unquiet Balkanized States, will once again confront the western powers with a menace as terrible as that which we faced on Aug. 4, 1914. This danger may be avoided by wise policy, but it is imperative it should be realized form the outset.

In these circumstances all minds have naturally turned to the League of Nations as the sovereign instrument which will protect them from aggression from more powerful neighbors, and which will foster legitimate development. Indeed, it is in this respect the only hope. The old structure of Europe has been shattered, and great imperial organizations and large empires which were built up over so many hundreds of years lie in dust and fragments.

These empires, with all their faults, and in spite of all the dangers w which they afflicted the world in their latest stage, were nevertheless the sole structure of discipline and organization with which enormous portions of the human race have been able to regulate and replace tribalism. Unless we are able to set up a structure superior to those we have destroyed and not less practical and efficient in action, we cannot possibly expect the results of this war to remain permanent.

League Must Include All.

The old empires rose out of very real needs felt by peoples dwelling in those regions, and in response to tremendous forces working there. Their ghosts still brood over the immense battlefield, and unless a superior structure can be created for Christendom their reincarnation after fierce birth agonies is certain.

But the League of Nations, which has to discharge these tasks, must be overwhelmingly strong. A League of Nations consisting, for instance, of victorious Latin and Anglo-Saxon peoples would never be strong enough by itself to maintain permanently the peace, order, and prosperity of the Balkanized areas, if at the same time it was confronted by what would virtually be another rival league of defeated and dissatisfied powers.

For although the balance of forces of moral and material might still rests with us, the task of maintaining peace and making progress is so much more difficult than the task of breaking things up that they can scarcely be compared. Therefore the good work of a league of victorious States would inevitably be frustrated by the malice of the league of left-out and defeated States.

We may, therefore, affirm with absolute conviction that a League of Nations which does not include the representatives of a Germany cured of imperialism, of a Russia rescued from Bolshevism, which does not at the same time secure the full continuous support and guidance and succor of the United States, will never be strong enough for the work it will have to do, and in attempting that work it will only produce a continuance of the present chaos steadily intensifying into a renewed explosion of war.

The other great danger which menaces the peace and civilization of the world today is Bolshevism. Bolshevism, whatever else it may or may not involve, means in every country civil war of the most merciless kind between discontented criminal and mutinous classes, on the one hand, and contented or law-abiding on the other.

In countries where conditions of life for the masses of people are bad, and where there has been neither freedom nor education widely spread, the destructive elements which constitute the strength of Bolshevism are reinforced by the great masses of suffering people who would, under happier conditions, rally with utmost loyalty to national democratic government.

Pictures Horror of Bolshevism.

But however the line of cleavage may be drawn in this nation or that, Bolshevism, wherever it manifests itself openly and in concrete form, means war of the most ruthless character, the slaughter of men, women, and children, the burning of homes, and the inviting in of tyranny, pestilence, and famine.

Therefore the League of Nations, if it is to maintain peace, must not only be strong enough to keep in restraint and regulate and protect the future of small States, but it must also be able to withstand, by the united action of progressive and democratic civilization, that second cause of war, which has come to be called Bolshevism.

It cannot afford, in the task of rebuilding the shattered prosperity of the world, and of restoring tranquillity and security to tormented peoples, to neglect or reject the aid of any stabilising force whose honorable co-operation can be enlisted. It is to the profound interest of France, Great Britain, and the United States to associate Germany with them in the task of repairing the harms and ruin that have been wrought, and this implies that after she has accepted the result of that war and made her submission to the Allies' terms, a reasonable proposition of life should be offered her in the means of atonement.

We cannot afford to drive the German nation into the jaws of Russian Bolshevism. That would, indeed, not only inflict upon the Germans the most terrible punishment in the world, but it would also rob us of all chance of reaping the advantage from our victory and condemn us to a long period of exertion, impoverishment, and deadly peril.

It is imperative, therefore, that after an interval, which should not be too long, Germany should take her place in the League of Nations and should see that there is a clear road before her along which the employment of her energies and abilities may work out her salvation and win again her true place in the broken circle of mankind.

Let no man speak to the contrary in such matters without deep reflection.

We have said that Russia, too, will be wanted in the League of Nations as one of the great agents and guarantors of the peace and progress of the world.

But Bolshevik Russia can never form part of such a League. Bolshevist leaders themselves would be the first to admit this. Theirs is war against civilized society, which can never end. They seek, as first condition of their being, the overthrow and destruction of all existing institutions, and every State and Government now standing in the world.

They, too, aim at a world-wide international league, but a league of failures and criminals, unfit, mutinous, morbid, deranged, and distraught in every land, and between that and such an order of civilization as we have been able to build up since the dawn of history there can, as Lenine rightly proclaims, be neither truce nor pact.

Therefore, casting out the demon of Bolshevik power in Russia by Russian armies and Russian manhood is the indispensable preliminary to any admission of Russia to the League of Nations, just as the accession of regenerated Russia to the League of Nations is a vital element in its success.

CROWD VISITS PROMOTERS.

50 Angry Investors Take Possession of Downtown Office.

The District Attorney's investigation of stock promoting and swindling in the financial district was directed yesterday to a special inquiry into the affairs of a company of promoters not members of any brokerage exchange, with offices overlooking the Curb market. When Detective Stanley Gorman and James Breen, a subpoena server, reached the office to invite the heads of the concern to the District Attorney's office they found the place in possession of some fifty customers, mostly shop and factory workers, investors with the firm. Some of these customers declared they were unable to get money due them, and others asserted that shares bought had not been delivered.

Employes said the partners of the concern had gone away after $1,500 had been provided for the weekly payroll. Under direction of Assistant District Attorney Dooling all the employes were told to go to the District Attorney's office with all the books and papers in their custody. Dooling was very careful to say that the place was not raided and that the books and papers were not seized, because under the law books and documents seized in a raid may not be used against a defendant in the form of direct evidence.

"I bought oil stock that went down to nothing in the market, and never got a glimpse of the shares for which I had paid my money," declared one of the customers when he had reached Dooling's office. "I had demanded the shares from the firm so that I could frame them and get a look for my money."

Dooling said his examination of the books thus far showed that the firm had bought and delivered very few shares, but had "pucketed" most of the orders. Three accounts of out-of-town customers, he said, showed transactions of $800,000, and he thought the firm had been doing a business of nearly $2,000,000. Another customer told Dooling that a group of factory workers, several of them women, had formed a "pool" and had deposited $10,000 with the promoters for the purchase of stocks.

The Later Modes in Bathing Costumes are the embodiment of style and grace; and although some of them are, perhaps, a thought bizarre, the major number are at once smart, becoming and practical. The color effects are original and attractive.

Caps and Beach Capes, while frequently toned in harmony with the rest of the costume, occasionally provide a sharp color contrast. In either case the result is artistic and charming.

Altogether, the present collection—which is daily receiving novel and interesting additions—is well worth a visit.

(Third Floor)

Delicate Perfumes

are as essential to women of refined sensibilities as the air they breathe, particularly during the warmer months, when the taut nerves urgently demand some such revivifying influence. Especially appealing are the

Alsam Bouquet Preparations

These preparations possess an elusive fragrance which remotely suggests some far Oriental garden, but which seems entirely appropriate to an Occidental environment. The assortment, in its entirety, comprises

Alsam Bouquet Extract, $2.00 & 5.00
Alsam Bouquet Toilet Water, 3.75
Alsam Bouquet Talcum Powder, 50c.
Alsam Bouquet Face Powder, 1.00

Fashionable Mourning

in a carefully-chosen selection of chic models designed especially for Summer wear, is displayed in the semi-private salons reserved on the Third Floor for the Mourning Department.

Very soft, cool and comfortable are the materials adopted for really smart mourning this season; nor is the sombre note too apparent. Supple crepes (including the indispensable georgette), silks and nets, in white as well as in black, are used for the frocks most in demand, while the modish suits are composed of lightweight serge or tricotine, or silk poplin.

Hats, Wraps, Summer Furs, Blouses, Negligees and all the minor accessories of the mourning outfit may be selected in the same Department.

PESSOA PROCLAIMS BRAZIL OUR FRIEND

As President He Will Uphold That Tradition, He Tells Marshall's Guests.

LAUDS WILSON FOR PEACE

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Brazil will rejoice in continuing to develop more and more the relations that bind her to the United States, President-elect Epitacio Pessoa of the Brazilian Republic declared tonight at a dinner given in his honor by the Vice President of the United States.

The distinguished visitor took the first occasion after his arrival here as guest of the nation to express the admiration of the Brazilian people for this country and to pledge their continued friendship. It was the entrance of the United States in the European war, he said, that had a decisive influence on Brazil's procedure.

Arriving here aboard a special train from New York, where they landed yesterday, President-elect Pessoa and his party were met by high Government officials and taken to a private home set aside for their use. Shortly thereafter Acting Secretary of State Polk called and escorted the guest to the White House, where he was received by Vice President Marshall and formally welcomed to Washington.

Dr. Pessoa expressed appreciation for the courtesies extended to him, and said it gave him great pleasure to be here. Meanwhile, the wife and daughter of the President-elect were escorted to a hotel, where Mrs. Marshall received them.

The dinner tonight was held at the Pan-American Union, with Vice President Marshall as host.

In proposing a toast to the President and the Vice President of the United States, Dr. Pessoa said Brazil's friendship increased with the confidence you were able to inspire in the Brazilian people, in the solidarity you always showed them for the defense of their rights and legitimate interests, in every phase of their history.

After expressing his thanks for the honor accorded to him in inviting him to the United States, Dr. Pessoa said:

"I spoke of our friendship. It was, Mr. Vice President, unnecessary to do so. Brazil's friendship for your glorious country has been, from the very formation of our nationalities, a fact consecrated by international history, recognized and heralded in every continent.

"It resulted from moral, intellectual, and political ties, from identical feelings of dignity and independence, which are a characteristic trait of our two peoples; from the same tendencies in the advancement of law and other domains of intelligence, from the same ideals of liberty and justice in our home life, and the same elevation of mind and disinterest in our international relations.

"It is fortified by our admiration for the grandiose task of your expansion in every branch of human activity, by your marvelous powers of conception, organization, and execution, by your energy, by your daring genius, by the physical and moral formation of your race, so flexible, so vigorous, so rich in noble aspirations, so full of philosophy and practical sense."

Praises Wilson's Aid at Paris.

"Even now, Mr. Vice President, at the Peace Conference, that support, constant, opportune, firm, and loyal, made itself felt. I am glad to proclaim it on this occasion, and, to affirm vivid in her memory. I am glad to express here, publicly, my thanks for the many proofs of sympathy and solidarity which I received in Paris from President Wilson.

"Having in mind the close relations which have always existed between our two countries, it is not surprising that the entrance of the United States in the great European conflict should have had a decisive influence on Brazil's procedure. To the precious title of friend, uniting our destinies and claiming our share of effort and sacrifice, we added that of ally—allied to that nation which has just furnished to history the most brilliant examples of ability and force.

"Now that the monstrous scourge has disappeared from the face of the civilized world, and that nations, impelled by accumulated energy in the making up of lost time, are to resume their old life of peace and toil, Brazil will rejoice in continuing to develop more and more the relations of every kind, which bind her to the United States, and to strive for this end will be one of the fondest endeavors of my Government."

Wilson Sends Cabled Greetings.

President Wilson, responding by cable to a message from Dr. Pessoa, asked Secretary Tumulty today to express his gratification that the transport Imperator was able to render assistance to the Brazilian party when in midocean.

The cable message said:

"Please express to the President-elect of Brazil my great gratification that the Imperator was able to render the service she did when the cruiser Jeanne d'Arc became disabled at sea."

At the Union Station today to meet Dr. Pessoa were Acting Secretary Polk and Assistant Secretary Phillips of the State Department; Admiral Benson, chief of naval operations, and General March, chief of the Army Staff, with other Government officials, and the staff of the Brazilian Embassy.

As the party passed through a marine guard of honor at the station the Marine Band played the Brazilian national anthem, and a Presidential salute of twenty-one guns was fired at the navy yard. A troop of cavalry escorted the party to the home assigned to them here.

Tomorrow Dr. Pessoa will go to Mount Vernon as the guest of Secretary Daniels to lay a wreath on Washington's tomb. Later he will be entertained by Acting Secretary Polk, Secretary Glass, and Secretary Redfield.

Crowd Cheers Pessoa Party Here.

Dr. Epitacio Pessoa, President-elect of Brazil, accompanied by Mrs. Pessoa, Miss Juanita Pessoa, their twenty-year-old daughter, and officials of the Brazilian Government, who arrived in New York on Friday afternoon on the Imperator, left early yesterday morning on a special train for Washington, where they were officially welcomed to the United States by Vice President Marshall in the absence of President Wilson.

The party left the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, where they occupied the presidential suite, at 8:20 o'clock yesterday morning, and drove to the Pennsylvania Station in eleven automobiles. As they left the hotel they were enthusiastically greeted by a crowd. American and Brazilian flags had been used in decorating the entrance to the hotel.

William M. Egan, the station master, showed the party every courtesy at the station. An attack of rheumatism did not prevent his being on hand early to receive the visitors. Egan has looked after the comfort of Presidential parties and other dignitaries at railroad stations here since Benjamin Harrison was President.

Miss Juanita Pessoa was much impressed with what she termed the vastness of New York. A few minutes before the departure of the Presidential train, which left at 8:45, she said: "It is a most wonderful place, and I shall be glad to get back."

The party will return to New York on Wednesday, and the head of the Brazilian Government will be officially welcomed to this city by Mayor Hylan. President-elect Pessoa and his staff will be entertained at a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria on Wednesday evening by Special Deputy Police Commissioner Rodman Wanamaker and Grover A. Whalen, who are Chairman and Secretary, respectively, of the Mayor's Committee.

In the party besides Dr. Pessoa and his family are Pessoa de Queiros, Consul General on the staff of the Minister for Foreign Affairs, who is Secretary to the President; Captain Armando Burlamaqui, Brazilian Navy, Naval Aide to the President, and Mme. Burlamaqui; Lauro Muller, Jr., Secretary of the Legation, and Mme. Muller; Mauricio Nabucco, attached to the Brazilian Foreign Office; Gustave Barroso, Attaché, and Mme. Barroso; Eugenio Catta Preta, Attaché, and Mme. Preta.

Accompanying them to Washington were Ipanema de Moreira, Chargé d'Affaires of Brazil in Washington, and Sebastian Sampaio, Brazilian Consul at St. Louis, and also a number of officials representing the United States Government, who had come here to welcome the nation's guests.

A. F. OF L. PROTESTS INDUSTRIAL BOARD

Assails Poindexter-Kelly Bill as Letting "Others Speak in Name of Labor."

GOMPERS IS RE-ELECTED

Delegates Vote to Increase His Salary to $10,000—Attack Burleson Again.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 21.—Bitter attacks on the Poindexter-Kelly bill, which calls for the establishment of an industrial conference consisting of ten representatives of employers and ten of employes to settle labor disputes, were made this afternoon at the convention of the American Federation of Labor. P. C. Shay of the Theatrical Employes' Union asserted that Basil M. Manly, Joint Chairman of the War Labor Board, had placed the name of Frank P. Walsh at the head of the labor delegation, and he resented this on the ground that Mr. Walsh was not an accredited labor representative.

Objection was made by Shay to the inclusion of any labor representative outside the ranks of the American Federation of Labor. Matthew Woll, report Vice President, declared that the federation could not afford to permit any one outside the ranks of labor to speak for it. John H. Walker of the Mine Workers resented the efforts of "well meaning theorists who try to run the labor movement," and accused them of being as bad as men who are dishonest.

Mr. Gompers made public a cablegram, received today from President Wilson giving in full the list of changes made recently in the labor charter of the proposed covenant of the League of Nations. Practically all of the changes noted by the President have been published. The message from the President said in part:

You doubtless have in mind the changes giving the British Dominions and Colonies separate representatives on the General Conference. When you give your final judgment on the importance of these changes I earnestly urge you to entertain the following considerations:

1. That Borden could not go back to the Canadian people, who occupy a position of considerable importance in the industrial world, and tell them that they were not entitled to representation on the General Labor Conference at Versailles.

2. That the changes did in fact bring the labor provisions into harmony with the League of Nations covenant.

3 That the changes are not substantially important inasmuch as every labor convention adopted by the conference must be submitted to our Government for ratification; thus the choice of acceptance or rejection lies in our own hands irrespective of the constitution of the General Conference.

4. That the problems of the British colonies and dominions are much more our own than like Great Britain's, so that their representatives will be a source of strength to our point, rather than an embarrassment.

5. In my opinion the changes do not introduce any weakness or threat of particular weakness into the labor provisions. Therefore, thanks to your efforts and guidance, as one of the great progressive achievements of the Peace Conference, something from which peoples the world over may take courage and hope and confidence in a better future, I am sure that you will agree that nothing could be more fatal to these first aspirations than any failure to indorse these provisions. I count upon your support and sponsorship.

WOODROW WILSON.

In spite of his earnest protests the convention voted to increase the salary of President Gompers from $7,500 to $10,000. The salary of Frank Morrison, the Secretary, was raised from $5,000 to $7,500. Mr. Gompers said that the most effective weapon the enemies of the labor movement both here and abroad had was the argument that he had been receiving $7,500 a year. To raise his salary would handicap the efficiency of his work, he said. He was not a bond holder or speculator, he added, and did not want to be regarded as a money seeker.

The first business of the day was the election of officers. Mr. Gompers was re-elected President and will serve his thirty-seventh term. The vote would have been unanimous but for the dissenting vote of James Duncan of the Seattle Central Labor Council. The other officers elected were: First Vice President, James Duncan of Massachusetts; Second Vice President, Joseph F. Valentine; Third Vice President, Frank Duffy; Fourth Vice President, William Green; Fifth Vice President, William D. Mahon; Sixth Vice President, Thomas A. Rickert; Seventh Vice President, Jacob Fischer; Eighth Vice President, Matthew Woll; Treasurer, Daniel J. Tobin, and Secretary, Frank Morrison. Matthew Woll was elected to the Executive Council to fill the place made vacant by the resignation of John R. Alpine.

Not content with demanding earlier in the week that President Wilson demand the resignation of Postmaster General Burleson, the convention adopted a resolution today charging that under the mail administration of Burleson the postal service had been "perverted" to subordinate public service to a money-making institution. The resolution which was adopted declared that the postal zone system was unjust, asked for a thorough investigation into the entire postal service and postal rates, and called on the President to put in the place of Burleson a man sympathetic to the people in the service.

It was decided to raise the pay of organizers from $7 to $8 a day, and their hotel expenses from $4 to $6 a day. The constitution was amended to raise the per capita tax from seven-eighths of 1 cent to 1 cent.

William B. Hutcheson and John J. Hines were chosen to represent the federation as fraternal delegates to the British Trades Union Congress.

Samuel Grigge was chosen as fraternal delegate to the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress, the second member, in addition to Mr. Gompers, to represent the federation at the Amsterdam International Trades Union Congress in Amsterdam on July 27 will be chosen by the Executive Council.

tions," he said. "I am not influenced by what financiers may say about it. If all the men in the United States who represent international finance were to command obedience to this un-American doctrine I would still oppose it. I am not against it as a partisan, but as an American."

Senator McCormick of Illinois said it was "the same old crowd which has been mailing letters to us all the time. Why should anybody pay attention to them?" he asked.

Senator Borah wondered, he told the Senate, how Mr. Wickersham had "found the new light" after getting into the atmosphere of Europe.

Charges Alignment with Autocracy.

"He ought to let the Senate know what sort of atmosphere that is," he said. "Before he went, he felt sympathy with the American doctrine against entangling alliances. He got over there where force is the doctrine of nations instead of peace, and he changed his mind. The system of European nations has not changed in 100 years. They are still for force in the settlement of international matters. The people do not exercise the sovereignty we have here."

Senator Hitchcock interrupted to say that England and France have changed from monarchical to democratic Governments during the last 100 years. "Italy, too, has become a democratic Government, in effect," he said.

"Has the Senator heard from Italy within the last 15 minutes?" retorted Mr. Borah. The Idaho Senator insisted that nearly the whole of Europe was under autocratic rule.

"England and France may be exceptions," he assented, "but we are not aligning ourselves with those countries in a league for peace. We are aligning ourselves with autocratic Governments, such as Japan. Does the Senator from Nebraska contend that the Mikado's Government is any less Prussian than it was 100 years ago?"

Senator Hitchcock replied that an "enormous difference" had come in Japan's Government in the last ten years, and that the Japanese people now have their say in the electorate.

"The Mikado has handed the Constitution to his subjects and they have not the power to change it," said Mr. Borah. "Japan's Government is not democratic. The Mikado's rule is supreme."

Senator Borah argued that, as the League of Nations involved matters directly affecting the independence of action of this country, it ought to be a partisan issue.

"How else are the people to convey their sentiment to Congress except through their parties?" he asked. "They have no other way. The questions touched upon by the League of Nations affect our Government itself. If parties do not take it up, how are the people to be represented in it? Mr. Taft says politics ought to stop at the water's edge. I agree to that, but at this side of the water. The Monroe Doctrine must be considered from this side, not from the European side.

Predicts Anti-League Party.

"We know in our hearts there is no way to keep this subject out of politics. It is inconceivable. The people must express themselves through their parties. If they do not have that expression in the Senate now, they will have it later at the polls. I would hold my party cowardly if it refused to take a stand on this issue. I ask that my party take a stand, and I say that if it does not there will be a party that will do it.

"Mr. Hays says this is an American question. It is. And there are two sides to it. On which side are the parties to stand? If my party does not assume an attitude on this matter when the time comes, I would trample on any platform that it wrote. It cannot be silent upon the issue. I want a declaration in opposition to this un-American league.

"Mr. Straus, Mr. Wickersham and the others who signed that 'Round Robin' know the Democratic Party is thoroughly organized in favor of the League in every voting precinct. When they come here and ask the Republicans not to take a stand against it, they are aiding in this Democratic lineup. International bankers may internationalize this League of Nations, but they cannot deny the right of the people of this country to assert their dissent from alliances that internationalize America. They will assert this right through a political party. I know there will be a party to represent this issue if the Republican Party does not take it up."

"It is hopeless for the Senator to try to get the Republican Party to take an attitude against the League," said Mr. Hitchcock. "It cannot afford to. The League covenant is to be ratified by the votes of Republican Senators. I can tell the Senator that, although it may discourage him."

"No, I will not be discouraged," returned Mr. Borah. "I know of one other, at least, who will join me in a new party if it has to be created. If there are only two of us, or one of us, the party will be formed if the Republicans do not face the issue squarely."

Mr. Hitchcock quoted from newspaper polls showing, as he said, an overwhelming sentiment in favor of the League.

Borah replied the surest way to judge public sentiment was at the polls, and asked if Mr. Hitchcock would agree to a referendum.

"No, because there is no time for it," replied Mr. Hitchcock. "This League of Nations is to be decided upon soon, and the Senate is going to ratify it. We know how the people stand on it."

"I may ask for the referendum at another time," remarked Senator Borah.

HINES CUTS CAR CHARGES.

Demurrage Rates Substantially Reduced by New Order.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Substantial reductions in demurrage charges were announced today by Director General Hines. For detaining cars, either loaded or empty, the charge will be $2 per day for each of the first four days, and $5 for each succeeding day.

The new charges, which become effective July 20, compare with present charges of $3 per day for each of the first four days, $8 per day for each of the next three days, and $10 per day thereafter. Heretofore, however, no charge has been made for cars detained for loading.

Silk Tricolette Gown

Specially Priced Tomorrow

49.50

A sumptuous new gown of engaging simplicity, distinguished by its fluency and unusual grace of line. Interesting details are the clever tunic skirt, with unusually broad border of self fabric, trim sleeves, vestee and loose-tying girdle. Obtainable in black or navy.

Imported Voile Frock

29.50

A sweet little frock of unsurpassed elegance and charm. Fashioned of dainty Voile, displaying smart three-tier skirt and full length flowing-end sleeves. The graceful lines of the dress are accentuated with rows of tiny self color beads. The pretty net Vestee adds to its attractiveness as well as the smart collar of white Organdie, with scalloped edge.

Chic Organdie Frock

22.50

Grandmother Chintz Frock

14.75

TEST FAVORS WADSWORTH.

Aroused by the recent declaration by the Anti-Saloon League that the organization would do everything in its power to bring about the defeat of Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., should he decide to become a candidate, the Association Opposed to National Prohibitions has been conducting a canvass throughout the entire State, and in a Statement issued yesterday announces that without a doubt the senior Senator from New York will be renominated by the Republican Party and re-elected.

The canvass of the State proves, according to the statement, that Senator Wadsworth will have but little to fear from the women of the State for his opposition to the enfranchisement of women, and points out his only opponents will be members of the Democratic Party and the forces allied with the Anti-Saloon League.

VAUBAN, A TREASURE SHIP.

Steamer with $18,500,000 Gold Sails for South America.

A shipment of gold totalling $18,500,000 was sent to South America yesterday on the Lamport and Holt liner, Vauban. The money, which was in the form of $20 gold pieces, was transported from the Sub-Treasury and placed in five specially constructed strong boxes on the steamer.

Mme. de Gama, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador to the United States, was among the 286 first class passengers who sailed on the Vauban for South American ports. She said she was returning home for a short visit.

THE REV. W. B. EDDY RESIGNS

Trenton Pastor Follows Vestrymen Who Quit Recently.

TRENTON, N. J., June 21.—"Too much church politics" is the explanation offered today for the resignation of the Rev. William Best Eddy, rector of St. Michael's Episcopal Church. The rector announced his resignation today effective Sept. 1. Subsequently he declared that he was to seek a greater opportunity for service in New York City.

Five vestrymen recently resigned from the board of St. Michael's Church after Chancellor Edwin Robert Walker and Frank Hendrickson, Treasurer, were defeated for re-election. Among the vestrymen who resigned were A. K. Bugbee and State Controller Newton.

SAYS SINN FEIN HEAD IS IN THIS COUNTRY

MYSTERY AS TO HIS COMING

Accommodations Are Being Reserved at Waldorf for President of Irish Republic.

Eamonn de Valera, President of the Sinn Fein Irish Republic, recognized as such only by the adherents of that organization, who has led a will o' the wisp existence since he slipped out of prison at Lincoln, England, five months ago, has arrived in the United States, according to Harry J. Boland, Member of Parliament for South Roscommon, who disclosed himself yesterday at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Tomorrow, said Mr. Boland, who is also Secretary of the Sinn Fein Party, President de Valera will arrive at the hotel and hold a reception for his friends. Incidentally, the President will disclose how he managed to slip unobserved into the country, said Boland, who admitted that he came over as a stoker five weeks ago.

At the Waldorf it was said last night that accommodations had been reserved for the Irish rebel chieftain and that he had been expected all day. The management, it was said, was in somewhat of a quandary as to just when to expect the President.

Although no local Sinn Feiners would discuss it, it was understood that de Valera had already arrived in New York and that he had spent yesterday in going over the situation with New York supporters of a free Ireland. A conference of members of the Friends of Irish Freedom was held in the afternoon at the Hotel Alcazar, 43 West Thirty-second Street, which Boland was understood to have attended. The purpose of the gathering could not be ascertained.

In discussing the object de Valera had in visiting America, Mr. Boland said that there was no intention of "meddling in American politics," adding that only the international recognition of Ireland was sought. He said that both he and de Valera planned to go to Washington in the course of the coming week.

Speaking of the present form of the League of Nations covenant, Boland declared that it would condemn Ireland to perpetual slavery. He was especially opposed to Article 10, which he thought would forever guarantee the territorial entirety of Great Britain, thus preventing Ireland from becoming free. He asserted that the seventy-three Sein Fein delegates who voted to make Professor de Valera the first President of the Irish Republic represented five-sixths of the Irish population.

Mystery Shrouds Trip.

Pressed to tell how de Valera got into the country, Mr. Boland winked and was silent. Finally he said that the President was visiting his mother in Rochester, N. Y. A dispatch from that place indicated that de Valera hadn't been there.

Shortly after making his announcement about the coming of de Valera, Boland disappeared from the Waldorf. At the offices of the Friends of Irish Freedom, on the fifth floor of the Stewart Building, 280 Broadway, it was said that de Valera had really reached America, but that Boland was the only one who knew anything about his movements. At the Waldorf it was said that Boland never had registered there, and that he had apparently given out his announcement in the lobby.

Right there the plot thickened, the mystery—the hallmark of the Sinn Fein movement—deepened. Somewhere in America was de Valera; somewhere in New York was Boland, but nobody, not even their friends, knew where. To help things along, the Waldorf management, along about 3 o'clock, announced that it expected the President to happen along before nightfall. But, they admitted later, that apparently they had been misinformed.

If de Valera followed the plans mapped out some time ago by the leaders of the Irish movement he took ship at Queenstown on June 2 and was scheduled to arrive at Boston. No trouble was expected to result over his coming to America, his friends said, because the Irish President is an American citizen, having been born in New York thirty-seven years ago. His father was a Spanish-American, his mother an Irish woman. When de Valera was two years old his father died and the family removed to Ireland, where the boy was educated. He held the Professorship of Mathematics at several colleges in Dublin at different times, then became active in the free Ireland movement.

Escaped from Prison.

He was arrested shortly after the Easter riots in Ireland in 1916 and was sentenced to nine months' imprisonment. At another time he was sentenced to be shot, but his American citizenship saved him. His last stay in prison was in the Lincoln jail, from which he escaped.

When de Valera managed to elude the guards in Lincolnshire and make off in a fast automobile down the Wragby Road, near the prison, he raised still another mystery. According to John T. O'Kelly, a Sinn Fein member of Parliament, who took his Gaelic name, Sean O'Cealligh, when he was appointed to attend the Peace Conference by his Sinn Fein colleagues, the escape of de Valera was accomplished in romantic fashion.

According to O'Kelly, a Sinn Fein sympathizer used to station himself outside de Valera's cell and warble messages to the incarcerated chieftain. In songs of Gaelic he instructed de Valera to make an impression of the gaol's key, and de Valera did so, said O'Kelly, using a mold composed of bread and water paste. But a hitch arose, narrated O'Kelly, because the guards were all vigilant, and so a couple of handsome Irish girls, university graduates, were sent for. These girls managed to distract the attention of the guards, de Valera tried out his home-made key, the door of the jail opened and a motor car chugging outside carried de Valera to freedom.

The Irish President later turned up in Dublin and issued an official denial of the story of his escape credited to O'Kelly. An investigation of the Lincoln Jail by THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent proved that de Valera could not have escaped in the melodramatic, Dark Ages style described.

Doubts That Son Is Here.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 21.—Mrs. Charles E. Wheelwright of 18 Brighton Street declared that she was amused when told that her son, Edward de Valera, President of the Irish Sinn Fein Republic, had been in the city. She said she had not heard from her son since he was imprisoned. She and her niece, who is also here, said they would not believe he was in the United States until they obtained direct communication with or saw him. They scouted the idea that he was in this country. Mrs. Wheelwright said if he has really got away, it would be more probable that her son was in Paris.

TO JOIN IRISH DELEGATES.

John A. Murphy and L. S. Trigg Sail on Espagne for Paris.

John A. Murphy of Buffalo and L. S. Trigg, secretary to Frank P. Walsh when he was joint Chairman of the War Labor Board, sailed yesterday on the French liner Espagne for Paris, where they will join the delegates sent by Irish societies in this country to the Peace Conference. Mr. Murphy said he believed that the prospects for the realization of the aims of Ireland were brighter than ever. He said he expected a full report of conditions in Ireland would be made public soon in the United States Senate.

Mrs. Philip Lydig was also a passenger on the Espagne. She said she was leaving the United States for a rest. Frances Alda, wife of Gatti-Casazza, general manager of the Metropolitan Opera House, sailed on the steamer to join her husband in Milan.

Professor Andre Andreaden of the Greek Legation in Washington, also a passenger, said he was going to Greece to confer with Premier Venizelos. Other passengers who sailed were the Very Rev. Theodore Maershaert, Catholic Bishop of Oklahoma; Mme. Yvette Guilbert, Senor J. de Pereyra, Spanish Consul General in Paris, and Henri Fuirland, a French banker.

The belief that wartime prohibition was not popular with the rank of the people was expressed by the Rev. W. J. Allison, one of the five Scotch delegates to the International Anti-Saloon League convention recently held in Washington, who sailed for home on the White Star liner Lapland. He said the delegates were unanimous, however, in the belief that the whole world was facing prohibition sooner or later.

Sir Arbuthnot Lane, one of the leading surgeons of England, and Lady Lane also sailed on the steamer. Sir Arbuthnot represented the Royal Society of Medicine at a recent congress of surgeons and physicians at Atlantic City. The Lapland carried 400 first class, 250 second class, and 450 third class passengers.

BLEAK HOUSE TO BE SOLD.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 21.—Bleak House, Broadstairs, the residence of Charles Dickens from 1830 to 1859, will be sold at auction next Monday. It was built in 1540 as part of a scheme for the defense of the port against attacks by privateers. Originally it bore the name of Fort House, but was renamed long after its celebrated tenant's death. It is not the house described in Dickens's novel, "Bleak House."

When the house was partly rebuilt and enlarged seventeen years ago careful attention was paid to preservation of the portion used by Dickens.

GEN. MARCH PRAISES ATTITUDE OF PRESS

Says Its Voluntary Censorship of War News Was Most Patriotic.

ENDS WEEKLY INTERVIEWS

Demobilization Information Will Be Given Through the Usual Channels Henceforth.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—General Peyton C. March, Chief of Staff, in announcing today the close of the series of weekly interviews he has given to the newspaper correspondents, paid a high tribute to the press of the nation for the manner in which it had observed the voluntary censorship which was put in effect by it during the war. He said that the attitude of the press had been of the greatest value to the War Department and "in the highest degree patriotic."

General March will receive newspaper men from time to time in the future, but the regular weekly interviews which were started soon after he became Chief of Staff will be discontinued. At these interviews General March by the use of official maps endeavored to present to the correspondents the information concerning operations at home and overseas which the War Department felt it was safe, from the military point of view, to transmit to the public.

At the conclusion of today's interview he said:

"The weekly interviews with the representatives of the press were inaugurated shortly after I became Chief of Staff for the purpose of putting before the American people the military view of what our troops were doing in Europe and official statement of what we were doing in the United States in the way of mobilization, supply, and getting troops across.

"At the conclusion of the armistice it was requested by the representatives of the press that I continue the interviews with the idea of keeping the people informed as to the program of demobilization and what the War Department was contemplating in the matter of shipment of troops home, and all other phases connected with the reversing of the machinery which was then in operation."

"The objects which were sought by those interviews have now apparently been accomplished and the necessity for the interviews is at an end. The weekly statements about demobilization and statistics of all kinds will be released to the press through the usual channels.

"In terminating these interviews I want to say that the attitude of the press throughout the period of the struggle itself was perfectly fine and of great value to the military program. The voluntary censorship which was entered upon by the press was observed religiously, and at all times I found the greatest assistance from all of you from not only preventing publication of news which would have been of value to the enemy, but by putting before the people what they should know as to the activities of their army and what the War Department was contemplating in the matter of keeping it up.

"The attitude of the press of this country was not only of the greatest value to us, but was in the highest degree patriotic. We moved, as an example, some 12,000,000 men around the United States on our railroads without the fact being known to the American people, except so far as I gave out facts in the weekly interviews. This shows the very fine attitude that the press took toward the necessity of observing the voluntary censorship which they undertook themselves.

"The personal attitude of these correspondents here toward me has been very fine, and I appreciate it very much indeed."

General March answered questions about the Siberian expedition today. He was asked when the troops would be withdrawn, and replied:

"We do not contemplate withdrawing them now." He added, however, that all members of the National Army in the Siberian expedition were being replaced as rapidly as possible by men who had enlisted.

In connection with the demobilization of the American forces General March said that a total of 2,503,810 officers and men had been discharged from the service. Of this total 126,061 were officers and 2,468,740 unlisted men.

Among the troops which have sailed from Europe since the signing of the armistice are 98,949 officers and 1,387,409 enlisted men, or a total of 1,468,444. These figures are of June 21.

Enlistments to date are 97,521. Included in this total are the following: For service in Europe, 11,386; in Siberia, 51; in the Philippine Department, 1,340; in the Panama Canal Zone, 196; in the Hawaiian Department, 1,870; in Alaska, 39.

Overseas replacements sent to Europe include 330 officers and 7,125 men, or a total of 7,455.

SEES $1,000,000,000 SAVED.

Republican Leader of House Reviews Its Work.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—In thirty days the House has reduced the appropriation bills more than a billion dollars below the amounts carried in the same bills as they passed the House in the last session, said Representative Mondell, the Republican leader of the House, in a statement issued today.

While there has been an apparent saving of more than a billion dollars, the Senate Committee has reported out the Army and Navy bills increasing the amounts, and before the bills mentioned by Mr. Mondell are passed finally the saving will probably be somewhat reduced.

"The special session," said Mr. Mondell, "has been in session one month. During that time the House has considered and passed the six general supply bills and the Railroad Deficiency and General Deficiency bills, which failed in the closing hours of the last Congress. In the passage of these bills the House has effected a saving of approximately a billion dollars in the amounts carried in the bills which failed.

"These savings were in the main on three bills, though there were some reductions in all, and on the three bills, the Army, the Navy, and Sundry Civil, reductions in round figures were approximately as follows: Army, $400,000,000; Navy, $225,000,000; Sundry Civil, $325,000,000.

"In addition, the bill to supply deficiencies in railway revenues as it passed the House carried $750,000,000, instead of $1,200,000,000 as estimated by the Railroad Administration, a reduction of $450,000,000.

"At the beginning of the session the Republican majority in the House promised speedy action on appropriation bills and prompt consideration of the program of legislation and investigation. There can be no question but that this pledge has been splendidly kept as far as appropriations are concerned, and in the matter of legislation the House has considered and passed the woman suffrage resolution, the daylight saving repeal, and the bill returning the wires to their owners."

JUDGES RACE THEIR HORSES

Tompkins Drives Louise Guy to Beat Seeger's Bing Bang.

Special to The New York Times.

GOSHEN, N. Y., June 21.—A notable gathering, which included Mrs. E. H. Harriman, Robert Goelet, and ex-Governor Benjamin B. O'Dell, witnessed the matinee horse races of the Goshen Driving Club today, and saw Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins of Nyack take two straight mile heats and win a match race from Supreme Court Justice A. H. Seeger of Orange County. The race of the judges, who drove their own horses, attached to carts closely resembling sulkies, was the star event of the card.

Justice Tompkins's trotter Louise Guy won the first heat in 2:25, and the second in 2:19¾. Justice Seeger drove Bing Bang.

Right after the race Judge Tompkins was presented with a royal blue and gold horse suit by ex-Governor Odell in behalf of Edward J. Collins. A brown plaid horse suit was presented to Judge Seeger. The Goshen Driving Club also presented the winner's trophy, a horse suit, to Judge Tompkins. Many handsomely gowned women, and most of the members of the Orange County and the Rockland County bars were present.

Federal Judge Julius Mayer, President Samuel Fairchild of the Union League Club, Justice Joseph Morschauser, Wilson P. Foss, George C. Austin, General Watson, Judge Mortimer B. Patterson, John B. Byrne, and others of prominence watched the "racing jurists" whirl around the track.

HURLEY TELLS OF SALE OF SHIPS

Says Foreign Power Is Negotiating for Purchase of 150 Government Vessels.

TO HAVE OFFICE HERE

U. S. Shipping Board Will Establish New York Branch for Convenience of Buyers.

The United States Shipping Board will open offices in this city tomorrow for the purpose of disposing of the ships which the Government has decided to sell, according to Edward M. Hurley, Chairman of the Emergency Fleet Corporation. Mr. Hurley, in an interview given yesterday at 135 Broadway, said that the offices were to be maintained here for the convenience of would-be purchasers, but it was not likely that similar offices would be opened in other cities.

The offices will be in charge of John E. Barber, who has been elected a Vice President of the Emergency Fleet Corporation. E. W. Lyon of the Bankers' Trust Co. will head the credit department. Credit, sales, legal and engineering departments will be included in the offices, which, it was said, would be located in the Custom House.

Asked about the recent sales of ships, Mr. Hurley said that nineteen steel vessels had been sold last week, while negotiations were in progress for the disposition of thirty or forty other ships. He said that a foreign Government was negotiating for the purchase of 150 ships, but he declined to state the name of the country at this time.

The vessels sold last week went to American purchasers and will fly the American flag. Mr. Hurley said that eleven of the boats had been built at the plant of the Submarine Boat Corporation at Newark. The tonnage of each boat was 5,300, and they were sold for $210 per deadweight ton. Seven vessels were constructed at the plant of Skinner & Eddy at Seattle, Mr. Hurley said. Five of these were of 9,600 tons and brought $225 per deadweight ton, while the other two boats of the group, which weighed 880 tons each, were sold at $220 per ton. The remaining vessel, which weighed 7,800 tons and was built at the Hog Island plant, sold for $215 per deadweight ton.

Discussing the sales of the ships, Chairman Hurley said the terms were 25 per cent. down, 12½ per cent. in the next six months, with four years in which to pay the remainder, with interest at 5 per cent. Mr. Hurley said that had the entire program of the Government been carried out, the United States would have built 2,434 ships. Every ship on the ways or yet to be built is an oil burner. As rapidly as the ships were sold, Mr. Hurley said, the names of the purchasers would be made public.

ADOPT PARTY PLATFORM.

New Jersey Republican Clubs Announce Pre-Primary Principles.

TRENTON, N. J., June 21.—Delegates from 408 Republican clubs representing 130,000 voters in New Jersey met here today and adopted a declaration of principles as a pre-primary platform. State Chairman E. C. Stokes presided, and among those present were United States Senators Frelinghuysen and Edge. One of the most prominent planks in the platform declared for the right of the people of all States to vote for or against any amendments to the Constitution before the Legislatures of the States should have an opportunity to ratify or reject the proposed amendments.

In its entirety the declaration of principles takes material from Andrew Jackson, the Progressives, and from many old platforms of the national organization. The full dinner pail was discarded for an open-arm greeting to the soldiers, and Republican County Committees were declared to be employment agencies for the men who had served the flag. The platform declared against the League of Nations covenant being incorporated in the Peace Treaty. Here are a few of the planks:

Establishment of schools to teach trades and professions to disabled soldiers.
Establishment of an international court of justice.
Establishment of a high court of arbitration to pass upon international differences of justiciable character.
The right of the people of all nations to vote upon the question of resort to arms in case of any dispute.
The re-establishment of the power of Congress to be the representative law-making power of the nation.
Decided resistance "to the utmost" of all efforts to change our Government into a socialistic autocracy.
Laws restricting free speech to forbid incendiary utterances.
Mental and physical tests for immigrants and bars against criminals and those opposed to American governmental forms.
Americanization of institutions to compel education of an illiterate electorate.
Teaching of foreign languages only so far as they will enable communication with other nations. Insistance that the English language shall be taught to predominate so as to enable public opinion to be moulded in one tongue for the administration of a Republican form of Government.
Universal military training to be compulsory along the lines of the Swiss plan for national defense and unification of national spirit, loyalty, and promotion of nation's health.
Increased production by labor to insure greater wages and approval of the Republican policy for a short day and high pay.
Repudiation of all efforts toward Government ownership of public utilities.
Government supervision of all investment issues offered to the public.
Objection to a State income tax or a State tax of any kind and objection to any State tax such as will add a burden to the State for the construction of the New Jersey ship canal and the vehicular tunnel projects.
Protest against New York's income tax upon the citizens of New Jersey and a pledge of remedial legislation to relieve the citizens of New Jersey from "this unjust burden."

Governor Runyon, who is the party candidate for election for a full term was unable to be present, but he sent a message approving of the declaration of principles.

ADMITS CORN SPECULATION.

Food Administration Revokes Licenses of C. H. Wayne of Illinois.

The Food Administration, 42 Broadway, announced yesterday that the licenses of C. H. Wayne of Reybold, Ill., had been revoked until further notice, effective at noon yesterday, for violating Section 4 of the Food Control act. This section makes it unlawful, among other things, to hoard grain or other specified commodities, and also to monopolize or attempt to monopolize, either locally or generally, grain and other specified commodities.

"These licenses were revoked," said the statement from the Food Administration, "after a hearing in Washington on June 12, at which it appears that Mr. Wayne took delivery under contracts for May corn aggregating 345,000 bushels at a time when that amount of corn represented approximately half the corn available in public warehouses in Chicago. Mr. Wayne also purchased over 400,000 bushels of July corn, a small part of which he has since sold. He admitted at the hearing that he was holding his cash and July corn, not for any industrial purposes, but for speculative resale.

"Efforts by the Chicago Board of Trade and by his broker to induce Mr. Wayne to dispose of his holdings at reasonable prices and thus to relieve the corn shortage were without results.

"The effect of the revocation makes it unlawful for Mr. Wayne to engage in new business of licensed commodities after the revocation. He can, however, subject to the approval of Howard B. Jackson, agent of the United States Food Administration at Chicago, sell both his cash and his July corn, and it is expected that he will proceed to make such disposition immediately for the relief of the corn market."

"The Frill's The Thing"

When one knows they are fashioned of finest French Voile, and that real Valenciennes was selected as trimming, a glance at the styles here shown reveals that their value is real and that this is no ordinary sale.

BEAUTIFUL SUMMER SUITS

Of Pongee Silk or Tricolette

Special 26.50 and 32.00

The usefulness of a Suit of silken fabric for Summer has long been permanently established—its smartness and appropriateness for all-occasion wear have never been questioned.

This season presents the silken Suit in a fascinating commingling of the tailored and the dressy. Natural color Pongee or Shimmering Tricolette are fashioned in very new styles—coats with vests, plain, embroidered or of contrasting material; belts in the fashionable tie or cross style; skirts following the prevailing silhouette, one with cuff bottom. Two styles are here illustrated—on the left in Pongee, on the right, Tricolette.

THANK RAILWAY MEN FOR WAR WORK

HOLD RECOGNITION RALLY

Mechanical Section of Association Elects New Chairman—New Executive Committee Chosen.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 21.—Speakers tonight voiced the official recognition and commendation of the United States Government to the railway men of the country for their herculean part in the world conflict. The spokesmen for a thankful nation were Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, speaking for both the Army and the Navy Departments; United States Senator Walter E. Edge of New Jersey, and Colonel Henry W. Hodge, who was Assistant Director of Transportation in France for the American Expeditionary Force.

The occasion was a recognition night rally under the direction of the mechanical sections of the American Railway Association, and master car builders, superintendents of motive power and other executives of the big trunk lines now comprising the federalized railway system of the United States crowded the hippodrome of the Million Dollar Pier and cheered every reference to General W. W. Atterbury and other transportation specialists who made history when America crossed the Atlantic.

W. J. Tollerton, General Mechanical Superintendent of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, was elected Chairman for the mechanical sections for the next twelve months, with James Coleman, Superintendent of the Car Department of the Canadian Grand Trunk as Vice Chairman. The new Executive Committee, men who are to exercise wide powers under the decree that recommendations henceforth are to be mandatory upon the railroads instead of optional as in the past, are J. T. Wallis, General Superintendent of Motive Power for the Pennsylvania; T. H. Goodnow, Chicago & Northwestern; W. H. Winterrowe, Canadian Pacific; C. H. Hogan, New York Central; K. E. O'Brien, Missouri Pacific; A. Kearney, Norfolk & Western; S. F. Giles, Louisville & Nashville; J. W. Small, Mechanical Assistant to the Southern Regional Director; John S. Lentz, Lehigh Valley; H. R. Warbeck, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul; C. E. Fuller, Union Pacific; Samuel Lynn, Pittsburgh & Lake Erie; A. F. Preddergast, Texas & Pacific, and John R. Gould, Chesapeake & Ohio.

The American Railway Supply Manufacturers' Association elected George R. Carr of the Dearborn Chemical Company, Chicago, President from the floor. J. F. Schurch of Rochester was made Vice President, and J. D. Conway of Pittsburgh, Secretary-Treasurer. New Executive Committeemen are W. E. S. Bateman of Philadelphia, John M. Gillespie, Pittsburgh; C. D. Yenke, Cleveland; L. S. Wright, Chicago; Colonel George L. Morton, Atlanta.

Manila Traction Men Strike.

MANILA, P. I., June 21.—Manila is in the throes of a street car strike. Acting Governor Yeater refused the request of labor officials to remove the constabulary guards, who are assisting the traction company in maintaining service. Manila officials declare that agitators are seeking to oust foreign capital because of the alleged oppression of labor.

'HAMBY'S' IDENTITY MAY BE REVEALED

Letter from Western Attorney May Lead to Removal of Doubt Concerning Prisoner.

TRIAL BEGINS MONDAY

Self-Confessed Murderer Maintains Attitude of Indifference and Talks Glibly of Escaping.

District Attorney Harry E. Lewis of Kings County said yesterday that his hopes of clearing up the doubt surrounding the identity of Gordon F. Hamby, who is to be called to trial tomorrow in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, for the double murder and robbery in the East Brooklyn Savings Bank on Dec. 23 last, had been strengthened by a message which he had received from the West. The communication, he said, was a letter from a lawyer living in a Western city, who stated that he had strong reasons to believe that he could tell the District Attorney who Hamby really is if supplied with a photograph and full description of the prisoner. The requested photograph and description, as well as the known facts about Hamby, have been sent to the correspondent, and Mr. Lewis expects a reply in a short time. The District Attorney would not make public the contents of the letter he received.

"I'll be taken out of this place tomorrow to face the court," said Hamby. "My counsel, Mormer Assistant District Attorney Frank X. McCaffry, was in here today and we had a last talk about it. I don't know what course of action he is going to take. That seems to be up to him. Personally, I am entirely indifferent, aside from the fact that I want it cleaned up quickly. There seems to be a lot of unnecessary delay in this case. Why, if they would let me, I would go to the chair tomorrow, and have done with it. An appearance to me is the legal delay which must ensue. My understanding is that under the laws of New York State a plea of guilty cannot be accepted on arraignment for a capital offense; that I must be tried and, if convicted, the Court of Appeals must pass upon the verdict before the sentence of the trial court can be legally executed. All this really bores me; it means so many more months of delay. Out in Tacoma they sentenced me to life imprisonment for murder. I would rather die here in a short time than spend a lifetime in prison out in Washington."

Hamby will be taken from the jail in Raymond Street to the County Court House under the escort of a heavy guard, consisting of Deputy Sheriff James Shortell and three Assistants. Because of his supposed desperate character, Hamby, while on the way to and from the court, and during his stay in the court room itself, will always be shackled to two Deputy Sheriffs.

At the jail yesterday, Hamby, after his profession as to resignation to his fate, was asked if he would take a chance to escape.

"I would," he replied. "If it looked like a really good opportunity. If I got away, I would lay low for a time and then pull off the biggest job of my career, say $50,000. Then I would beat it from the well-known and justly popular U. S. A."

STEAMER NORTHLAND GOES AGROUND IN FOG

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 21.—The steamer Northland, Captain Snow, from New York for Boston, with 350 passengers and freight, went aground in a fog early today while making for the Buzzard's Bay entrance of the Cape Cod Canal.

The passengers were transferred to the steamer Uncatena of the Vineyard Line and the United States lighthouse tender Azalea, both of which went alongside the Northland, so that the passengers could walk aboard on planks lashed from deck to deck.

Two valuable horses consigned to a riding school in Boston were dragged along the plank and put safely aboard the Uncatena. The passengers brought off only hand baggage. Trunks were left on board.

The Northland was pulled off the ledge this afternoon without any great difficulty, as the sea was calm. Her outer hull was damaged under compartments 2 and 3, but the inner hull is reported intact.

The vessel is owned by the Eastern Steamship Company, and plies regularly between New York and Boston. While on Inland ledge, where she struck, is said to be the scene of the wreck of the steamer Sankaty three years ago.

PREPARING FOR JUNE 30.

Hotel Men Report Table Reservations Are Assuming Holiday Size.

Although the hotels have planned a special celebration to mark the advent of wartime prohibition, it was learned yesterday that reservations for tables on roof gardens and in the dining rooms of the leading hotels for the night of Monday, June 30, were being received in great numbers.

The number of reservations already made indicates that the patrons consider it an occasion for a holiday, and want to be on hand when the final blow is dealt to King Alcohol. Hotel men said yesterday that they expect a capacity business on the last night when intoxicants can be legally sold, unless the wartime restrictions are removed by the President.

Liquor dealers report heavy sales, and indications are that large stocks are being purchased for storage in private homes.

40-50 MILES ON A GALLON OF GASOLINE

TIRE MILEAGE COST AT LESS THAN ⅓ OF THE AVERAGE SMALL CAR

LENGTH OVER ALL 118 INCHES—WEIGHT COMPLETE 830 LBS.

The fact that THE SPACKE MACHINE & TOOL CO., who for the past twenty years have been recognized as one of the leading manufacturers of high-grade motors, transmissions, axles and automotive parts, are putting their name and reputation back of this car, is the best guarantee of its durability.

The SPACKE is not only the lowest-price automobile on the market, but the most economical to operate. Just think of it:—The man who can keep a car in his back yard can operate a SPACKE for a whole year and cover 10,000 miles at a cost not to exceed $4.00 per week, after allowing 30c. per gallon of gasoline for the maximum of 250 gallons required, ($75.00.) and have $125.00 for tires, oil and repairs, which is more than enough. It is almost unbelievable, but nevertheless a fact.

FOR QUICK COMMERCIAL DELIVERY the SPACKE has no rival, as it will not only make deliveries quickly and cheaply, but after business hours the owner can, in a few minutes, detach the delivery case, and use it as a pleasure car.

And the SPACKE not only appeals to the man who cannot afford a high-priced car, but also to the "moneyed" man who wants an auxiliary car to take him to and from the railroad station, the golf links or country club.

The SPACKE practically sells itself by reason of its low price, economy of up-keep and beauty of construction.

A SPACKE exclusive agency should show bigger profits on the capital invested than any other legitimate business.

As we are at present appointing agents in the LARGER CITIES ONLY, it will require an investment of $10,000 or more to swing an agency.

If interested, write at once, stating what territory you desire, and TO INSURE ATTENTION give particulars as to your present business connections together with A STATEMENT OF YOUR FINANCIAL STANDING and banking references.

RAYNHAM SPEEDING UP

Expects to Give His Rebuilt Martinsyde a Trial Flight on Monday.

HARBOR GRACE, June 21.—The hopes of the Handley-Page crew that they might start their Newfoundland to England flight today were dissipated when this morning's weather reports disclosed bad weather generally over England, marked by heavy rainstorms. Though the meteorological conditions over the ocean are still described as "improving," there are not sufficient westerly winds along the course to justify a departure.

The big twin-engined plane's cruising radius in still air is so far short of the 2,350-mile journey she must accomplish if she is to reach London that the flight will be foredoomed to failure, according to all calculations based upon past performances, unless she starts out with a stiff breeze under her tail and has the wind with her practically all the way.

Nervous over the possibility of the Handley-Page firm in London deciding to alter the plans and send the plane to America, members of the crew refused to give up hope of getting away tomorrow; though they do not really expect to depart either then or on Monday. Major Trygvve Gran, navigator of the expedition, is particularly anxious to get away this month because of the conjunction of stars which might prove of the greatest aid in steering.

Word reached the Handley-Page men today that Frederick P. Raynham expects to try on Monday his rebuilt Martinsyde with which he, too, will attempt the Atlantic crossing. His present intention is to fly to the Harbor Grace landing of the Handley-Page aerodrome. There is some talk of his remaining here and starting his flight from this aerodrome rather than returning to Quidi Vidi, where he crashed on his previous attempt to get away with a full load. So far as his intentions are known here, however, he will not take advantage of Handley-Page hospitality, but will return to Quidi Vidi and start from there.

Raynham is known to be eager to get away before the Handley-Page starts from here. His machine is very much faster, has a longer cruising radius, and with an even start should beat the Handley-Page. Should a race of this sort be flown, however, it will have but a sporting interest, there being no prize involved.

Members of the expedition here heard informally several days ago that The London Daily Mail, whose $50,000 prize for the first non-stop transatlantic flight was captured by Alcock and Brown with their Vickers-Vimy, would offer a new prize for a non-stop flight from Newfoundland to England. No further word of this has reached them, and they now are inclined to believe that they were misinformed.

Work on the Handley-Page stopped completely today for the first time. A holiday was given to the men because nothing remained to be done. It was their first since they began assembling the machine and Major Gran, to aid them in whiling away their leisure, organized a game of what he described as "international foot." Despite the cold and fog, the men seemed to take great zest in the game. Gran easily proving himself the star of the contestants.

News of the knighting of Captain John Alcock and Lieutenant Arthur W. Brown in honor of their achievement in making the first non-stop flight across the Atlantic, was received with real pleasure by their friends in Newfoundland. Both men were not only admired but genuinely liked while they were on the island preparing for their adventure, and though the thought of Alcock, in particular, being addressed as "Sir John" brings a smile to those who best know the unaffected, democratic simplicity of this 27-year-old veteran pilot, the feeling is that both men have received a well-deserved honor which they will not fail to carry gracefully.

Will Start Today, St. John's Hears.

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland, June 21, (Associated Press.)—The Handley-Page plane probably will start from Harbor Grace tomorrow morning on an attempted flight to the Irish coast, it was announced here tonight. An earlier start than that made by Captain Jack Alcock's Vickers-Vimy plane will be necessary to permit an early morning landing in Ireland, as the Handley-Page is a slower machine. The hour for the start has been set tentatively for 9 A. M.

ALCOCK AND BROWN TAKE $20,000 EACH

Give Remaining $10,000 Prize Money to Workmen Who Built Vimy.

LONDON, June 21.—Captain John Alcock, the pilot of the Vickers-Vimy airplane which made the first non-stop flight from North America to Ireland, announced today that he and Lieutenant A. W. Brown, the navigator, intended to divide equally $40,000 of the $50,000 prize given them by The Daily Mail. The other $10,000 will go to the workmen who built the machine.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 21.—The note of British-American community of interests was sounded again when Winston Churchill, Secretary for War and Air, proposed the health of Captain John Alcock and Lieutenant Arthur W. Brown, the men who made the first non-stop air flight across the Atlantic, at the luncheon at which they received the Daily Mail prize of $50,000.

He laid stress on the audacity and courage which were needed for such a flight as well as the equipped apparatus.

"It shows," he said, "that we have preserved all the chivalry and love of adventure of the knights of old. Columbus took ninety days to cross the Atlantic. These men took sixteen hours. But the facts are alike in the peril and the pluck they involved."

To praise the first non-stop trans-Atlantic flight, he maintained, was no disparagement of Hawker or of the brilliant exploits of the United States Navy, and he saw in their feats a symbol of the attempt that the two great English-speaking democracies are now making to work together to guarantee not only their own safety but the safety of the civilized world. Then, after a tribute to Lord Northcliffe and what he had done for flying, Churchill said:

"Gentlemen, I have said they have shown the spirit of knights. Why should they not be Knights? I am authorized to say the King will confer Knighthood on them tomorrow."

Churchill then handed the aviators a check for the prize money and they replied, describing their experiences.

Ambassador Davis also spoke, recalling the thrill that Hawker's exploit sent through America and saying that the feat of English and American-born fliers proved to every man that if England and the United States stood together they were invincible.

Mr. Marlowe, Editor of The Daily Mail, who presided in the absence of Lord Northcliffe through illness, referred to the American ancestry of Brown. His British domicile and American parents, he said, formed a combination which left room for nothing but satisfaction. He emphasized the fact that the trans-Atlantic flight was a new feat and that only time and labor were needed to develop it until it became of supreme importance to the two nations.

R-34 Will Delay Till Next Month.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Information has reached the Navy Department that the British dirigible R-34 probably will not leave Great Britain on the round trip across the Atlantic before July 4. It is understood the start next month is dependent upon the signing by the Germans.

FIND NEW FIELDS FOR AIR CONQUEST

AIRMEN DISCUSS OUTLOOK

Speaker Says Ends of the Earth Are to be Brought Near to Civilization.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, June 21.—Flights by air to the north pole, across the Pacific, and to virtually every part of the world, were discussed as probabilities of the early future by aviators and men actively identified in the practical development of aeronautics, meeting today.

The airmen and others came here to see a demonstration of the British Guardian Angel parachute, a new aerial life preserver. Among those who took part in the discussion were Captain Pierre Boss, a member of the French High Air Service during the war; Captain Carlo Tappi, acting Italian Air Attaché, who has been in the Italian Air Service since 1911, when he fought against the Turks in Africa; Major Orde Lees of the British Air Force, Gerry Woodhouse, Vice President of the Aerial League of America; Earl L. Ovington, who made the first American aerial mail experiment in 1911; Albert T. Bell and Harry E. Cook of the Aero Club of Atlantic City, A. S. Bell 3d of Baltimore, Joseph Steinmetz, President of the Aero Club of Pennsylvania, Eddie Stinson, and others.

Captain Boss told of flights by French aviators across the Mediterranean Sea, over the Atlas Mountains, and across the African deserts. Captain Tappi described flights by Italian aviators in Africa, and airplane passenger carrying lines across the Apennine Mountains. Major Orderlees told of flights of British aviators from London to Africa and to India, and plans to establish air transportation lines throughout the British Empire.

Mr. Woodhouse, in a talk, said: "The magnificent flights of the American and British aviators have just opened the tremendous possibilities for aerial achievements. Here are a few of the things still to be done:

"Cross the Atlantic by direct flights from the United States to England, France and Italy.

"Carry 1,000 pounds of mail in a non-stop direct flight from the United States to England, thereby demonstrating the utilitarian value of transatlantic air lines.

"Make a non-stop flight from New York to San Francisco first, then carry 1,000 pounds of mail or passengers in subsequent flights.

"Fly from New York to San Francisco within one day's daylight.

"Cross the North Pole from Cape Columbia to Chelyukin, as proposed and planned by Captain Robert A. Bartlett.

"Fly to Hawaii.

"Fly to the Philippines.

"Fly across the Pacific.

"Complete the aerial conquest of the Atlantic by flying it by each of the following routes: By way of the Azores, then to Madeira, then to either Spain or Africa; from South America to Barbados and across to the Canaries; from Cape Orange to Cape Verde, and then to the African coast; from Pernambuco to St. Paul Island, then either to Cape Verde or straight to the African coast; by way of Greenland and Iceland, to the Faroe Islands, and from there to England.

"Fly to Australia and New Zealand.

"Fly across Alaska and demonstrate how air transportation will help that country.

"Fly from the United States to Brazil and Argentina, and also from the United States to Chili, Peru, and other Latin-American countries, to show the possibilities of air transportation in South and Central America.

"A great many high mountains still remain to be conquered by air.

"The deserts still are to see permanent air lines which will make travel across them pleasant."

POLK SEEKS SOURCE OF EASTMAN'S CODE

State Department Wants to Know How Radical Got "Very Confidential Message."

SAY TEXT WAS GARBLED

Similar Memorandum Was Sent, but It Differs in Substance—Deny Its Importance.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Government officials have begun an investigation to determine how Max Eastman, the American-born radical, gained possession of what purported to be a translation of a "very confidential green cipher" official State Department cablegram sent to Secretary Lansing at Paris on Jan. 24 concerning the acceptance by the United States Government of the Japanese plan for control of the Siberian Railway by an interallied committee. The following official statement was given out today by the State Department:

"The attention of the Department of State has been called to the alleged text of a telegram from the Acting Secretary of State dated Jan. 24, 1919, to the Secretary of State at Paris, which, press reports state, was read at a radical mass meeting in New York last night as an argument that the President is waging a private war against Soviet Russia.

"The alleged telegram, as given in the press, corresponds in time with one which was actually sent, but the text of it differs in a number of important particulars. The message, in fact, sent to Mr. Lansing concerned the acceptance by the United States of a plan proposed by Japan for the supervision of the Siberian railways by an interallied committee until such time as the Russians could resume working the railways effectively themselves.

"The United States has been endeavoring to assist Russia by practical measures, so as to restore railway traffic, ever since John F. Stevens was sent to Russia in 1917, and had placed under his orders the organization of American railway engineers known as the Russian Railway Service Corps. When the Bolshevist, with the assistance of German and Austrian prisoners of war, attacked Czech and Russian troops a situation developed which required inter-allied support in restoring normal economic positions. Negotiations to this end were begun in the early Summer of 1918, but owing to recurring difficulties, were not concluded until February, 1919, when the plan finally proposed by Japan was accepted by the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, and China. A full summary of the plan was given to the press at that time."

What concerns officials here is how anyone could gain possession of even a garbled translation of a "very confidential" message dealing with international affairs. The question arises as to whether other confidential messages passing between the State Department and the American Peace Commission in Paris have fallen into the hands of unauthorized persons, and if so, whether they have obtained possession of a State Department cipher enabling them to translate dispatches intended to be secret.

On Jan. 13, approximately ten days before the alleged message was said to have been sent by Secretary Polk, Senator Johnson introduced in the Senate a resolution for the withdrawal of American forces from Russia. On Jan. 23, the day before the message was said to have been sent to Mr. Lansing, Senator Johnson commented on the decision of the Paris Conference to invite the Bolsheviki to attend the projected Prinkipo conference, which has never been held.

URGE MOVE TO HALT RED RULE

Ten Prominent Clergymen Issue Plea to Down Bolshevism.

In a statement issued yesterday by ten clergymen, including Dean Charles R. Brown of the Yale Divinity School, and Dean Howard C. Robbins of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, an appeal is made for Americans everywhere to consider ways and means of combating the spread of Bolshevism and anarchy. The statement urges that the law be allowed to take its course, and that in no case shall the case be rested on violence. In concluding, the statement reads:

To meet the situation we urge:

(1) That all men and women of good will set themselves to influence public opinion through every available medium against lawless measures, by whomsoever they may be employed.

(2) That they resolve to see that fair hearings and just trials are given to men, irrespective of their political or economic opinions, so that it may be truly said that in America no man's case, be he an I. W. W. or a Bolshevist, or the most reactionary conservative, is prejudged by an appeal to popular feeling; and in particular that they set themselves against the counsels of hate, whose effect upon the rising generation can only be to pile up future disaster for mankind.

(3) Since in the judgment of the Attorney General of the United States existing laws against criminal terrorism are adequate, and since free discussion is essential for the exposure of economic and political errors, that the attempt be abandoned to coerce minority opinion, so long as it does not promote disorder, and to defeat social change by repressive legislation.

As ministers of the Christian Church and as citizens of this liberty-honoring Republic we plead for faith in reason, good will and fairness to oppose the forces of bitterness and violence in our national life.

CONFISCATES ISSUE OF RADICAL PAPER

Toledo New Voice Had Violated Strike Injunction—Judge to Sentence Publisher to Prison.

TOLEDO, June 21.—On the ground that the editors violated terms of an injunction issued in the Willys-Overland labor controversy, Federal Judge Killits today confiscated an entire issue of The New Voice soon after it came off the press. Recently the paper contained an attack on the injunction power. The confiscated issue urges a general strike.

The court announced that early next week it would sentence Alex Schwarzenfeld, member of the Board of Control of The New Voice, to a penitentiary. The decision came after Schwarzenfeld, in court for contempt, announced that he "stood pat" on whatever appeared in the paper. Two other members of The New Voice staff, John Kavany and Walter Voelkner, are in jail. All three are members of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Council.

RAID RAND SCHOOL AND I. W. W. OFFICES

found in Reed's office. Everything seized was, for the most part, found in the desk and file cases in the office of Maximilian Cohen, the Executive Secretary of the Left Wing.

The raid on the I. W. W. offices in Fourth Street, revealed a batch of stamped envelopes, which bore the following return instruction printed with a rubber stamp:

If not delivered in five days
Return to
J. P. MORGAN & CO.,
New York, N. Y.

These envelopes were used in sending out propaganda and were intended to deceive the postal authorities who are charged with the exclusion of seditious and treasonable writings from the mails. It is the opinion of the authorities that the forged stationery of other prominent persons and firms has been used for similar purposes by radical elements in this and other cities. It was recalled that the conspirators who mailed the bombs to Senator Overman, Associate Justice Holmes, Attorney General Palmer, and other prominent citizens in May also forged the name of a prominent New York firm in the effort to deceive the postal authorities as well as the intended victims.

Copy of the Warrant.

The warrant issued by Chief Magistrate McAdoo was in the name of C. L. Converse, an agent of the Lusk Committee, who was also the person named in the Bolshevist "embassy" warrant. The warrant read as follows:

County of New York.
In the name of the people of the State of New York.

To any officer of the County of New York:

Proof by affidavit having been this day made before me by Clarence L. Converse that certain books, pamphlets, documents, printed, typewritten, and written, and other printed matter are in the possession of the Rand School of Social Science, the American Socialist Society, The Workers' World, and John Doe, Richard Roe, Thomas Poe, and Mary Roe, the said names being fictitious, true names unknown, but the persons so designated being the persons in charge of the following described premises commonly known as 7 East Fifteenth Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, and more particularly in the following portions of the said building, to wit: In the bookstore on the west side of the first floor of the said building; in the library on the second floor of the said premises; in the rooms marked respectively "Publicity Department" and "Store Room," on the third floor of the said premises; in Room 401 on the fourth floor; in Room 501, being the room occupied by The Workers' World, on the fifth floor of the said premises, and that the foregoing Rand School of Social Science, American Socialist Society, Workers' World, John Doe, Richard Roe, Thomas Poe, and Mary Roe have used the same and intend to use the same as the means of committing a public offense against the laws of the State of New York and of bringing about the overthrow of organized government by force, violence, and unlawful means, and of inciting riot and inciting the endangering of life and destruction of valuable property, you are therefore commanded at any time of the day or night or on Sunday to make immediate search of the premises specified in said affidavit for the following property:

All publications, documents, books, circulars, letters, typewritten or printed matter having to do with anarchists, Socialists, advocating violence, revolutionary or Bolshevist activities, and all books, letters, and papers pertaining to the activities or business carried on in said offices, and all circulars and literature of any sort, kind, or character, and if you find the same or any part thereof, to bring it forthwith before me at the Magistrate's Court, 300 Mulberry Street, New York.

WILLIAM M. McADOO,
Chief City Magistrate of the City of New York.

Dated at 300 Mulberry Street, June 21, 1919.

The affidavit which was filed with Magistrate McAdoo and upon which he acted in issuing the search warrant is a document of about 10,000 words. Briefly it may be summarized as follows:

"That at the premises commonly known as No. 7 East 15th Street there is located a building in which appears the following sign: "Rand School of Social Science, the People's House, Rand School Book Store," the said premises are maintained by the Rand School of Social Science and by the American Socialist Society and persons unknown to the deponent. That on the twentieth day of June, 1919, I did purchase of a mature person in charge of the said book store certain publications there displayed and for sale. The books which I there purchased were the following: The New Social System, or the Correct Basis of Economics and Ethics. Manifesto and Programme of the Left Wing Section, Socialist Party Local, Greater New York, and three copies of The Workers' World of April 21, May 1, and May 30, 1919, and The New York Communist of Saturday, June 14.

Education Opposed.

From the New Social System the following quotations:

"Compulsory education is slavery and must go."

"The new system will have courts of liberty and justice instead of the so-called justice courts of the present, and which do not know the meaning of justice."

"Liberty will give her (woman) knowledge of how to get utmost happiness minus the pain which is now mixed with it and will enable her to select her best affinity at all times and children or not born children as she chooses. Justice will pay her for the average time it takes to properly raise a good child. A hog raiser gets paid for raising hogs, and a spud raiser for nursing and caring for potatoes. If simple products are worth paying for, then why not producers of all products worth paying for?"

"Compulsory marriage will be abolished and sex mating become a private affair. Liberty requires that best judgment, natural selection, and natural desire be always used in the present and to bind the future with solemn oath with bondage slavery."

"Sunday laws, like marriage laws and most other laws are infringements on liberty. Religion is an auxiliary of rulers and was invented, or at least used, by slave masters and tyrants to further keep their slaves in subjection. Progressive people should work and fight for justice and liberty, now, first, last and all the time, individually and collectively, and start the co-operative commonwealth going now."

The affidavit comments as follows:

There are a great many other revolutionary, seditious, and obscene statements in the said book contained which are not quoted in this affidavit.

"It is the task of a revolutionary Socialist Party to direct struggles of the proletariat and to provide a program for the culminating crisis. The program must be so directed that when the crisis comes the workers will be prepared to accept a program of the following character:

"The organization of Workmen's Councils; workmen's control of industry; repudiation of all national debts; expropriation of the banks; expropriation of the railways, and such organizations; the socialization of foreign trade."

In the publication called The New York Communist, under date of June 14, are contained various articles advocating the duty, necessity, and propriety of overthrowing and overturning organized Government by force or violence and by unlawful means. Under the caption "Bombs" is the following:

"The country is up in arms; the man hunt is on, and anyone who is particularly active as a working class champion is liable to be railroaded for a long prison term. The system (referring to the United States Government) must be overthrown by the action of the workers organized as a class conscious mass for the purpose of inaugurating the proletarian dictatorship."

Avoids Direct Answer.

Under the caption "A Reply to a Non-Partisan League Farmer" the affidavit quotes in part:

"Do you hold that the revolution must come by violence? To answer this question by yes or no would be asinine. It may. The Left Wing hopes that the proletariat will conquer its enemy, the capitalistic class, with as little bloodshed as possible."

Under the head of "Violence or Solidarity" there is a long question of which the following is a part:

"Even in its death throes capitalism is not going to allow the workers to take hold of the shattered machinery of civilization without a battle. The Left Wing advocates a strong and close organization of the working class in order that it may assume the State power. The economic foundation for the institution of the dear love of comrades is not to be won without bloodshed and tears. There is no place for pacifists in the social revolution."

From The Rebel Worker, an I. W. W. paper printed in this city, there is quoted from the issue of April 15 last the following:

"The United States is in the grip of a bloody revolution! Thousands of workers are slaughtered by machine guns in New York City! Washington is on fire! Industry is at a standstill and thousands of workers are starving. The Government is using the most brutal and repressive measures to put down the revolution. The above is what we may expect to see in the front pages of what few newspapers survive the upheaval."

The affidavit, continuing, says the persons who are engaged in maintaining the said premises and in circulating, selling, displaying, distributing, and giving away the various publications, books, documents, records, and newspapers printed and written, are to me unknown, but I am informed and believe that some of said persons aiding and abetting are as follows: Andre A. Courland, Eugene Lyons, Harold L. Varney, H. M. Sawdon, Bertha Maslly, Scott Nearing, Ludwig Lore, Louis L. Lochner, Benjamin Glassberg, (which latter person was a public school teacher in the City of New York and was dismissed for his seditious utterances) A. L. Trachtenberg, (an attorney of the City of New York, Harry Dana, D. P. Berenberg, Herman Epstein, Norman Thomas, Lajpat Rai, Henry Neuman, James O'Neal, Irwin St. John Tucker, (who was convicted under the Esplonage act and who is now out on bail pending appeal, and others whose names are unknown to the deponent.

Sees Incentive to Bolshevism.

"If these people don't want Bolshevism in America," said Mr. Block, "they had better stop trying to create it. I refer to this man, Stevenson, and the members of the so-called Lusk Committee, who are responsible for this entirely indefensible action on the part of the State. They will find nothing here that violates the law. We are American citizens, and we are going to demand our rights in this case. This whole thing is malicious."

In the great worldwide struggle which is taking place today we must take active part. We must not fail, we must not falter. The ideals which inspired Marx and Engels, Bebel and Lassalle, the ideals which today inspire Debs and Lenin, are the ideals which inspire us—the ideals of international socialism! Long live the Socialist Party of America! Long live the educational work of our movement and the Rand School of Social Science!

Demand for Bolshevism.

There was also seized thousands of circulars ready to be mailed in which the revolutionary aims of the Left Wing are set forth in detail. This program of revolution and confiscation as outlined in the seized papers is as follows:

It is the task of a revolutionary Socialist Party to direct the struggles of the proletariat and provide a program for the culminating crisis. Its propaganda must be so directed that when this crisis comes the workers will be prepared to accept a program of the following character:

(a) The organization of workmen's councils; recognition of, and propaganda for, these mass organizations of the working class as instruments in the immediate struggle, as the form of expression of the class struggle, and as the instruments for the seizure of the power of the State and the basis of the new proletarian State of the organized producers and the dictatorship of the proletariat.

(b) Workmen's control of industry, to be exercised by the industrial organizations (industrial unions or Soviets) of the workers and the industrial vote, as against Governmental ownership or State control of industry.

(c) Repudiation of all national debts.—With provisions to safeguard small investors.

(e) Expropriation of the railways, and the large (trust) organizations of capital.—No compensation to be paid, as "buying out" the capitalists would insure a continuance of the exploitation of the workers; provision, however, to be made during the transition period for the protection of small owners of stock.

(f) The socialization of foreign trade.

These are not the "immediate demands" comprised in the social reform planks now in the platform of our party; they are not a compromise with the capitalist state, but imply a revolutionary struggle against that state and against capitalism, the conquest of power by the proletariat through revolutionary mass action, and the establishment of the Soviet state of the organized producers, the dictatorship of the proletariat; they are preliminary revolutionary measures for the expropriation of capital and the introduction of communist Socialism.

The raid on the I. W. W. was directed by Henry Grunewald of the Adams-Grunewald Investigating Agency. Grunewald had six State troopers and several of his own agents. When they entered the offices two of the I. W. W. officials jumped through a window, and a third escaped through a rear entrance. No effort was made to intercept them, because the agents were not looking for prisoners, but for documentary evidence.

A part of the documents, &c., seized on June 12 during the raid on the Bolshevist "embassy" were returned to Ludwig C. A. K. Martens, the "envoy," yesterday.

While their headquarters was being raided the Left Wing was holding a national convention in the Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East Fourth Street. At about the time the convention was coming to order, the Constabulary started a raid on the I. W. W. headquarters less than a block away. From that time on the proceedings of the Left Wing convention were being conducted behind closed doors. Outposts were placed to give the alarm in case the police should come and no one was admitted without a red card.

Maximilian Cohen, Executive Secretary of the Left Wing, was asked last night if it was not unusual to hold a national convention behind closed doors.

"My dear Sir," said Mr. Cohen, "if we do not let reporters in it is because we do not consider that it is any of the public's business what we are doing. This is not a convention in the sense that we are making nominations or adopting a platform; we are merely effecting an organization and discussing internal party affairs, more or less of a routine nature."

The confidential cablegram from Acting Secretary of State Polk to Secretary Lansing, in which the Russian situation was the matter of discussion, which was read at Madison Square Garden by Max Eastman, is a subject of investigation by the Department of Justice Bureau in this city. Eastman said yesterday that the message had been sent to him anonymously and that he had been given to understand that the decoded message was found in a waste basket.

Julius Gerber, Executive Secretary of the Socialist Party in New York County, in a letter to The Times yesterday, pointed out that the meeting held in Madison Square Garden on Friday night was under the auspices of the Russian Federation of the so-called Left Wing Socialist Party, which had been repudiated by the Socialist Party. Mr. Gerber added that none of the speakers at the Friday night meeting was a member of the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party, and that, with the possible exception of C. E. Ruthenberg of Cleveland, none are members of the party.

Survey's Editor Protests.

Paul U. Kellogg, editor of The Survey, whose name was among those culled for publication by the Lusk committee from the mailing list of the Soviet Russian Mission, sent a protest to The Times yesterday against the committee's tactics. Mr. Kellogg called attention to the fact that another list, produced by Archibald E. Stevenson, associate counsel of the committee, before a Congress committee investigating disloyal activities had been repudiated by Secretary of War Baker.

"If the committee had seen fit to raid the anti-Bolshevist offices of the Russian Information Bureau, it would probably have found my name on the mailing lists of that organization," he wrote Mr. Kellogg. "The Survey is anxious to have all the press matter and fugitive literature that is going.

"The ostensible purpose of Mr. Stevenson in publishing this mailing list was to show that the Soviet Bureau was acting outside its ostensible commercial purpose and engaging in propaganda. But I gather that this list was logged in rather to daub up some perfectly good names. It tends to discredit the liberals whose names are included—discredit them in their work; discount among people who are unacquainted with the circumstances, any stand they may take in the future. More, it may be presupposed to stay the hands of other liberals who believe that even the under-dog should be given a hearing, that old rights are worth preserving, and that open discussion is the way of democracy; but who may fear to take up the cudgels when such things are at stake, lest they wake up some morning and find themselves, like Abou Ben Adhem, at the head of another of Mr. Stevenson's lists and published discriminatingly in THE TIMES under headlines enumerating anarchists, Socialists, I. W. W.'s, and Fomenters of Discord. I think Mr. Stevenson and his kind are reckoning without their host. I doubt if this sort of intimidation will work for long. As tactics, it is as old as the hills and as shallow as a mud puddle."

PREACH REVOLT AT MEETING.

Crowd Cheers Red Speeches at Fifth Avenue and 110th Street.

Every shade of revolutionary doctrine was preached yesterday at the open air meetings of the Socialists of the Seventeenth Assembly District, but the predominating hue was a deep-dyed red. From three of the corners of the plaza at Fifth Avenue and 110th Street radical speakers held forth from early afternoon to evening, and the burden of their speeches was "Hands off Russia! Down with Kolchak! Long live the Russian Soviets!" to which the crowds which gathered around each of the speakers would shout in wild approval.

The raids on the Russian Soviet Bureau and the Rand School came in for bitter denunciation, and one speaker assured his audience that the Socialists would continue to disseminate Bolshevist propaganda in this country despite all opposition, and that they would not stop until the social revolution was brought about.

Two Aldermen, Abraham Beckerman and Maurice Calman, were among the speakers, and they were particularly vehement in denouncing such acts as the mobilization of the State troops, the seizure of Socialist property, and the use of bombs. Mr. Calman charged that the bombs had been placed by the private detective agencies. Other speakers were Albert Rhys Williams, Norman Thomas, Abraham Tuvim, Henry Jager, Isidore Polstein, Frederick Kraft, Mary McVicker, Louis Weits, and Mrs. Ella Reeves Bloor.

While these meetings are a regular Socialist fixture, and are accepted therefore as matter of fact events by the Socialists of the neighborhood, recent events have added a new note of attacks on the established order of things. However, there was no disorder even while the most radical statements were being made, and the three or four policemen who were scattered around the plaza found nothing else to do but look on with bored expressions. One picturesque figure did attract their attention. A workingman dressed in faded blue overalls, a battered slouch hat, and puffing continually on a pipe, bore on his back the legend, "The One Big Union," and when no one was looking he slowly and deliberately posted on the board fence at the northeast corner a crude oilcloth poster which read:

Industrial revolution will bring the workers what they want.
The One Big Union will open the jails.
Line up today—fellow-workers.
Protesters will not do it—Action is needed.
Organize—Solidarity.
I have cards and applications here.

Perhaps the most open defiance of the present Government was that expressed by Tuvim. He reiterated on several occasions intentions of the Socialists to keep up their propaganda until the social revolution was at hand, and that nothing could stop them from spreading Bolshevist doctrines throughout the country. While speaking on the subject of Russia, he unexpectedly drew forth a banner inscribed, "Down with Kolchak!" This was greeted with considerable applause, but when he displayed another with the words "Long Live the Russian Soviets!" the crowd went wild. He then within a few minutes collected $220 for the cause.

Calman told the audience that the Socialists were anxious to bring about changes altogether peacefully, but that the raids, the bomb outrages, and the mobilization of State troops were all calculated to make the people do things they would not otherwise think of. He said that all the circumstances surrounding the bomb plots pointed to an act on the part of private detective agencies.

Thomas held that the Allies were simply dishonest in their support of Kolchak, and that instead of prating about his democracy which did not exist, they should simply say that a strong man was needed who would use the whip on the Bolsheviki. Mrs. Bloor referred to the policemen who took part in the raids on the Martens office and the Rand School as men who sold their souls for 50 cents.

"The One Big Union," she declared, "is the only agent that will release us from the den of iniquity of the capitalist system. In my work in the prisons I have been astonished at the spread of Bolshevist propaganda among the inmates. Whenever they put our comrades in jail their ideas permeate the place, and again and again I have found the Warden and keeper reading copies of The New York Call and The Liberator. The increase in friendship between the Bolsheviki and the Secret Service men who cover their meetings has been marked of late. In one town out West a policeman asked the Socialist speaker for help in forming a policemen's protective association."

ORDER OUT NAVY CRAFT TO CRUSH ALASKA RISING

JUNEAU, Alaska, June 21.—Submarine Chaser 310 was ordered by Governor Thomas Riggs, Jr., to the vicinity of Yakutat Village to quell a reported native uprising today. The Governor also ordered the gunboat Vicksburg to Kodiak and Port Althrop, where cannery men are striking, and from where reports of alleged Bolshevist activities have been received.

DANIELS ASKS PALMER TO AID IN OIL SUIT

Transfer of Atlantic Refining $2,200,000 Case to Court of Claims Sought.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Secretary Daniels has asked the co-operation of Attorney General Palmer in fighting the suit which has been brought against the Government by the Atlantic Refining Company to recover $2,200,000, representing the difference between the prices paid by the Navy Department as tentative during the war for gasoline, fuel oil, and similar commodities and the so-called current prices in Philadelphia during the war period.

Government officials feel that a legal point of tremendous importance is involved, as the suit is the result of the price fixing system in use by the navy and other Government departments during the war, and a decision adverse to the Navy Department might be followed by the filing of claims for huge sums by other industries which have accepted Government prices.

The suit is now in the United States District Court at Philadelphia and soon will come to trial. The Navy Department announced to-night that the Government's first step would be to fight for a motion, already entered, to have jurisdiction established in the Court of Claims instead of the court in Philadelphia.

The Navy Department has made some payments to the Atlantic Refining Company based upon prices considered fair after a study by the Federal Trade Commission of the cost of production. Officials said tonight that with one exception the Atlantic Refining Company was the only company furnishing the navy with fuel oil during the war which now refuses to accept the navy's scale of prices. Secretary Daniels held an extended conference with Attorney General Palmer today and, it is stated, the full support of the Department of Justice in fighting the suit was promised him.

REBEL FORCES RULE A HALF OF MEXICO

ONLY 60,000 TROOPS

President Too Weak to Keep Order as Bandits Harass Whole Country.

The Mexican problem was never more troublesome; conditions in that revolution-racked land have reached the stage of chaos, notwithstanding the roseate statements of Candido Aguilar, son-in-law of Carranza, now in this country as the personal representative of President Carranza of that part of Mexico which is not under rebel or bandit control.

Carranza today controls little more than one-half of Mexican territory, and his hold on that is not at all secure. Opposed to him are six organized rebel organizations, not including the Sonora Yaquis, while everywhere his authority is hampered and his troops harassed by organized banditry.

Bearing upon actual conditions in Mexico THE TIMES has come into possession of certain information, now in the official possession of the United Government. Verification of these statements which follow, is to be found in the archives of the Government in Washington.

Carranza has officially claimed that he is supported by a regular army of 200,000 well disciplined and well equipped troops. This statement is not borne out by the facts in the case, and the truth of the matter is that his armed forces number not more than 60,000 officers and enlisted men, who are poorly equipped, whose morale is at low ebb, but upon whose loyalty depends Carranza's sway over a people who number more than 115,000,000.

Today the Coahuila "chieftain" is exercising authority in those parts of Mexico not under rebel or bandit domination as a dictator and through the promulgation of executive decrees. Of the great American border-line Carranza is in control of not much more than one-third, while the whole of Southern Mexico is severed from "Federal control" by a stretch of rebel-controlled territory that on the Atlantic extends from the rich oil lands of Tampico almost to the City of Vera Cruz, and on the Pacific by the entire coast line of the great State of Oaxaca. Lower California has become to all intents and purposes independent of the Government that sits in Mexico City.

Three General Divisions.

The contending forces in Mexico may be referred to under three general heads. They are:

First—The Federal or Carrancista forces.

Second—The rebel forces led by Felipe Angeles, Francisco Villa, Guillermo Meixuerio, a full-blooded Zapotec Indian, and by many well informed observers considered the ablest and most trustworthy leader in Mexico; Felix Diaz, Manuel Pelaez, who dominates the Tampico and adjacent oil fields; the Zapatistas, still, despite Carranza affirmation, a power in that part of Mexico of which the State of Morelos is the center; General Cantu, Governor of the State of Lower California, and the organized Yaqui Indian forces of the western part of the border State of Sonora.

Third.—The bandits who, in small groups, are operating everywhere in Mexico.

As to the first or Federal forces supporting Carranza, it is, as already pointed out, the official claim of the present Mexican, or Carranza, Government that this force numbers 120,000 men. It is a conscript army to a great extent and it is small and inefficient for two reasons, the first being Carranza's inability to enforce conscription and the second the fact that he is unable properly to equip, train, or maintain necessary discipline.

Owing to these two conditions, over which Carranza appears to have no control, the Federal Army of Mexico is today at its maximum strength. It is an army poorly organized, equipped as a rule with rifles of 30-30 calibre and of various makes, the artillery consisting of about 300 pieces of German and French makes, the calibres being from 50 to 105 millimeters. The ammunition is of poor grade, and is for the most part the product of the Government factories at Mexico City. There are a few airplanes, but owing to the lack of an organized air force, are of little service. Of this army a large proportion is held in or near Mexico City, leaving the remainder, numbering less than a full division, according to the American organization, to guard and maintain supremacy in the States of Nuevo Leon, Eastern Coahuila, Southern Durango, Hidalgo, San Luis Potosi, Guanajuato, Queretaro, Michoacan, Jalisco, Tepic, Zacatecas, Guerrero, Colima, Chiapas, Campeachy, Yucatan, Tabasco, Quintana Roo, and the eastern or Atlantic edge of the State of Vera Cruz, which territory on paper remains under Federal control.

The big transcontinental stretch of rebel-controlled territory, which averages more than 100 miles in width, and which forms an unbroken barrier from ocean to ocean, completely separates the Federal-controlled States of the South Chiapas, Campeachy, Yucatan, Tabasco, part of Vera Cruz, and Quintana Roo from the States or parts of States near which Carranza still holds away to the north.

Villa Forces Strongest.

Of the organized opposition groups which are seeking to overthrow Carranza, the most powerful is that which is operating in Chihuahua and neighboring States under Angeles and Villa. The Villistas, as this force is popularly known, is not the unorganized, poorly equipped, and undisciplined force that a great many people in this country think it is. It is, on the other hand, probably the best organized and equipped military organization in Mexico. It numbers 10,000 men commanded by Angeles, the French trained rebel leader, with Villa second in command. It is well equipped with rifles and is said to have a fairly well organized artillery arm, and the Villistas fire the best ammunition, which, as a rule, is American made and is smuggled across the Rio Grande by "gun runners."

The Angeles-Villa forces are today practically in control of the entire State of Chihuahua, a large part of Durango, the eastern part of Sonora, and the western part of Carranza's own State of Coahuila.

The one part of Chihuahua that Angeles and Villa do not control is the border city of Juarez, opposite El Paso, and they would today be in possession of that much-needed border port but for the fact that they brought about American intervention in their plans by firing over the border into the Texas city. The Americans did not go to Juarez to help Carranza, as some people think, but solely for the purpose of safeguarding the lives of Americans on the Texas side of the Rio Grande.

The next most important rebel force in Mexico is that under command of Manuel Pelaez, who dominates the oil-producing regions of the Tampico country. Pelaez has under his command 3,000 well organized and fairly well equipped men. The important Atlantic ports of Tampico and Tuxpam are under his domination, and his sway along the coast extends south to a point within a few miles of the northern outskirts of the city of Vera Cruz. The value of the foreign oil interests in the territory in which Pelaez is operating is estimated at more than $300,000,000. Pelaez is said to be pro-Ally in sentiment, and to this is due in large part the failure of the Germans and their Carrancista sympathizers to gain control of the oil fields while the European war was actively under way.

Alles Like Meixuerio.

Under Guillermo Meixuerio, in the State of Oaxaca, is another rebel force of several thousand well organized men. Carranza has made desperate but ineffectual efforts to dislodge Meixuerio, who is easily one of his most feared opponents and whose record is such as to win the sympathetic approval of the Allies. Meixuerio is a full Zapotec, is a lawyer, and a man of fine education. He was elected Governor of Oaxaca, which is the home State of old Don Porfirio Diaz, but refused to serve, preferring to remain in the field in command of his men.

For more than four years all efforts to overthrow Meixuerio have met with failure. It was in 1915 that the Oaxaca Legislature formally renounced Carranza and decreed that "until the constitutional order is re-established in the republic the free and sovereign State of Oaxaca resumes its sovereignty, and will continue governing in the observation of the Constitution of 1857, with all its standing laws and procedures." Meixuerio is pro-Ally and anti-German.

Next in importance among the rebel groups is that commanded by Felix Diaz. Under Diaz, according to official information, there are approximately 5,000 men. The Diaz forces, however, unlike those under Pelaez, Angelos, and Meixuerio, are loosely organized and are said to be in great need of ammunition and other war materials. Despite this handicap, however, the Felicistas, as the Diaz rebels are known, continue to be a force, and all the efforts of Carranza to break up the organization have failed. The Felicistas are operating in the State of Tamaulipas in the north and in parts of Hidalgo, Puebla, and Vera Cruz in the south. The southern Felicista area forms the centre link in the rebel ocean to ocean barrier.

The State of Morelos and small parts of the States of Mexico and Guerrero form the area in which the famous Zapatistas are and have been operating for the last seven years. Carranza has officially announced that Zapata was killed in battle with Federal forces, but this is a report that remains unverified from any reliable source.

It is recalled that time and again Villa was reported killed or desperately wounded, and yet the fact remains that Villa is alive and is physically sound as he was in the days when he was the right hand of Francisco Madero. Whether their leader be dead or alive, the Zapatistas are still operating, the main Zapatista force, consisting of about 1,000 well equipped Indian mountain fighters.

As for Cantu, in Lower California, the situation there can be dismissed with a word. Cantu is in absolute control of that part of Mexico, and Carranza is making no effort to interfere with the independent State that Cantu has set up.

Smuggle Arms In.

The seventh of Carranza's troubles are the Yaquis of Western Sonora. They are operating in bandit groups and number probably several thousand. Like the Villistas, they are armed and equipped by smuggling from the United States. The Yaquis are among the hardiest and best fighters in Mexico, and little if any effort is being made by the Federal Government to restore order in that part of Sonora under their domination.

Lastly, the bandits. Official reports prove that everywhere in Mexico the outlaw bands are to be found. Their number is unknown, but they are powerful enough to hold the attention of a considerable part of Carranza's hard-pressed little regular army of 60,000 men.

Briefly, what precedes gives the line-up of the factions that are fighting for control in Mexico.

Here are some of the facts, officially established, that have resulted from the country-wide internecine strife in Mexico.

Economically Mexico is in the midst of a crisis which is characterized by the intense poverty and the actual want of the great mass of the people. The morale of the population everywhere was never lower than at the present time. The general health of the people is everywhere bad. Cattle raising, the principal industry of the nation, is today only about 10 per cent. of what it was in 1914. Of all Mexican industries the growing of henequin alone shows progress. All textile factories and sugar mills, with a few exceptions, are out of business, and those that are operating are run down and in need of repair. Practically all of the country's 16,000 miles of railroads are demoralized or destroyed as a result of rebel and bandit activity. Not a cent of interest has been paid on the national foreign debt in more than five years.

More than 75 per cent. of the population is now absolutely illiterate. The national credit is gone, and the foreign oil interests are, despite the apparent friendly attitude of Pelaez, pessimized. As an indication of the health of the people, latest reports estimate the yearly death rate in Mexico City at 21,000, while the reported birth rate is only 7,500. It is believed, however, that a correct census would show a larger birth rate, although the 7,500 estimate is official.

At the present time all reliable reports coming out of Mexico indicate the precarious condition of the Carranza Government. Carranza has been during the past three years probably the most pro-German head of a State in the western hemisphere.

Openly Pro-German.

Until recently his attitude has been unfriendly to the United States, and when he thought Germany was winning he made no efforts to conceal his sympathy for the Teutons. Legislation that was passed during the war and which was directed against the allied oil holdings in the Tampico country is generally believed, in private as well as official circles, to have been inspired by German interests and representatives in Mexico. Protests against this legislation have been filed by the American, British, and French Governments.

Since he developed his anti-American attitude Carranza has fanned his supporters with the slogan of "Latin-American Solidarity" against the great northern republic, and today the most generally developed trait in the majority of Mexicans in Federal controlled territory is that of anti-Americanism. And furthermore, reports from authentic sources show that Mexico today has, to a great extent, relapsed into a state of semi-civilization.

An official of the United States Government, thoroughly familiar with the situation, was asked the other day the causes of the trouble in Mexico. He replied that they were fourfold—first, the racial traits, cunning, stoicism, mistrust, and indifference of the people generally; the insecurity everywhere of life and property; the extreme poverty, with its consequent lowering of national morale, and finally the exile from the country of practically all of the strong men who in the past did their part in winning for Mexico an assured place "in the society of civilized nation."

As to the future of Mexico, that is a question that American officials do not discuss for publication at the present time. That the situation is one that demands the most serious consideration they all admit.

FILES PROTEST ON GILLETT.

Rojo Asked "Reparation" In Record of Pan American Meeting.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Dr. Juan B. Rojo, counsellor and Charge d'Affaires of the Mexican Embassy, filed a formal protest with the Board of Governors of the Pan American Union today, in which he charged that Speaker F. H. Gillett of the House of Representatives was guilty of "a breach of the most elementary rules of hospitality" because of the address he delivered before the second Pan American Commercial Congress, in which he referred to Mexico as a "plague spot."

Dr. Rojo's protest was addressed to the President of the board here as follows:

"In my capacity of representative of Mexico at the second Pan American Commercial Conference I ratify by means of this note the protest against the improper remarks of Speaker of the House Gillett, which I verbally presented to the Hon. William Phillips, Acting Secretary of State, who presided at that meeting. I was naturally indignant that any one enjoying the standing of Speaker Gillett should have been guilty of a breach of the most elementary rules of hospitality, and, after accepting the invitation of the Board of Governors of the Pan American Union, should offend one of the member States.

"If the Mexican situation is at present a favorite political argument, I think that the Speaker might well have found a more opportune place and time to treat this matter than at a purely commercial gathering, whose call specifically eliminated all political questions. His attitude will convince all unbiased observers that in the alleged lack of harmony imputed to Mexico by Mr. Gillett the fault does not always lie with us Mexicans.

"The statement that Mexico is the chief impediment in international trade is an absurd misrepresentation of facts. I shall reply not on opinions, but on statistics to be found in the Pan American Union. The trade between Mexico and the United States is daily increasing. Our trade with Central and South America, although still in its infancy, is, nevertheless, on a firm foundation. We have an interoceanic route and we have invited the whole world to make use of it. I refer to the Tehuantepec Railroad, whose importance as a stimulus to a world trade is as important as the Panama Canal route.

"I wish the Speaker had spoken more frankly and that he had given the remedy he proposed for the ills of Mexico its true name—'intervention in Mexico.' Then 15,000,000 inhabitants would know whether they can take care of their own affairs or not.

"As an act of reparation to my country I request your excellency to admit this protest and to order that when the minutes of these sessions shall be published it be inserted in full immediately following the address which brought forth this protest."

What could be more beautiful in your Dining Room than a handsome old St. Domingo Mahogany Sideboard, in that soft, dull finish which is so often sought, though seldom found, and other pieces to match. Each piece radiating good cheer and making your dinner a pleasure instead of a mere habit.

Then for the Bedroom a handsome four-poster, a good looking Chest of Drawers and a lovely old Dresser; or Twin Beds and pieces to match, perfect replicas of the originator's own models.

For the Guest Room we have a dainty little Windsor Suite—black enamel and very cleverly decorated. It is composed of Twin Beds, Chifforobe with Mirror, small Dresser with separate Mirror, Writing Table and Two Chairs.

For the Living Room we have innumerable Tables of all sizes and styles; Bookcases to match; big, luxuriant Davenports and real comfortable Chairs that one is loath to leave having once occupied them; also Wing Chairs and the smaller pieces that go to complete the furnishing of a room.

The personnel of our sales force is excellent. Lady and gentlemen attendants who are eager to advise and assist you in your selections and can give expert advice on all matters pertaining to interior furnishing and all things connected therewith.

A Guarantee That Is Always Given, But Never Needed

THE ordinary Money-Back Guarantee, which accompanies all honorable merchandise, is the tardy pound of cure for something going amiss. The John David Guarantee is the early ounce of prevention against anything going amiss. We sell no article in the gambling spirit of "We-hope-you'll-keep-the-goods-but-you-needn't." We sell that article with assured and absolute knowledge that it is worth your money.

The John David Money-Back Guarantee is always given, but never needed. We give it, because it sets a goal for us as Merchants to live up to an Institutional Standard of Quality and Value, not because we seek to shine in the eyes of our customers as fair-dealing business men.

The John David Money-Back Guarantee, which goes (and stays) with every purchase of our Men's Clothes, Haberdashery and Headwear, is seldom mentioned in public print, because, making sure of offering only good goods, we find we have no bad goods to make good on.

Assistant Secretary Polk Gives Information to House Foreign Relations Committee.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—The Wilson Administration's cards in the Mexican situation were spread upon the table before the House Committee on Foreign Affairs today by Frank L. Polk, who is acting as Secretary of State in the absence of Secretary Lansing in Paris. Mr. Polk spoke with complete frankness after he had been assured that what he said would be treated as absolutely confidential and with the understanding that nothing he might tell in executive session of the committee would be revealed. He reviewed the whole drift of the Mexican situation as viewed through State Department spectacles, based on its own confidential reports and information, but did not go into the El Paso incident, which is regarded as closed.

The appearance of Acting Secretary Polk before the committee marks the adoption of a new policy by members of that committee and is evidence of a determination on their part to keep in closer touch than in the past with American foreign relations during the period of reconstruction immediately following the signing of the Peace Treaty with Germany. Representative Stephen G. Porter of Pennsylvania, who is the new Chairman of the committee, and other members feel that conferences similar to that held with Mr. Polk today will be productive of great good.

The committee is well aware of the importance of the Mexican situation and wanted to have a general picture of it presented to them by an official qualified to relate the facts and state the Administration's attitude. During today's hearing Mr. Polk went into the Mexican petroleum situation and the claims of Americans and foreigners for loss of lives and property in Mexico. From what could be gathered from members of the committee after the hearing ended they were convinced that nothing had arisen to cause alarm.

"It is absolutely necessary," said Chairman Porter, in a statement issued after Mr. Polk left the Capitol, "for the Committee on Foreign Affairs to keep itself fully informed at all times of the facts connected with our foreign relations, if it expects to function efficiently. This is especially true during this reconstruction period. We have, therefore, arranged for hearings before the committee of representatives from the State Department so as to obtain full information about the conditions in many of the foreign countries.

"We had Acting Secretary Polk before us this morning for upward of two hours in an informal discussion of Mexico. We did not go into the El Paso incident, and it is closed. Our purpose was to secure general information from the department as to the situation in that country. There will be other hearings on the Mexican question from time to time, as we think the situation justifies.

"I am pleased to state that the department is in entire harmony with this plan, and I am sure that it will be productive of great benefit. In case an emergency should arise we will be fully informed, and can act quickly and intelligently."

General March said today that his reports showed everything to be quiet along the border at the present time. "I have a dispatch here from General Cabell, in which he says reports all along the line indicate that everything is extremely quiet," he said.

While everything appears to have simmered down for the present along the border, recent developments there, coupled with confidential reports reaching the War and State Departments regarding the general situation in Mexico, the inability of the Carranza Government so far to cope with the rebels in Northern Mexico and elsewhere, and the prospect that the revolutionists will extend their activities as the Summer advances, have convinced officials that this Government must proceed with firmness and promptness in dealing with any emergency that threatens to endanger American lives along the border or inside of Mexico.

The orders under which Generals Cabell and Erwin rushed a force into Juarez and the strong representations that have since been made by the State Department to the Carranza Government holding it responsible for the protection of American lives in Mexico, mark the adoption of a new Mexican policy by the Administration. There is to be no more watchful waiting in Mexican affairs. The War Department will continue to be watchful, very watchful, but there is to be no more waiting when bullets fired across the border hit Americans and there will be no waiting, it is understood, if Villistas or others resort to reprisals against Americans in Mexico. Plans for throwing a new punitive expedition into Mexico, should the situation take a turn justifying such action, have been worked out by the General Staff.

WASHINGTON, June 21. (Associated Press.)—Military observers here place little credence in the reports that Villa has abandoned his offensive to the north. Economic as well as military necessity, it was pointed out, call for the elimination of the Carranza garrisons now stationed on the flanks of the territory Villa now controls and for possession of a principal frontier entry port which would give the rebel chieftain fresh sinews of war in the shape of customs duties and equipment.

Although three Federal Generals now are operating against Villa in Northern Mexico, confidential reports to the War Department are not optimistic regarding the success of the Carranzista campaign there, while the withdrawal of badly needed troops from the south, it is expected, will be followed by fresh incursions of the Villistas—already at the very gates of the capital. The Carranza military establishment, according to official reports filed here, actually includes less than 40 per cent. of its paper strength of 160,000, and its military value is decreased by the doubtful loyalty of some of the high officers and the fact that hundreds of recruits were forcibly conscripted.

Of the rebel factions, of which there are said to be seven opposing Carranza, Villa is reported to be the strongest. Angeles is characterized in official circles here as "undoubtedly the most skilful military leader south of the Rio Grande." The Villistas are conservatively estimated to number 10,000, equipped with fairly modern arms, including cannon up to 105 millimeters in calibre.

So serious is the condition faced by President Carranza that he is said to be bending every effort to secure the direct support of the United States in maintaining his power. This, according to officials here, accounts for the ease with which the Juarez incident was closed. One of the principal purposes of the recent visit to Washington of General Candido Aguilar, son-in-law of the President and a member of his Cabinet, it is declared, was to secure this support by the United States. General Aguilar was authorized, according to report, to settle the oil question and other matters that have caused friction between the two countries.

It is known that Aguilar conferred at length with officials of the State Department about the petroleum question in particular, and it is believed in official circles this question is now nearer settlement than at any time since Carranza issued decrees that resulted in charges of confiscation and immediate protests by this Government, Great Britain, Holland and France.

Members of the Aguilar mission also conferred with representatives of the oil companies in Washington, and it is said they will see representatives of the companies next week in New York.

JUAREZ, June 21.—Americans were warned to leave the Mormon district of Western Chihuahua "when the crisis arrives" by General Manuel Diegues, Commander of the northwestern military zone, according to a telegram received last night by American Consul Dow from American Consul Stewart at Chihuahua City.

The message stated that General Diegues considered the withdrawals of the Americans from the Casas Grandes-Mormon district advisable until such a time that he could send troops into that district to protect the Americans. The warning was referred to the American State Department.

Mormon Church officials here consider it impracticable for the 630 Mormons living in the Casas Grandes district to leave their homes at this time, and consider it improbable that another exodus, similar to those of 1912 and 1914, will result from General Diegues's warning. General Diegues also informed the American Consul at Chihuahua City that his bombing planes were ready to take the field and that a column would be started north at once to engage Villa.

Six American Red Cross nurses caring for Carranza and Villa wounded in the White Cross hospital here were advised to return to the American side yesterday by Mayor Romero. The reason given was "the presence of the Villistas," but it was not known whether the Mayor referred to Villa wounded or the presence of the Villa forces near Juarez.

MEXICO INVITES COLONISTS.

Germans and Japanese Are Expected to Seek Homes Under New Law.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, June 20.—Mexico will welcome immigration, it was announced here today. The Secretary of the Interior, Manuel Aguirre Berlanga, issued a statement that Mexico, through its Consuls in various parts of the world, was trying to stimulate immigration through notices showing the climate, industries, natural products, mercantile activity, and mining customs of the country.

All immigrants will have the same guarantees and facilities, irrespective of nationality, if they come to Mexico with honorable intentions. Mexico, a country rich in natural products, salutes both capital and workers from all latitudes, the statement says.

All workers who wish to help with experience, knowledge, and personal energy are welcomed and will be protected under liberal laws, with the frank help of the Government.

The problem of immigration is intimately linked with labor problems, and is related also to the growth of Mexico's riches.

Following the indication of modern times for progress on constitutional lines, the Government has introduced national legislative reforms which assure a maximum of human effort toward equitable distribution among producers of wealth.

The Secretary of the Interior has completed outlines of a law which will provide a new system of colonization to help the activities of foreigners who come to Mexico. While helping the fortunes of immigrants, it will at the same time contribute to the prosperity of the nation.

A large immigration of both Germans and Japanese is expected in the next few months. It is known that representatives of several European nations are now in Mexico locating sites on which to plant colonies.

French Want German Labor Ousted.

STRASBOURG, June 20.—A motion demanding that railway workers of German nationality be discharged within six months was adopted yesterday at a meeting of the Union Railway Workers of Alsace-Lorraine. The resolution will be presented to Premier Clemenceau and M. Millerand, Governor General of Alsace-Lorraine.

YANKS TAKE GAME WITH AID OF FATE

SPEAKER MAKES HOME RUN

Thormahlen Is Helped in Getting Out of Holes by Collisions Between Cleveland Fielders.

Just as the Cleveland Indians were dreaming of going into the lead in the American League race yesterday afternoon at the Polo Grounds, the Yanks gave them a 2 to 1 jolt and woke them up. Cleveland's defeat in Harlem and the downfall of the White Sox in Washington make the pennant fight closer than ever. While the relative position of the clubs is the same, the three leaders, Chicago, Cleveland, and New York, are within whispering distance of each other. They are getting so close that it is almost impossible to tell them apart in the standing.

The Yanks were pretty fortunate to snatch the fuss yesterday. Cleveland made a lot more hits but they couldn't cash them in. The Indians had ten hits, but the only one which carried any authority was a home run wallop by Tris Speaker in the fifth inning, a neat little slap into the attic apartment of the right field stand. This made the arithmetic a tie at 1 to 1.

If Cleveland had won the game yesterday, they would have passed Chicago and would be perched in first place. That's why the Indians left town last night in sorrow. Fohl's club has great possibilities and it has a perfect right to admit that it is one of the best teams in the league, but it mustn't think that it can come here and win all the time.

There was a whoop of a crowd at the game yesterday, 25,000 or more, and they all took a hand in making considerable noise at one time or another. There's one thing that is very commendable about a big baseball crowd like this in New York. They are not backward about applauding a good play, no matter who makes it. When Speaker gave the ball a joy ride, Tris's effort was duly appreciated, even if it did wipe out the Yanks' advantage.

Citizens Are Back of Yanks.

These Yanks are gaining a tight hold on the affections of Manhattan's baseball folk. That so many of them left the cool seashore flat on a scorcher like yesterday to get all excited in overheated Harlem indicates convincingly that our citizens are back of the Huggins brigade in its fight. The number of women at the games this season is surprisingly large. They are whooping it up just as enthusiastically as the he rooters and there's no denying they add tone and beauty as well as noise to the gatherings.

As mentioned up above, the Yanks were fortunate to win. They couldn't hit Guy Morton very hard, but a base on balls and an error in the outfield in the fourth were costly to Guy's welfare. The looseness of Cleveland's support was evident in the first inning. The Yanks had a good chance here, but couldn't quite turn out the desired run. With one out in the first, Peck walked and Baker rolled to Morton who refused to give himself the proper support. He whipped the ball to second to force Peck, but the sphere rolled to center field. Peck didn't know where it had gone and was riveted to second when he had plenty of chance to go to third. Lewis forced Baker at second and Pipp forced Lewis at the same station.

Cleveland got two hits off Thormahlen in a row in the third, but they came after two were out and did no harm. Thormahlen got another lucky break in the first of the fourth. With one out Wambsganss singled to left. Wamby forgot that Duffy Lewis was playing in that field and when he tried to stretch his way to second Lewis made a pretty toss to Peck and Wamby was out.

Doc Johnston then showed why his batting average is so large. Thormahlen threw him a high ball and when he tried to duck out of the way his bat bunted the ball just over Baker's roof at third, and before it could be retrieved Johnston had turned the lucky rap into a two-bagger. Steve O'Neill got an intentional pass and was forced by Morton for the final out of the inning.

It was in the last of the fourth that the Yanks got their first tally. Pipp got a pass and went to second on Pratt's single through short. Although he hated to do it, Ping Bodie followed orders and laid down a sacrifice. Bunting is the hardest thing that Ping does. If Bodie had his way he would be trying for home runs every time he came up to bat.

Blunder Jolts Pipp Home.

Truck Hannah hoisted a high fly back of second base and Wambsganss and Joe Wood both tried to get it. They arrived under the ball almost coincidentally and Joe stuck out his hands, into which the ball fell comfortably, only to spill right out again and scatter all over the lawn. Pipp galloped home on the error and Pratt got around to third. Thormahlen picked out this occasion to strike out, when any other time during the afternoon would have been better both for himself and for the other Yanks.

There was still a chance that Sam Vick would do something to pry Pratt and Hannah homeward, but he merely hoisted a high fly to O'Neill just in front of the plate.

There were two gone in the Indians' half of the fifth when Speaker came to the bat. He missed a couple and then ploughed right into another one and planted it in the grand stand. That tied the score and the crowd began to wonder if the Yanks were fated not to pull a single game away from these Indians on this trip.

Thormahlen got himself into a bad hole in the fifth but showed a lot of cool nerve in working his way out of trouble. Larry Gardner opened the inning with a single to right. Wambsganss rolled a grounder to Pipp, who tossed to Peck, forcing Gardner. Every one of the 25,000 or more spectators saw that Gardner was out with the one exception of Umpire Ollie Chill, whose sole duty in the whole world was to watch for just such a proceeding.

The umpire was looking in the other direction, so he called Gardner safe. The Yanks rose en masse and took the case right out of Chill's hands, carrying their appeal to Umpire Brick Owens, who admitted that he saw Gardner forced at second. Chill then consented to change his ruling.

Doc Johnston then got another one of those Santa Claus hits. What he really tried to do was sacrifice, but this turned into a two-base bunt. He held out his bat and let the ball hit it, the pellet bounding over back of Pipp. Doc got to second before the ball was recovered. For the second time in the game, Thormahlen purposely passed Steve O'Neill and filled the bases. Then the young left-hander showed just how well he could pitch. He fanned Guy Morton and Graney rolled an inoffensive grounder to Baker, who forced Johnston at third. The crowd breathed a sigh of relief when that was over.

Goes as a Two-base Hit.

Now comes the eighth, which settled the controversy. Here's where the Yanks got a lucky break. Peckinpaugh, the first Yankee up, lofted a fly between left and centre fields. It was Graney's ball, and he could easily have caught it under ordinary conditions. Speaker thought that he would like to catch it also. With two players coming toward one ball at top speed, there is usually only one thing to do, and that is ring for the ambulance. As Graney reached out and grabbed the ball, Speaker came tearing along, hit him amidships, and knocked the ball out of his hands. Peck got credit for a two-bagger.

Baker sacrificed Peck along a station, and Duffy Lewis then won the game by propelling Peck home with a sharp single to centre.

Again it looked bad for Thormahlen in the ninth, but he pulled through successfully once more. O'Neill got a pass, not intentional this time, and Jamieson was put in to run for him. Leslie Nunamaker, the former Yank, batted for Morton and forced Jamieson. Graney hit a sharp grounder to Pratt. The crowd gasped as he fumbled the ball, but he recovered in time to force Nunamaker.

Lunte hit a grasser to Baker, who fumbled, and the tying and winning run were aboard the bases when Tris Speaker stepped to the bat. The outfield spread itself all over the meadow. The crowd sat back silently and prayed for the best. Speaker shot a hot grounder to Pipp, who stabbed the ball just in time to save the game by putting Speaker out at first unassisted.

CURVES AND BINGLES

The Cleveland Indians have gone away from here, and the Yanks don't care if they never come back.

Aaron Ward, one of the Yankee substitutes, didn't see yesterday's victory. Just before the game started Umpire Owens ordered him to quit batting up flies. Ward batted out one more and Owens ordered him off the lot. An umpire has got almost as much authority as a Second Lieutenant.

Guy Morton hasn't allowed more than five hits in any one of the last four games he has pitched.

The Boston Red Sox are here today, so the Yanks should be able to shake off that feeling of worry which seized them during the last few days.

The grassless portions of the infield at the Polo Grounds have become so well baked during the dry spell that the players are getting a lot of lucky hits when the ball takes elusive hops off the hard spots.

If fans continue to flock to the Yankee games the Giants will have grounds for an alienation of affection suit.

If Frank Baker didn't have such hard feet, Joe Wood wouldn't have had a hit yesterday. In the seventh inning Wood's bouncer hit one of Baker's pedals and the ball is going yet.

Young Lunte, who is substituting for Ray Chapman at short, handles himself just as a high-class short stop should.

While Pipp hasn't hit his batting stride yet, he is making one-handed stabs around first which would make Hal Chase open his eyes.

The Yanks should be able to get a firmer footing at the head of the parade during the next couple weeks. The Athletics, Boston Red Sox, and Washingtons should not be able to give Huggins's lads as much trouble as the bunch from the West.

In the second inning, Thormahlen struck out, but he got to first on a wild pitch. Cleveland objected, maintaining to Owens that the ball hit the batsman's foot. Objection overruled.

The Yank infield makes a lot of fast double plays. They also miss some slow ones. Yesterday Pratt failed to double up Leslie Nunamaker at first after Jamieson was forced in the ninth, and Nunamaker can't run as fast as Truck Hannah.

Cleveland came into Manhattan like a lion and went out like a deaf and dumb lamb.

CAUSEY IS VICTOR IN MOUND BATTLE

Has Better of Tilt with Doak, and Giants Take Final from Cardinals by 2 to 1.

ST. LOUIS, June 21.—The Giants closed their engagement in the Mound City today by defeating the St. Louis Cardinals by a score of 2 to 1. This victory gave them the series, the league leaders having suffered one defeat here, and brought them near to the end of a very successful road trip. McGraw's men turn toward the East again tonight and will stop off at Cincinnati tomorrow for a game.

The Giants got revenge along with their victory today, for they had the pleasure of defeating Bill Doak, the pitcher who brought them to a stop in the opening contest here. Manager Branch Rickey called on Doak today in the hope of standing off the leaders in the final. McGraw countered with Cecil Causey, and the red-haired righthander accounted for his ninth victory of the season.

The contest brought out one of the best crowds that the Cardinals have played to since returning home. More than 6,000 fans came out to root against the Giants and indicated that enthusiasm is again at a high pitch despite the fact that the Cardinals have not threatened to reach a very high point in the final standing of the clubs.

Both Causey and Doak were in fine fettle today, and for five innings both pitched excellent ball without a break. But the Giants were not to be denied this time, and though they could gather but five hits off Doak they made these when they counted in the run column. Causey seemed to be in some trouble in the sixth, when two doubles were hammered off his delivery in quick succession with only one out. But he regained his composure at once and retired the side before more than one run had resulted. After that he was in no great danger.

Manager McGraw had a chance today to see what Earl Smith, the young catcher, could do in a real contest. Lew McCarty injured himself so badly in a collision during the game here yesterday that he was not able to play. In fact, McGraw sent him home to New York ahead of the club so he would be ready when the Giants reach the Polo Grounds. Smith caught a very good game and handled the deliveries of Causey faultlessly, though he was unable to get a safe hit.

A feature of the game was that half the hits made were for extra bases. There were five doubles, contributed by Kauff, Young, Hornsby, McHenry, and Shotton. Larry Doyle took the range of the bleachers and drove the ball into the inclosure for a home run.

The Cardinals were the first to break into the scoring. In the sixth inning Stock was retired on a grounder to Chase, and Hornsby hit for a long double. Causey probably did not take Bert Shotton seriously enough, and slipped one over the plate which the fleet outfielder lined out for two bases, scoring Hornsby. Shotton stole third, and by so doing got Zimmerman into an argument. The decision was close, but Shotton was called safe. Zim resented the verdict and threw the ball to the ground. The sphere rolled away some distance, and Shotton took advantage of the fit of temper to dash for the plate. But Heinie recovered his wits quickly, got the ball and threw the runner out at the plate.

Doyle made it all even in the seventh. He opened the inning by dropping the ball into the right field bleachers for a home run. Kauff followed with a double, and Zim sacrificed, but Doak tightened up, and, after purposely passing Smith, fanned Causey for the third out.

In the eighth, after Burns had been retired, Young doubled over third. Lavan tossed out Fletcher and Young took third on the play. Doak then made a wild pitch, and Young tallied with what proved to be the winning run.

Stock drew a pass in the Cardinals' half of the eighth, but was out stealing, and the locals were unable to make another bid for a run.

PITTSBURGH, June 21.—Pittsburgh shut out the Boston Braves for the second time in two days by defeating them today, 1 to 0. It was a pitchers' battle between Adams and Keating. The latter's wildness in the fourth inning lost the game for the visitors, when he passed two men with two out, which was followed by Barbare's single.

ROBINS SHUT OUT CUBS.

Mamaux Pitches in Old Form and Allows Only Three Hits.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 21.—Albert Mamaux had great speed at his command here this afternoon and as the Cubs could do nothing with him the Robins won another game from the Champions. The score was 3 to 0. Al allowed only three hits and only one of the Cubs reached third base. This was in the fifth frame when they filled the bases with only one out, but Mamaux pitched himself out of the tight spot.

The Robins hit Martin hard during the five innings he worked, scoring their three tallies off him. Hendrix succeeded him and held the visitors to three hits during the final four frames.

The Robins scored their first two runs in the fourth frame when Wheat singled and Koney drew a pass. Magee scored both with a long double to centre. In the following session they added their last tally to their total. With one out Myers doubled and went to third on an infield out. Wheat scored Myers with a three-base hit to the centre field bleachers.

The Cubs did not make a hit until after one was out in the fifth. Deal then bounced a single behind Schmandt and Lear and O'Farrell drew bases on balls. Mamaux settled down and struck out Kilduff, who batted for Martin. Flack then hoisted to Griffith. With two out in the next frame, Fred Merkle made the second hit off the Robin twirler when he shot a clean single over second. Paskert ended the frame by lifting to Griffith. In the ninth stanza Leslie Mann, the first man to face Mamaux, cracked out a double to centre. He did not reach third, however, as Merkle, Paskert, and Deal each were retired on flies.

During the game the former Pirate star performed as he did during his big season in Pittsburgh. It was his first victory since he came to the Robins in the trade that sent Cutshaw and Stengel to the Pirates in 1917. The victory was the first the Robins have scored via the shut-out route since they invaded the West.

RED SOX AND BROWNS TIE.

BOSTON, June 21.—St. Louis and Boston played a three-run tie of ten innings today, the game being called to allow train connections. Boston had scored the tying run in the ninth on singles by Walters and Scott, Barry's sacrifice bunt and Caldwell's sacrifice fly. YALE NINE TRIMS TIGERS IN RUBBER Takes Third Game of Series by 6 to 1—Second Inning a Sad Affair for Princeton.

Larry Keyes guards the short field for Princeton University's baseball team, and when Lawrence is at his best there are few college shortstops who excel him in point of steadiness. When he is not at his best there are few collegians who can approach him for unsteadiness.

Lawrence wasn't at his best yesterday when the Tigers clashed with Yale in the deciding game of their diamond feud at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn. Larry couldn't make his hands and feet work as they should for a shortstop. Whether it was that Larry's attention was distracted from the game by the shimmy tunes of a soldier band in the right field grand stand, or whether Larry just up and got himself all excited in the face of the thundering Eli yells which echoed across the diamond, is unknown. The fact remains, however, that Lawrence's feet and hands were decidedly at odds, and as a result Larry unburdened himself of a lot of bad baseball.

The Tiger shortstop started and finished his erratic display in the second inning. Three bobbles gave the Eli athletes as many runs. The Tiger play fell with a crash then and there. More Eli markers were subsequently registered, enough of them to give Yale the rubber conflict by 6 to 1. The victory gave Yale this season's baseball supremacy over the New Jersey collegians.

Starting the nerve-cracking second frame, Larry Keyes fumbled Faherty's rap. Diamond sacrificed, and Murphy was hit by Bill Kirkland, who did the twirling for the Tigers. Sawyer rapped a sizzling grounder at Keyes, who promptly fumbled and booted the ball around the second corner, while Faherty scored. Keyes, trying to catch Murphy, who raced for third, heaved miserably to Bade, and Murphy scored. In the jumble of players trying to avert the disaster, Sawyer was quite forgotten, so that when calm again was restored the Eli second baseman was resting on third.

Sheehan thumped a single to right, scoring Sawyer. The Yale catcher took a notion to steal shortly after, and had occasion to regret it, for Keyes held with a death grip to Trimble's throw, and Sheehan was cut down. The riotous frame ended when Selleck popped to Harvey.

The crumpling defense unnerved Kirkland, and he was hit safely twice in the third inning with two down. Harvey prevented further scoring by scooping up Diamond's grounder. In the fourth the New Haven collegians got another. Kirkland started by issuing a pass to Murphy. Sawyer sacrificed, and while Sheehan was being thrown out Murphy galloped to third. Murphy worried Kirkland considerably, prancing around the further corner, and finally the Eli shortstop got Kirkland in the middle of a long wind-up. Before the Tiger right-hander could untangle himself Murphy raced across the platter.

Murphy's steal of home threw the Yale adherents into ecstacies. The cheer leaders went wild, while they guided their portion of the stands through various Yale war yells.

Kirkland was careful in the next three innings and Yale bats were dulled. In the eighth, however, there was another crack in the defense. This time the culprit was Bade, who threw into the grandstand trying for Prann at first. Prann took second on the heave. Boyd drew a pass and both moved along the paths on the double steal. After Holden had fouled out to Trimble, Faherty pushed a single into centre, scoring Prann and Boyd. Faherty tried to stretch his single and was killed off at second.

Selleck had the ball under complete control and the Tigers absolutely subjected up to the fifth inning, and, backed with scintillating fielding, had the plate an undiscovered part of Ebbets Field as far as Tiger runs were concerned. In the fifth, however, the New Jersey lads massed two hits, singles by Harvey and Bauhan, and a wild throw by Selleck, and threatened. Selleck tightened, however, and dispersed the Tigers.

The Tigers' lone marker came in the eighth when Bauhan doubled to left, took second while Kirkland was being retired and scored while Sawyer was throwing out Strubing.

CORNELL HAS BIG INNING.

Bunches Hits in Fourth and Beats Penn, 5 to 3.

ITHACA, N. Y., June 21.—By batting Titsell freely in the fourth inning here today Cornell won the third and deciding game from Penn, 5 to 3, on Percy Field before a crowd of 5,000 Cornell alumni and guests, back to Ithaca for the Cornell semi-centennial celebration. Masterly playing on the part of Olsen, Cornell's star pitcher, was responsible for Cornell winning today's game.

He held Pennsy, with the exception of the third and fourth innings, when errors entered into the visitors' scoring. Besides his pitching, he hit a double and a single, the latter scoring the final run of the game in the eighth frame. Cornell broke up the contest in their half of the fourth, when Sweeny's error put Enaworth on base and Sweeny dropped Bohan's throw on Olsen's grounder. Then came three hits in a row by Harden, Estes, and Quinlan, scoring four runs and winning the game.

Penn had previously made two runs in the third on Titsell's hit, an error by Spires, and Strauss's hit, and another in the fourth, when McNichol hit safely and scored on Peter's squeeze play. Titsell had the Cornell batters in the palm of his hand up to the fourth. In the second Olsen hit for two bases into the automobiles that lined the field, then stole third, and was left there while Titsell fanned three batters in a row.

Cornell scored her last run in the eighth, when Corwin hit over short and tallied when Olsen singled.

The game was the last in which Dr. Al Sharpe will act as Cornell coach in Ithaca, as he leaves this Summer to go to Yale. The alumni and spectators gave special cheers after the contest for the successful Cornell trainer.

HOMER WINS FOR ERASMUS.

Ross's Mighty Hit in Twelfth Takes Title Game from Commerce.

A home run clout over the left field fence by Clarence Ross, the school's star swimmer, gave the Erasmus Hall High School the scholastic baseball championship of the city yesterday. Ross's four-ply wallop came in the twelfth inning and enabled the Buff and Blue nine from Brooklyn to down the High School of Commerce, Manhattan champions, in the final game of the Public Schools Athletic League tournament. The score was 6 to 5. The game was decided on the grounds of the Catholic Protectory and was witnessed by a crowd of about 2,000.

Ross's circuit blow sent the Erasmus Hall adherents into a frenzy of joy. The popular catcher was wildly acclaimed as he slowly ran around the bases, and when his journey was completed Ross was enveloped in a crushing, shrieking mob which wanted to compliment him for bringing the title to Erasmus Hall. This team won the title last in 1917.

Commerce forced the Brooklynites to an uphill battle practically all the way. Taking their turn at bat first the local lads pounded Dutch Haasmoot for a tally. Two passes, a stolen base, a passed ball and a single gave the Erasmus Hall contingent a run to even the count in their half of the same inning. In the third the Buff and Blue nine took the lead when a pass, a sacrifice and Bunara's wild throw permitted Rollins to score.

WESLEYAN BATS LUSTILY.

Visitors Score 17 Runs and Defeat Williams in Final Game.

Special to The New York Times.

WILLIAMSTOWN, June 21.—Williams brought its baseball season to a close by taking a drubbing at the hands of Wesleyan before a large commencement crowd here today, the score being 17 to 9. The visitors clouted the ball lustily, gathering a total of twenty-one hits which, combined with frequent misplays on the part of the Purple, gave them enough runs to win as they pleased.

PRIM LEADS FIELD HOME.

Wins the Cygnet A. C. Handicap Road Race at Port Chester.

A sprint in the last half-mile of his journey landed I. Prim of the Finnish-American A. C. a winner yesterday in the Cygnet A. C. handicap road race held over a rough and hilly course in Port Chester, N. Y. Prim started with an allowance of four minutes, thirty seconds, and was clock in 48.40. The distance of the race was about seven miles over a circular course.

H. Rosen of the Kings County A. A., a limit handicap starter, showed the way to the large field practically all the way. Shortly after the start Rosen went into the van position and remained there until beaten by Prim's spurt about half a mile away from the finish. Rosen finished second, after making a strong bid to overtake Prim.

The order of finish of the first twenty-five follows:

GRAY DAWN SAILS TO EASY VICTORY

It looked like old times at the Larchmont Yacht Club yesterday when forty-four yachts, the largest fleet that has gathered on Long Island Sound this season, sailed in the annual Spring regatta of the organization. The race was of unusual interest to yachtsmen. Not only was it the first regatta given by the club since 1916, but it marked the début of the 39-footers of the organization built during the Winter of 1916-17, but never before sailed in an open regatta. In addition to three of the new boats, the fleet was made up of the various classes that have been sailing since Decoration Day on the waters of the Sound.

Four of the new yachts were expected to start yesterday. Georgia was not ready, and Gray Dawn, Varuna and Nimbus made up the class. In the informal races during the season of 1917 Varuna, which has the Marconi rig, did far the best work. Yesterday the winner proved to be Gray Dawn, which defeated Varuna over a twenty-mile course by eleven minutes and twenty seconds. The time would have been cut down had not Varuna made a botch of the finish and had to re-cross the line.

The day was not particularly ideal for yacht racing when Chairman Howell C. Perrin, Sandford G. Etherington, and Benjamin O. Booth, his assistants, established the starting line off Larchmont Breakwater. The wind was light and from the north. It was more or less of a fluky breeze, and all hands on board the committee boat looked for a day of drifting matches. Nor were they greatly wrong. Even when the wind backed into north-northwest later in the day changing the final leg from a close reach into another beat for many of the yachts, it did not have the real strength needed to give good racing.

Seven of the thirty-footers of the New York Yacht Club had an interesting brush over a course of eleven miles. Again the winner proved to be Lena, the property of Ogden Reid. The craft defeated Rowdy by 1 minute and 9 seconds. The Sound schooners, which sailed the same course as the thirty-footers, had a fairly interesting brush, the winner proving to be Alicia, the property of William Baldwin.

The handicap class, which is still filling poorly notwithstanding the hard work of T. B. Bates, the new handicapper, was divided into two divisions. On both actual and corrected time, the winner in the first class proved to be Wasaka, which belongs to W. L. Coursen. In the third division Robin Hood III. scored a similar victory.

PETERS TO CAPTAIN CREW.

Yale Stroke Elected After Victory Over Harvard.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 21.—Yale's crew squad today disbanded following the celebration of its victory over Harvard on the Thames yesterday. Churchill Peters, stroke oar, who, more than any other member of the 'Varsity boat, campaigned yesterday's big race to success, was elected Captain. He lives in Seattle and prepared at the high school in his native city. He is a member of the Class of 1920.

Yale's rowing victory gave the Elis the rowing, baseball and track engagements with their old Cambridge rival a clean sweep in Spring sport.

SAGINAW IS FIRST HOME

After being inactive on account of the war for the last two years, the Yacht Racing Association of Gravesend Bay held a regatta under the auspices of the Atlantic Yacht Club yesterday. The number of starters was a decided surprise. During 1917 there were never more than three yachts at the starting line. Yesterday no less than eighteen craft, divided into three classes, came to the starting line off Sea Gate. That means that there should be at least thirty yachts racing on the lower bay once the season gets under way.

Unfortunately, the light north northwest breeze which brought the craft to the starting line petered out soon after the starting gun for the final class was sounded. The contest then dwindled into a drifting match. To make matters harder for the Corinthians, the regatta committee, made up of Samuel L. Finlay, Chairman, Lieutenant John R. Brophy, and C. A. Kelley, Crescent Athletic Club, picked a course that gave all hands a stiff beat from the starting line to a mark off Fort Hamilton. The leg also was against a head wind.

Naturally, the beat against wind and tide in the light airs were responsible for a long race. To make matters more difficult for the regatta committee, few of the yachtsmen thought it necessary to enter their craft formally. In the past two years many of the boats have changed owners, and as they appeared without either class letter or number on their sails the committee had a great old time trying to recognize the yachts.

As no official handicapper has been appointed for lower bay yachting, the committee decided to send all the handicap yachts off in one class and let the new handicapper use the times made yesterday as the basis for his first allowances. On actual time the fleet was led home by Saginaw, the property of H. Poulsen, Marine and Field Club.

POMPANO SAILS IN FIRST.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., June 21.—Nine of the little fish boats of the Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club had the most interesting race so far this season off Centre Island today. The craft were so well bunched that at the finish there was only a difference of 8 minutes and 48 seconds between Pompano, the property of C. G. West, Jr., the leading craft, and Dr. D. F. Bishop's Sabola, the last to cross the finish line.

TENNIS TITLE WON BY MRS. WIGHTMAN

LOSER IS AWAY OFF FORM

Puts Up Poor Game and Match Goes at 6-1, 6-2—Miss Goss and Miss Zinderstein Keep Doubles Honors.

PHILADELPHIA, June 21.—Mrs. George W. Wightman of Boston, who formerly, as Miss Hazel Hotchkiss of California, held the title of woman's tennis champion of America, resumed the throne at the Philadelphia Cricket Club this afternoon, when she overwhelmingly defeated Miss Marion Zinderstein, also of Boston, by the score of 6-1, 6-2, in the final match of the championship tournament.

The doubles title was retained by Miss Eleanor Goss and Miss Marion Zinderstein with a victory over Mrs. Wightman and Miss Sears at 9—7, 9—7.

By winning today's final match in the national tournament, the stocky little player from the Hub picked up her string where she broke it eight years ago. At that time she had reigned for three years as undisputed queen of the American courts, and her tennis this week has been if anything superior to that which she displayed during her first term of supremacy. In fact, Mrs. Wightman admitted after the match that she felt today exactly as she did ten years ago, when she first won the title.

Technically her game was without a flaw, and she had so much in reserve that there is no telling to what heights she might have attained if hard pressed. The mere fact that Mrs. Wightman could completely ignore her greatest asset, her volleying game, until almost the close of the second set, indicates how immeasurably superior she was to her younger opponent. When she chose to go to the net for the last few points the most desperate efforts of Miss Zinderstein could not avert disaster, but in general the winner found her accurate chops from the back court sufficient to demoralize the driving game of her fellow townswoman and tennis pupil.

Miss Zinderstein Plays Badly.

It would be absurd to claim that Miss Zinderstein did herself justice today, even admitting the extraordinary quality of play which she had to face. After breaking through her rival's service in the opening game she went completely to pieces, making a pathetic attempt to outsteady the steadiest woman on the courts, and using neither the strokes which she has by nature and training, nor the tennis intelligence which every observer knows her to possess. She usually placed the ball straight down the middle of the court, seemingly content to return it and waiting in vain for errors on the other side of the barrier. They never came, and only the most spectacular, daring play could have had the slightest chance against the absolute dependability of the tennis that Mrs. Wightman had at her command.

The six games which followed the opening game were reeled off by the winner without the slightest apparent effort. Even after the 6—1 set had been recorded in her favor, she did not stop her relentless march to victory, taking two more games of the second set before Miss Zinderstein was able to score. The latter was utterly at sea, and as she missed shot after shot that ordinarily would have meant sure points for her, the explosive little "chee" and the gestures of her clenched hands indicated the self-condemnatory comment of her thoughts. Yet she could not nerve herself to take real chances, and continued to make the inadequate efforts which were leading to certain defeat.

After winning a service game, in spite of a double fault, the loser tossed aside a beautiful chance to tie up the set by missing two of the easiest possible volleys, one going into the net and one out. Trailing at 3—1, she again managed to win on service, with another double fault sandwiched in, plucking up enough courage to go to the net for the obvious scores and cleaning up with a fine drive to the corner. But after Mrs. Wightman's delivery had increased her lead to 4-2, Miss Zinderstein gave her another game with a series of miserable shots and virtually put the match on ice.

Great Finish to One-Sided Match.

With the winner leading on service at 40—30, the match point developed the one real rally of the whole affair and the one instance of sustained brilliancy on the part of the loser. She made two remarkable gets in succession on her back hand and then recovered an equally sensational volley with which the winner was attempting to finish the job. But Mrs. Wightman calmly stayed at the net and volleyed again, this time just beyond the sweep of Miss Zinderstein's racket. She barely touched the ball with the wooden edge and it fizzled off to the side for the deciding point, leaving only regret that such a splendid flash of extraordinary ability should have been reserved for the very end of a national championship match.

The doubles final produced far better tennis and was much more of a battle in every sense. The champions were unquestionably the better team, but they wasted so many obvious chances and profited by so many breaks of luck that they scarcely deserved to win on the showing of the afternoon. Miss Eleanora Sears, hobbling about the court with a torn ligament in her ankle, gave a wonderful exhibition of pluck, as well as of defensive play which would have been remarkable even for a physically sound player. Mrs. Wightman was dependable as usual, but by no means spectacular, nor did she often try to invade her partner's territory.

Miss Goss and Miss Zinderstein were very good and very bad in streaks, and they seldom were able to establish a real balance of play, one often spoiling what the other had worked hard to accomplish. Their chronic unwillingness to rush the net, with an uncertainty in the handling of all shots overhead, constituted their chief weaknesses, and might, under other circumstances, have lost them the match.

Challengers Get First Two.

Miss Goss was unsteady at the start, serving two double faults and losing the game after a linesman had accommodatingly called "out" on a ball which Miss Sears volleyed. This seemed to upset the lame Bostonian, who refused to take her partner's advice on another "out" and shrieked "O, Hazel," in cursory fashion as she missed it.

But two good volleys by Mrs. Wightman made it 2—0 before the champions broke into the score on Miss Zinderstein's serve. They both hit consistently to Miss Sears, who stood up magnificently under their attack. But her partner occasionally got her racket on the ball with deadly results, one of her sharply angled volleys hitting a ball caddy on the nose with embarrassing results. Mrs. Wightman, however, did the unexpected by dropping her service with a double fault, squaring the set at 2-all.

When a close decision went against Miss Goss on the next game she also double-faulted and then drove out for the break, 3—2. The linesmanship at this stage was far from commendable.

Miss Sears served an impressive love game for a 4—2 lead, and the champions began to wake up to their danger. Miss Zinderstein made it 4—3 on service, and they equalized again, 4 all, on Mrs. Wightman's errors. Miss Goss, however, was still uncertain both of her volleys and her service, and the odd game went to the challengers.

A lead of 40—15 was not sufficient to win for Miss Sears, though aided by a marvelous backhand pickup on Mrs. Wightman's part, and the champions came courageously from behind for a deuce set. Finding themselves for the first time, they now bombarded their opponents with the shots of which they are capable, and speedily ran into a 6—5 lead. They almost pulled out the set after Mrs. Wightman had led on 40—0 on service, but after a deuce game the score was tied again.

Miss Goss Plays Whirlwind Game.

The games alternated again, with Miss Goss now playing like a tornado and smashing everything within reach, and after Miss Zinderstein's delivery had won once more the set went at 9—7, with Miss Sears the target for the winning shots.

The second set was similar, except for the greater number of chances wasted by the champions. They led at 4—1 through aggressive play in spite of some very bad volleying, particularly overhead, but the challengers took two games in succession and tried hard to square the set. Sensational cross-court drives, however, were too much for them and at 5—3 the ultimate winners had the match within their grasp. They threw it away, however, by inexcusable errors, including a double fault, and then the remarkable court covering of Miss Sears actually brought the game to 5—all.

It was exciting tennis from then on to the finish, with Miss Goss and Miss Zinderstein at least a dozen times within a point of the match. But the winning shot refused to appear until the games had again reached 8—7.

Then Miss Sears finally succumbed to the strain. Miss Zinderstein broke her heart with a remarkable get, which was followed by a short stop volley on the part of Miss Goss. Mrs. Wightman made one of her rare misses overhead, but killed the ball on the next chance, following this with another net in her anxiety to save her faltering partner. Leading at 40—15, Miss Goss drove far out of court, but when Miss Zinderstein came to the scratch with a fine volley to the corner the match was over.

The total of points in these two 9—7 sets probably constitutes a record for women's tournament tennis, the winners registering no less than 72 in the second set, nearly three times the normal number.

Girls From Richmond Win.

The first national girls' doubles championship in the history of America was won this morning by Miss Elisabeth Warren and Miss Penelope Anderson of Richmond. This pair of sixteen-year-old youngsters easily defeated Miss Mary Heaton and Miss Katherine Lauder of Greenwich in straight sets, 6—2, 6—2.

A sensational climax was staged in the victory of Miss Marion Zinderstein and Vincent Richards in the national mixed doubles, this being the fourth senior national title acquired this season by the youthful Yonkers prodigy. The pony team defeated William T. Tilden and Miss Florence Ballin in a thrilling three set final at 2—6, 11—9, 6—2, after first disposing of Miss Molla Bjurstedt and Harry C. Johnson at 6—4, 8—6. Tilden worked like a trojan for his side but the head work and steadiness of the youngsters proved too much for him.

The team of junior tennis players representing New York City defeated the Philadelphia Juniors on the courts of the Philadelphia Cricket Club today, by winning five matches out of nine. The metropolitan youngsters captured three of the singles contests and two of the doubles, two of their four defeats being due to defaults. Vincent Richards and Frank Anderson were easy individual winners and also combined successfully in disposing of the best Quaker City pair in straight sets.

The summaries of the team match:

KUMAGAE DEFEATS VOSHELL

Wins Title in Brooklyn Men's Tennis Singles.

The title of Brooklyn's men's singles tennis champion will be held by Ichiya Kumagae, the Japanese player, for the coming year. This was decided yesterday when the son of Nippon defeated S. Howard Voshell, former national indoor champion and present Metropolitan-Bronx titleholder, in the final round of the tournament on the courts of the Terrace Club, Flatbush. The scores favored Kumagae by 10—8, 6—1, 6—3.

Voshell faced a difficult proposition when he took the opposite part of the court against Kumagae for their final round of the match. The former indoor champion had been forced through three unexpectedly hard sets by young Fred Anderson before the latter was eliminated in the semi-final round. The former board-floor champion was kept in the running of the first set only because of his severe service. Kumagae found solving his rival's service in their opening set a difficult problem, so that the clash was carried to 10—8 before the Oriental star won.

His opening efforts, however, only proved another tax on Voshell. In the second and third sets Kumagae hit too accurately for Voshell. Kumagae, playing principally from the back court, puzzled his opponent with low, swift shots, which were alternated with hard cross-court drives well placed when Voshell was inveigled into rushing up to the net.

Play was continued in the doubles title competition, in which Fred C. Anderson, Jr., and Gerald Donaldson, Jr., advanced to the semi-final round. It is expected this branch of the tournament, together with the finals of the juniors' title chase, will be concluded this afternoon.

CLINTON WINS TENNIS TITLE

De Witt Clinton High School's tennis team carried off the city scholastic championship title yesterday morning by vanquishing Newtown H. S. by 5 to 0 on the courts of the West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills, L. I. The representatives of West Fifty-ninth Street won all four matches contested, trouncing Newtown's racquet wielders in three singles matches and one doubles match. This match was the final of the Public Schools Athletic League tournament.

NATURALIST WINS THE LONG BEACH

Captures Handicap Carrying Top Weight—Man o' War Proves Worth Among Two-Year-Olds.

Joseph E. Widener's Naturalist gained a place among the reliables of the turf when he carried top weight in the Long Beach Handicap at Jamaica yesterday and defeated a good field in the good time of 1:46 for a mile and a furlong. Hitherto Naturalist, an imported son of Rabelais, has been regarded as an uncertain proposition, but he has lived down that reputation this season and has only been beaten in the Metropolitan Handicap, which followed a day after he had won a race at Jamaica.

On several occasions the representatives of Joseph E. Widener and his nephew, George D. Widener, have been fighting out the finish of important handicaps. The latest victory of Naturalist places the balance in favor of Joseph E., for in second place and coming strongly at the finish was George D. Widener's Lanius, the horse that had defeated Naturalist and others in the Metropolitan. Though the margin by which Naturalist beat Lanius was small, the latter never had a chance of finishing in front, even though he had Loftus in the saddle. Loftus was whipping like a demon all the way through the stretch, while Fairbrother was sitting still on Naturalist and easing his mount in the last sixteenth.

Perhaps of even greater importance than the Long Beach Handicap that featured the closing day of the most successful meeting ever held by the Metropolitan Jockey Club, was the race for the Youthful Stakes, another $5,000 event in which two-year-olds took part. This was won by the Glen Riddle Stables' Man o' War, a son of Fair Play-Mahubah, that is certainly the best juvenile yet seen under colors. Man o' War has not submitted to defeat, for he won two events over the straight course at Belmont Park with ridiculous ease and his victory around the turn at Jamaica yesterday was gained without his being extended at any stage of the five and a half furlongs and at the end he was only cantering to finish, two and a half lengths in front of George W. Loft's On Watch. Man o' War carried 120 pounds and conceded weight to the three ambitious youngsters that opposed him.

There was another immense crowd to celebrate the getaway from the popular track, and in all probability on official count the estimated attendance of 25,000 on the previous Saturday was exceeded. Every possible vantage point from which the races could be seen was occupied. There was not a vacant seat in the grand stand or clubhouse, and the aisles were jammed by thousands, who were content to stand and crane their necks in order to get a glimpse of the racers. It was too hot for comfort, but not too hot for the usual speculation, and would-be wagerers pushed and edged their way through the dense mass on the lawn before each race.

Favorites ran more kindly than they have on most of the days of the meeting, and the layers by no means had the better of those who back their own judgment and the opinions of the leading handicappers. Naturalist was the public choice for the Long Beach, and at the remunerative odds of 13 to 5, while Man o' War was another strongly supported choice. The sport ended with a victory for Mrs. C. W. Starr's Rapid Day, which was backed from 3 to 1 to 11 to 5, making three successful favorites to offset three upsets.

Star Master, Straight Forward and Lanius were the ones generally depended on to lower the colors of Naturalist, but Star Master was not handled any too well by Knapp, while at the last moment Kummer had to be substituted for Ensor as the rider of Straight Forward, as the latter jockey had one of his temperamental fits and could not be depended on to do justice to the horse. There was a sentimental play on old Roamer, which was not justified by his running, as he finished absolutely last, while Bally and Natural Bridge went begging at 12 to 1.

LEGG WINS WESTERN TITLE.

Defeats Bockenkamp in Final for Golf Championship.

ST. LOUIS, June 21.—Harry Legg of Minneapolis today won the Western amateur golf championship at Sunset Hill Country Club by defeating Richard Bockenkamp of St. Louis, 2 up in 36 holes. Bockenkamp seemed stale from two weeks of constant golfing and could not take advantage of the openings offered.

Each scored 75 for the afternoon round, while Legg had 73 and Bockenkamp 81 in the morning round.

DEMPSEY MIXES IT WITH HIS PARTNERS

Challenger Boxes Five Torrid Rounds—Willard Takes Matters More Easily.

Special to The New York Times.

TOLEDO, Ohio, June 21.—Jack Dempsey, matched to meet Jess Willard for the heavyweight championship here on July 4, got back into the full swing of his boxing today after a ten-day layoff, due to a cut over his right eye, and stepped five bristling rounds with Terry Kellar, Sergeant Bill Tate, and the Jamaica Kid. The challenger went through his paces before a crowd of 3,000 persons, including several hundred women, who sweltered in the heat of his Maumee Bay camp.

The sunburned Dempsey wore a patch over his damaged eye, but pulled it off before boxing two rounds, and ripped into his sparring mate, to the delight of the throng. Kellar left the ring with a puffed and bruised eye as a result of a savage left hook landed by the challenger.

Willard confined his workout to eight rounds. The champion was lenient with his sparring mates. Jack Heinen, who was knocked out for the third time yesterday, was unable to don the gloves because of an injury to his neck caused when his head struck the floor of the ring. "Steamboat" Bill Scott, a 180 pounder, took Heinen's place for the day. Scott claims the heavyweight championship of the 6th Division, A. E. F.

Tom Jones, Willard's manager for more than six years, saw the champion work today for the first time since he split with him, and was favorably impressed. Outside of a fit of apparent sluggishness, Jones said, the champion looked as good as ever.

"Willard seems a trifle slow, but he did not exert himself today," Jones said. "That thin layer of fat around his stomach was there when he fought Johnson, and it means nothing. The man never lived who could hurt him around his stomach, and that, in my judgment, includes Dempsey. Jess is coming along all right, and will be in condition if he works his hardest from now on."

Adam Empie, Secretary of the Army, Navy and Civilian Board of Boxing Control, arrived today for a conference with Rickard, Dempsey, Kearns, and Willard and to submit for their consideration a list of referees for the match. From the number actually favored a selection will be made by Major Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, President of the board, and Alfred Mariley, counsel for the board, who will arrive in Toledo Monday. Empie intimated that two judges, in addition to a referee, would be named. This revived Toledo's hope that Ollie Pecord, official referee for the Toledo Boxing Commission, would be chosen as the third man in the ring.

John J. Reisler, known as "John, the Barber," a former manager of Dempsey, arrived here today with five attorneys in an effort to reach a financial settlement with Kearns and Dempsey. Reisler claims he has a contract to manage the challenger which does not expire until next December. He attempted to arrange a meeting with Promoter Rickard, but Rickard said Reisler would be referred to his attorneys.

Billy Roche, a veteran referee, who has been overseas as an athletic officer for the Knights of Columbus, also was among the sporting celebrities reaching Toledo. Roche hopes to induce Rickard to allow him to exhibit motion pictures of the contest to the Army of Occupation and to the troops remaining in France.

WALKER VICTOR AT GOLF.

In a match that kept the gallery on edge until the finish, A. L. Walker, Jr., of Richmond County, defeated A. F. Kammer of Baltusrol in the final round of the invitation tournament at the Fox Hills Golf Club yesterday afternoon. Walker won by a 3 and 1 margin.

Walker won three out of the first four holes. At the first, the Baltusrol golfer's second shot fell short of the green and at the next he topped his second shot. Walker won with 4's at each hole. At the third, both were on the green on their second shots. Walker elected to chip his to the hole, but it trickled past, whereas Kammer, using a putter, rolled in his long one.

To the fourth both got into trouble but Walker managed to win after Kammer took 6. At that stage, Walker was 2 up, and as they halved the next five holes, he turned for home with that advantage. He made the outward half in 37 to 39 for his opponent.

Kammer laid the younger man a half-stymie at the tenth, which caused Walker to miss his putt for a 4 there and placed him 1 up. At the eleventh the Richmond County lad holed a twenty-foot putt for a 4, not good enough to win, as Kammer, after getting in the rough on his second, played out well and rolled in a six-foot putt for a half.

Walker won the thirteenth and once again became 2 up, but Kammer by holding a twenty-foot putt at the fourteenth reduced this advantage. They halved the fifteenth, and Kammer lost the next after he got into a trap. At the 295-yard seventeenth Walker got a beautiful tee shot that drove the green. Kammer again got into the rough over the green, and lost the hole and the match when Walker chipped in for a 3. They played the bye hole, Walker taking 4 to 6 for his opponent.

DOWN EAST IS CHAMPION.

Great Jumper Beaten in Feature Race at United Hunts Meet.

There was a splendid windup for the United Hunts race meeting yesterday at Belmont Terminal, six well-contested fixtures being run off in the pleasantest of weather and in the presence of some 3,000 racing enthusiasts.

The heavy impost of 174 stopped The Brook in the big event of the day, the Great United Hunts Steeplechase, at about two miles, but the little imported gelding ran a game race, and had he not been jostled when Kennedy tried to steal through on the rails at the jump before the head of the stretch, might have triumphed. As it was, the winner was the added starter, Trumpator, 157 pounds up, owned by the Dolsoris Stables. Mrs. Herbert L. Pratt and others of the Glen Cove family are said to be the owners, and they also won the two-year-old race with Limerick Lass, while Herbert L. Pratt started in his own name and won with Decisive in the Between the Flags Steeplechase and Game Cock in the long handicap race on the flat.

The Brook waited on the pacemakers for the first mile of the Great United Hunts Steeplechase, while Hibler opened up a lead of twenty lengths on Barkile, which was three lengths ahead of the others, who ran in cavalry formation. The Brook moved up at the woods on the second mile and for a few yards was in front, running easily. Barkile soon wrested the lead from The Brook, while Hibler dropped back very fast. Turning at the jump near the Belmont Park end, Trumpator moved up and soon had command of the situation, having both Barkile and The Brook back of him as they faced the jump before the stretch.

Here Kennedy made his play to get through on the inside with The Brook but Williams on Trumpator was not to be caught napping and squeezed over so that there was some jostling and nothing was gained by the manoeuvre. In the quick run in Trumpator held his advantage and won by three lengths, with Barkile a length before The Brook, which came up to beat out Hibler a half length for third place. The announced time was 4:11 2-5, but the time was not given out officially.

Albert J. Davis was the only amateur rider to have a mount during the day. He rode Bill Dudley in the Westbury steeplechase and also started North Star, with Blake up, the pair being held at 3 to 1. Neither finished, however, for after the two had led for over a mile, Bill Dudley ran out at the fence beyond the woods and North Star refused at the next jump and was pulled up. Garter was the contender all the way for the second mile, running with Northwood like a team. The two were the favorites in the wagering, and at the finish the latter got the verdict very handily by two lengths.

In the maiden steeplechase Full Cry was the favorite, and the leader for the greater part of the journey. He ran a good race, as he did last week until he dislodged his jockey, Bush, who this time stuck like glue to the pigskin. Stradivarius was the contender, Decisive being held back until the run in, when he challenged the leaders and won with plenty to spare.

As for the flat races, Limerick Lass, which seems a nice filly, won very easily. Papp won the six-furlong race with 141 pounds up very easily, finishing like a stake horse among platers, and it was announced that he will hereafter be kept at the jumps.

In the long handicap, of about one mile and a quarter, Lytle and Archdale made all the running until the long turf stretch, when Game Cock came through and beat them both out as though they were anchored.

GERMANTOWN TEAM DEFEATS NEW YORK

Invading Cricketers Have Margin of 23 Runs in Match in Halifax Cup Series.

Losing their first intercity match of the season at Manor Field, West New Brighton, S. I., yesterday, the New York cricketers succumbed to the eleven sent over by the Germantown Cricket Club of Philadelphia by a margin of 23 runs on the totals of the first inning in the Halifax Cup competition.

New York batted first and all were out for the meagre total of 81, mainly owing to the exceptional bowling of P. H. Clarke, the international player, who accounted for 7 of the wickets at a cost of 7 runs. Only two of the New York batsmen succeeded in reaching double figures, R. Comacho topping the list with a well-played 36. B. Kortlang contributed 25 and the pair made a determined stand for the fall of the second wicket.

PRICES DOWN MILEAGE UP

Goodrich's New Adjustment

It lifted adjustments to 6,000 miles for SAFETY TREADS, and 8,000 miles for SILVERTOWN CORDS, instead of 3,500 and 5,000 miles, respectively, heretofore in force.

Goodrich marked down prices in strict accordance with the Goodrich policy always to give the user the benefit of Goodrich economies in manufacture.

Goodrich marked up its adjustment mileage because the wonderful endurance and service Goodrich Tires are showing in actual service demanded adjustment that squared with performance.

COL. WM. HAYWARD MARRIES MRS. PLANT

Surprise in His Wedding to Financier's Widow at Her Apartment at the Plaza.

MISS K. SCHULTZE A BRIDE

Weds Jeremiah Milbank at Her Sister's Country Home in Greenwich—Baker-Dryden Nuptials.

A marriage that will greatly surprise even most of the friends of the bride and bridegroom is that of Col. William Hayward, 369th U. S. Infantry, (colored,) formerly the 15th Infantry, and Mrs. May Cadwell Manwaring Plant, the widow of Morton F. Plant, of 1,051 Fifth Avenue, which took place at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the bride's apartment in the Plaza Hotel, the ceremony being performed by Captain John V. Axton, Jr., Chaplain in the army, a friend of the bridegroom, and who recently returned from overseas.

The bride, in a blue chiffon frock and hat to match, walked with her son, Philip Morgan Plant, a son of her first marriage who was formally adopted by Mr. Plant, and her sister, Mrs. James M. McTiernan, a recent bride, stood with her. Colonel Hayward's son, Leland Hayward, was his best man. Others present were Major Eugene B. Hayward and Mrs. Hayward, uncle and aunt of the bridegroom; his sister, Mrs. Martin H. Lowe of Colorado Springs; Dr. James M. McTiernan, and Father John Kelly, in whose charities the bride has long been actively interested. Shortly after the ceremony Colonel Hayward and his bride left for Bar Harbor to occupy L'Acadie, her country place there.

Every precaution was taken to keep the marriage private. The engagement had never been announced, and it was not until the two took out their license to wed, about 1 o'clock yesterday, that the fact became known to the public.

Mrs. Hayward is the daughter of the late Senator Martin Cadwell and Mrs. Cadwell of Hartford, Conn. Her first husband, Selden B. Manwaring of Hartford, was divorced by her in the Spring of 1914. She obtained the custody of her son, and in June she married Mr. Plant, an old friend of the family, at Branford House, Justice of the Peace B. H. Hewitt officiating. He was almost 62, and his bride was 31. He was Commodore of the Larchmont Yacht Club. He died last November from pneumonia.

Colonel Hayward returned from France last February with his regiment, and shortly afterward led its parade up Fifth Avenue. He had won the Croix de Guerre, the rank of Officer of the Legion of Honor, and from the United States Government the Distinguished Service Medal.

In 1911 he came to New York to practice law and was later on Assistant District Attorney, resigning to become counsel to Governor Whitman. He was later appointed Public Service Commissioner, but resigned to organize and lead the 15th New York Infantry, the colored regiment, as the 369th United States Infantry.

Milbank—Schultze.

The wedding of Jeremiah Milbank, a son of the late Joseph Milbank, of New York and The Towers, Port Chester, and Miss Katharine Schultze, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore A. Schultze of St. Paul, Minn., took place yesterday afternoon at the country place of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Pomeroy, Byram Shore, at Greenwich, Conn. The Rev. Dr. Theodore Sedgwick of Calvary Episcopal Church, this city, officiated.

The bride walked with her father and had no attendants. Dunlevy Milbank was his brother's best man. Relatives and a few close friends only were present. After a brief trip Mr. and Mrs. Milbank will return to The Towers to remain until late July, when they will go to the Adirondacks for the remainder of the Summer.

Miss Dryden Weds at Country Home.

Miss Dorothy Dryden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Fairchild Dryden, and Newcombe Chandler Baker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Baker of 137 Riverside Drive, were married at 4:45 o'clock yesterday afternoon at Stronghold, the country home of the bride's parents at Bernardsville, N. J. The Rev. Thomas A. Conover of St. Bernard's Episcopal Church officiated.

The bride was gowned in white satin and old family lace over flesh pink, with a veil of tulle and lace draped from a Russian coronet of lace. Miss Elizabeth Dryden was her sister's maid of honor, and wore flesh pink chiffon over Valenciennes lace. Mrs. John F. Dryden of Washington, D. C., the bride's sister-in-law, was the matron of honor. The bridesmaids were the Misses Elaine Scherer and Margaret Ripley.

Miss Haskell Weds H. M. Post.

The wedding of Henry Morgan Post, a son of Mrs. Stephen B. Post of this city, and Miss Mary Riker Haskell, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Amory Haskell of 130 East Sixty-first Street, this city, and Oak Hill Farm, Red Bank, N. J., was celebrated at noon yesterday in the Little Church of St. Peter-by-the-Sea, Galilee, N. J., and was followed by a small reception at Oak Hill Farm. A special train took the guests from and back to New York.

Miss Helen D. Decker a Bride.

There was a large assembly at the wedding yesterday of Miss Helen Dirksen Decker, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Phillips Decker of Detroit, Mich., and Harold Leslie Kalt, which was celebrated at 4 o'clock in the Presbyterian Church at Rye, N. Y. The Rev. Charles G. Sewall officiated. Mr. Kalt is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Kalt of 124 East Sixty-fourth Street, this city.

The bride, in ivory satin trimmed with rose point lace, worn by her mother and grandmother at their nuptials, was attended by Mrs. Heaton Ives Treadway, as matron of honor. The bridesmaids were the Misses Marjorie and Katherine Black of Detroit, Joie Protheroe of Rye, and Elizabeth MacDowell of Detroit.

John O'Day Marries Mrs. Sabine.

Mrs. Marion Jefferson Sabine, daughter of the late Joseph Jefferson and Mrs. Jefferson of 29 West 52d Street and granddaughter of Joseph Jefferson, the actor, was married yesterday to John O'Day, son of the late Daniel O'Day and Mrs. O'Day of Deal, N. J. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Lynch in St. Mary's Church at Deal.

Griffiths—Breen.

The marriage is announced of Miss Marion Breen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Breen of Paterson, N. J., and Charles Hayden Griffiths, a lawyer of this city, which took place last Thursday in St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church, this city. Mr. Griffiths for many years was an Assistant United States Attorney for the southern district of New York. During the war he was in the Federal service as an army officer in charge of running down frauds against the Government. The couple have gone to Cuba on their honeymoon.

Mrs. Winter Bride of Ira L. Kohn.

Mrs. Laura May Winter of Memphis, Tenn., and Ira Leonard Kohn of this city were married on June 19 by the Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman. Following the ceremony a supper was served at the Ritz-Carlton for the immediate families. Mr. and Mrs. Kohn are at present residing at the Hotel Gotham.

MISS MABEL MURPHY WEDS SENATOR FOLEY

With Archbishop Patrick J. Hayes officiating, Miss Mabel Graham Murphy, daughter of Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, was married yesterday morning in a private suite in the Hotel St. Regis, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street, to State Senator James A. Foley, Democratic minority leader in the upper house.

The wedding was a quiet one with only immediate relatives present. Miss Kathryn C. Murphy, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, while Senator Foley's brother, Major Frank J. Foley, U. S. A., was best man.

Senator Foley, counted as one of the rising men in the Hall, has been a member of the Senate since 1912. He was graduated at the College of the City of New York with the class of 1901 when he was 19 years old. Three years later he was graduated from the New York Law School. He has been especially active in the Legislature in connection with transit legislation, and was credited with much of the work in connection with the drafting of the new charter for New York City. In debates in the Senate he was looked to as the mouthpiece for Murphy.

His bride is the daughter of Mrs. Murphy by her first husband, and some time ago took her father's name. The bride is ten years her husband's junior.

No plans in connection with the wedding trip were announced.

MISS RAFFERTY BETROTHED.

Brigadier Gen. and Mrs. William C. Rafferty, who reside at the Waldorf-Astoria, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mercedes Rafferty, to Charles Baber Cattus, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Van Antwerp Cattus of 508 West End Avenue.

Miss Rafferty, who finished her education abroad just before the war, is the granddaughter of Major Gen. Judson Kilpatrick of civil war fame, and former United States Minister and dean of the diplomatic corps in Santiago, Chile. Her brother, Lieutenant William C. Rafferty, Jr., recently returned from France, where he served in the Aviation Signal Corps, U. S. A.

Mr. Cattus, who is 28 years old, senior by seven years of his fiancee, comes from an old Knickerbocker family on the paternal side. His mother was Miss Louise Baber of an old Quaker family by that name in Philadelphia. His brother is Captain John C. Cattus, who was wounded at Château-Thierry and received several medals and citations for valor. Mr. Cattus belongs to the Sons of the American Revolution, New York Athletic Club, and the Huguenot Society. The Cattus country place is near Lakewood, N. J.

The wedding is to take place shortly.

MISS RISING TWICE WED.

Marries Capt. H. F. M. Blaise by Civil and Religious Ceremonies.

Captain Maurice H. F. M. Blaise, who is connected with the French High Commission and has the British D. S. C. and the French Croix de Guerre, and Miss Florence M. Rising, the fourth daughter of Mrs. Henry W. Rising of 507 Madison Avenue, were married twice yesterday. First came the civil marriage in the office of the Marriage License Bureau in the Municipal Building, where the bride gave her age as 21 and Captain Blaise his as 30. In the afternoon the religious ceremony was performed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Gordon, 1,000 Park Avenue, by the Rev. Father Borde d'Arrere, chaplain of the French High Commission.

The bride, in white satin trimmed with lace and veiled with tulle, was attended by only Mrs. Gordon, and Lieutenant Ardoin, also of the French Commission, was the best man. A small reception followed. Captain Blaise and his bride will spend their honeymoon in Canada.

MISS ZUKOR ENGAGED.

Her Marriage to Arthur M. Loew Will Unite Theatrical Families.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Zukor last night announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mildred Zukor, to Arthur Marcus Loew, son of Marcus Loew, the vaudeville and motion picture magnate. Mr. Zukor is President of the Famous-Players Lasky Corporation. His daughter, who is 19, is a student at Columbia University and is a devotee of outdoor sports. Her father's country place is at New City, N. Y.

The romance is of long standing, the couple having known each other since childhood, and their fathers started their business careers together.

Mr. Loew is 21 years old and graduated last year from the New York University with a bachelor of science degree. He was Captain of the 'Varsity tennis team and belongs to the Pi Lambda Phi fraternity. During the war he was chief machinist's mate in the navy and is now associated with his father in theatrical enterprises.

Miss Malcolm to Wed Thursday.

The marriage of Miss Hope Malcolm, daughter of Mrs. George Ide Malcolm of 116 East Sixty-third Street, and Charles Thurlow, Jr., will take place in St. James's Church, Madison Avenue and Seventy-first Street, on Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock. A reception will follow at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. William C. Sheldon, 3 East Eighty-fifth Street. Mr. Thurlow comes from Newburyport, Mass., and is a graduate of Harvard, class of 1912. He was overseas thirteen months in the Aviation Service.

Hickcox-Brockway Engagement.

Truman S. Hickcox of Port Chester, N. Y., announces the engagement of his daughter, Miss Rachel Hickcox, to U. Hayden Brockway of Hartford, Conn. Miss Hickcox is a nurse in the Presbyterian Hospital, where she has been in training for two years. Mr. Brockway was a Captain in the 3d Division and recently returned from overseas. He was graduated from Yale, class of '11.

HOTEL AMBASSADOR OPENS.

Atlantic City's $4,000,000 Hostelry Inaugurated with a Ball.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 21.—The Ambassador, Atlantic City's new $4,000,000 hotel, threw open its doors this week. The formal opening dinner and ball was held tonight. The great new hostelry began receiving guests on Monday, and the hotel was well filled its first week.

Many came here for the event. These included a group of United States Senators and Congressmen from California, Washington, Oregon, and Arizona, who journeyed from Washington to extend their congratulations to D. M. Linnard, manager of the Ambassador.

While Mr. Linnard was born in the East he has been in California so long that he is regarded out there as a native son. He has eight hotels in California.

The Ambassador has a handsome interior, richly furnished. The hotel is fourteen stories in height, with 400 rooms and as many baths. It is located on the Board Walk at Brighton Avenue, in the Chelsea district.

Including the new hotel to be built in New York, the Linnard organization now has a chain of hotels representing an investment of $35,000,000. The hotels now operated by these interests are the Fairmont and Palace, in San Francisco, the Belvidere in Santa Barbara, the Huntington, Maryland, and Greene in Pasadena, the Alexandria in Los Angeles, and the California, now in course of construction in the same city. It is estimated that the New York hotel in Park Avenue will cost $7,000,000.

SELWYNS TO STAGE 10 AMERICAN PLAYS

"The Challenge," by Eugene Walter, and "Buddies," by G. V. Hobart, Early Offerings.

"AMONG THE GIRLS" NEXT

Firm's New Theatre, the Times Square and Forty-second Street, to Open Late in November.

The plans of Selwyn & Co. for the coming theatrical season, announced yesterday, include the opening of two new playhouses in Forty-second Street, and the presentation in New York of about ten new offerings, both dramatic and musical. All of these plays will be by American authors.

The new theatres, already announced, will be the Times Square and the Forty-second Street, and will adjoin the Selwyn Theater on the east. Both will be opened late in November or early in December, and it is probable that a new play, with Jane Cowl as its star, will be the first attraction at the Times Square.

"The Challenge," a drama by Eugene Walter, will be the firm's first offering of the season. This will be presented at the Selwyn Theatre during the week of Aug. 11, with Holbrook Blinn as its star. It has already been played on the road. In the cast, in addition to Mr. Blinn, will be Anna Dinehart, Ben Johnson, Lotus Robb, and others.

Donald Brian and Wallace Eddinger will be co-starred in a play with music by George V. Hobart, entitled "Buddies." It will open at the Park Square Theatre in Boston on Aug. 12, and be seen in New York later. Another musical offering will be "Among the Girls," a musical comedy based on Roi Cooper Megrue's play "Seven Chances," and adapted by P. G. Wodehouse and Raymond Hubbell.

"Wedding Bells," a comedy by Salisbury Field, will be seen in New York in October, with Margaret Lawrence in the leading role. Later in the same month George Flateau, the French actor, will be featured in a play by Jane Murfin.

"The Daisy Pushers," by Max Marcin and Frederick Isham, will be produced in October with Percival Knight in the principal role, and a little later there will be produced a comedy by Edgar Selwyn, in which Roland Young and Marion Coakley will have the leading roles; a farce by Avery Hopwood, and "The Whirlwind," a comedy by Porter Emerson Browne.

The Selwyns will also be interested, with the Shuberts, in a play in which Peggy Wood will be starred, and will be associated with Augustus Thomas in the production of a play which he has written.

There will be four companies of "Tea For Three" on tour, the original company being scheduled to open at the La Salle Theatre, Chicago, on Sept. 21. In association with Arthur Hammerstein, two companies of "Tumble In" will be sent on tour.

NEW WILKINS WITNESS.

Expected to Give Strong Testimony for Prosecution.

MINEOLA, June 21.—Taking advantage of the adjournment of the trial of Dr. Walter Keene Wilkins from Friday to Monday, District Attorney Weeks spent the day in preparing for Monday's sessions, when the prosecution will probably rest after submitting important testimony. It was stated that a new witness, who is regarded by the District Attorney as stronger than any of those who have already testified against the doctor, would go on the stand on Monday.

District Attorney Weeks refused yesterday to discuss the nature of the testimony which would be presented by this witness, but admitted that he had obtained unexpected help from a witness not hitherto mentioned in connection with the case, and that he expected damaging testimony from him.

Dr. Otto H. Schultze, a medical expert, will be put on the stand also, and David N. Carvalho, the handwriting and document expert, will testify. The defense expects to occupy a week with its case, so that the jury will probably not have the case for ten days.

HONOR SOLDIER HEROES.

Long Island Veterans Welcomed and Tribute Paid to Dead.

Special to The New York Times.

MANHASSET, L. I., June 21.—Manhasset and the adjoining communities of Plandome and Lakeville joined today in extending a welcome to the returned service men from that locality, and also to pay homage to those who died for their country. The exercises, which were held under the direction of a committee headed by Town Clerk Thomas O'Connell, opened with a parade through the principal streets of Manhasset and Plandome.

Manhasset suffered a larger percentage in casualties in the war than other sections of Nassau County. Of 139 men who were in the service, eleven lost their lives and one is reported missing in action. The dead are John Fox, James T. Gray, Joseph L. Hutchings, Yarnack Maciewsky, Charles Morangello, Joseph Nowicki, John H. Rice, Morrell Smith, Harold T. Wooley and George R. Walker. Daniel Munyon was reported missing in action, and no trace of him has been found.

FIRE PANIC IN MOVIE HOUSE.

Explosion and Smoke from Film Cause Terror to Spectators.

Eight hundred persons at the City Hall Theatre, 31 Park Row, were thrown into panic yesterday afternoon when an explosion occurred in the operator's booth and smoke poured out over the heads of the spectators.

Some one cried "Fire!" and the crowd trampled on one another in their efforts to reach the main exit. Patrolman Ralph De Martini, who was passing, learning what had happened, sent a fire alarm, then entered the theatre and cleared it by directing the crowd to use the side exits as well as the main exit.

Thomas Foleister, operator of the moving picture machine, said later that a reel of film, which had become jammed in the machine, had caught fire, causing the explosion and smoke, but he had put out the fire with a chemical extinguisher before the arrival of the Fire Department.

The performance was resumed within half an hour, the damage being nominal.

WILLIAMS ALUMNI MEET.

"Victory" Painting Given to College as Memorial of War.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., June 21.—The trustees of Williams College, in their annual meeting this afternoon, elected the following officers: Dean, Carrol Lewis Maxcy; chairman of faculty pro tem., Professor J. E. Howes; Secretary of Corporation, Willard E. Hoyt; Registrar, E. A. Green. The subject of gifts and other college announcements will be made part of the President's report at the commencement on Monday.

The feature of the College Alumni Association meeting was the presentation of a painting, "Victory," done by Thomas Buchanan Read, class of 1863, and given to the college by J. W. Bullock, '81, in memory of the Williams men who died in the war.

A committee to take over all alumni activities was appointed, including Frederick Geller of New York; William Ritter, Chicago; W. W. Wheeler, Cleveland; J. D. Coats, Boston, and N. A. Chapman, New York.

DEVERY FUNERAL TUESDAY.

Services for Ex-Police Chief at St. Mary's, Far Rockaway.

The funeral of William S. Devery, "the best Chief of Police New York ever had," whose death occurred Friday afternoon of apoplexy at his home, in Mott Avenue, Bayswater, Far Rockaway, will be held Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock in the Church of St. Mary Star of the Sea, at Far Rockaway. A squad of New York policemen will act as escort of honor. Interment will be in Calvary Cemetery.

As soon as he learned of the death of the former Chief Police Commissioner Enright ordered that the flags at Police Headquarters and all precinct stations be kept at half-mast until after the funeral as a mark of respect to the memory of the former head of the department. Chief Devery was legislated out of office, the post of Chief of Police being abolished, during his term of office in February, 1901.

The first message of condolence received by the family came from Police Commissioner Enright. It was sent to Far Rockaway from the Devery city home at 171 Riverside Drive. Many messages were received yesterday, some being sent to the city address and some to the Summer home at Far Rockaway. They included condolences from ex-Sheriff Tom Foley and Fred Goodwin, Democratic leader of the old Ninth Ward, Manhattan, where Devery made his start.

Ex-Chief Devery was very popular with the residents of Far Rockaway, where he had lived much of the time in recent years. He was known as a great fisherman, and last May made a catch of forty cod in one day, a record which created a furore among the local fishermen.

The "pump," under the emblem of which the former Police Chief made his candidacy for Mayor on an independent ticket in 1903, at the corner of Eighth Avenue and Twenty-eighth Street, was draped in mourning, and in the afternoon a large floral wreath was placed on it, the card reading "From Your Friends." Hundreds of men, women, and children passed by the "pump" last night as a mark of respect to the memory of their departed friend.

Loaded down with her Saturday night marketing, an aged woman knelt beside the "pump" and prayed. She left sobbing. To those nearby she said that the former Police Chief had befriended her when she was in great want and she never forgot his kindness.

William J. Farrell.

William J. Farrell, President and Treasurer of the William J. Farrell Company, one of the largest dealers in dressed poultry, butter, and eggs in the city, with places of business at 325 Washington Street and 427 West Fourteenth Street, died Friday evening at Fort Covington, N. Y., following a stroke of apoplexy on Wednesday. Specialists from New York were rushed to his bedside, but they could do nothing for him. Mr. Farrell was born in New York City in 1865, a son of Richard and Mary Farrell, and lived at 123 West 130th Street. He was a member of the New York Mercantile Exchange and was active in Catholic affairs. At the time the big dinner was given to the 77th Division in November, 1917, Mr. Farrell gave 1,000 turkeys.

George Whitfield Hopper.

George Whitfield Hopper, for thirty-five years in the restaurant business in New York City, having a restaurant at 50 John Street, and at other places in the city, died early yesterday morning in his apartment at Hotel Belleclaire, Broadway and Seventy-seventh Street. He was ill only four days, first with ptomaine poisoning, and then pneumonia developed. Mr. Hopper was 61 years old, and was born in Paterson, N. J., a son of Cornelius Hopper. He did business under the firm name of Hopper & Co., and his partner was Douglas Gibson. Mr. Hopper was a member of the Knickerbocker Whist Club.

Arthur Haviland, Civil Engineer.

Arthur Haviland, 71 years old, for many years engaged as a civil engineer, died Wednesday night at his home, 1,851 Morris Avenue, the Bronx. Mr. Haviland was for many years engaged in railroad construction work. He was employed in the construction of the West Shore Railway and later with the New York Central. In recent years he was connected with the law department and with the land and tax department of the New York Central.

WEBB.—Silas Daniel. On behalf of the members of the AMERICAN ASIATIC ASSOCIATION the Executive Committee have to record their sense of the loss that the association has sustained in the death of its former President and member of the committee, Silas Daniel Webb. One of the founders of the association, Mr. Webb became its second President in 1901, serving in that capacity until 1906. In the early years of its history, the association owed much to the judicious guidance of a man whose long residence in China had familiarized him with the purposes which the association was organized to subserve. His gentleness of character, combined with a native modesty, a supreme conscientiousness, and an entire absence of self-seeking, commanded the esteem and affectionate regard of his associates. An exponent of the old traditions of American enterprise in the Far East, there has passed away in the person of Mr. Webb one of the last survivors of the business men of a former generation of New Yorkers, and one of the best representatives of the type of merchant characteristic of that era.
EUGENE P. THOMAS, Acting President.

STEEL MARKS TIME ON DAY-BY-DAY WORK

Any Convulsion Over Peace Negotiations Not Expected to Affect Operations.

CONSTRUCTION HELD BACK

Consumers Await More Settled World Conditions—Prices Well Maintained as a Rule.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, June 21.—The most important feature of the iron and steel market at the moment is the fact that practically no part of the demand the trade has been experiencing is of such character that it would be interrupted by untoward developments such as failure of Germany to sign the Peace Treaty. There has been a great deal of business, particularly construction work, held back until settled conditions should be established in the world. That business is still in abeyance, while the orders on which the mills are running involve steel for ordinary everyday consumption, and such orders are not at all likely to be interrupted even by decidedly unfavorable developments. For instance, the best customer of the steel industry for months past has been the automobile trade, and the demand for automobiles would not be affected.

There has been further improvement in the demand for oil country goods, whereby the pipe mills are not only running their lap weld departments in full, but are falling behind in deliveries. One large interest computes that it has such a volume of lap weld pipe orders accumulated that the pace of demand could fall off materially and still allow it to operate these departments in full to the end of the year. There has been an increase in demand for butt weld pipe, involving the small sizes, so that butt weld departments are able to operate at 65 per cent. to 80 per cent. of capacity.

Another line of finished steel products in which there has been improvement is sheets. Early in the year only a few branches of the sheet consuming trade, and the automobile industry in particular, were active, but now the demand for sheets is widespread, both geographically and as to the uses to which the sheets are to be put. Farmers, for instance, are heavy buyers for repair work. Sheet mills are now operating at about 70 per cent. of capacity against a rate of less than 60 per cent. about a month ago, and their orders would justify a slightly higher rate of operation if it were not that the mills desire to have a little accumulation of business against the falling off in orders that usually occurs in the midsummer period.

The plate market continues stagnant. There is a fair demand from some quarters, other lines of consumption developing few orders. Even if there had not been the large increase in plate rolling capacity that occurred during the war the plate market would probably present a sluggish aspect. Demand for merchant bars is moderate and of about the same volume as for several weeks past. Rails are quiet, and structural shapes are not active, although the demand is increasing.

Fabricated steel business is looking up sharply, the bookings of fabricated steel orders by the structural shops having doubled from April to May. The monthly reports of the Bridge Builders' and Structural Society of fabricated steel orders placed in proportion to the fabricating capacity make the following showing: January, 12 per cent.; February, 12½ per cent.; March, 17 per cent.; April, 24½ per cent.; May, 49 per cent. Thus far the orders placed have been almost entirely for small jobs. A great deal of business in large jobs has been planned and estimated upon so as to have everything in readiness when investors decide to take hold. A relatively large job has just been placed, involving 12,000 tons of structural steel, for an office building at Detroit for the General Motors Corporation.

The pig iron market, which has been fairly active for several weeks, now shows slightly lessened activity, but conditions are still regarded as promising, since it is generally estimated that the current melt is well in excess of the production, and the competition of the last few weeks has shown that the market is not booked for any general decline. The disposition now is to predict advances, though it is hardly probable that the market can advance by any material amount until most of the new merchant furnaces now idle have gotten into blast again.

Fully half of the prospective business in Connellsville furnace coke for the second half of the year has been closed in the buying movement of the last ten days. Instead of the flat price contracts that were under discussion a few weeks ago, buyers and sellers have come to terms on a ratio basis, the billing price of coke each month to be determined by the prevailing price of pig iron. The majority of the contracts placed have been on the basis of 6¼ to 1, based on pig iron at Valley furnaces. Thus, with basic pig iron at $25.75, Valley, which is, nominally at least, the present market, the coke for a month would be invoiced at $4.12, and each change of 25 cents in pig iron would change the coke price by 4 cents.

In the matter of iron bars the local mills are pretty well settled on their price of refined at 2.75 cents, Pittsburgh, and do not feel like shading that price. Indeed, they say that in view of the cost of production it is impossible to shade the figure very materially. It is shown that while Eastern and Western mills are selling on a basis of 2.35 cents, Pittsburgh, they have the freight in their favor with this basing, and would not think of shipping into Pittsburgh at such a price with the freight against them.

As to the export demand in tin plate in general, it is said here to be of only moderate proportions. The best buyer is Japan, there being a heavy consumptive demand in that country. The Japanese have begun tinning, but have not yet rolled black plate. Domestic demand for tin plate has increased somewhat in the last week or ten days, but is still of extremely moderate proportions, and full operation of the mills at any time during the remainder of the year seems to be out of the question. Operations have increased slightly of late, however, and now average somewhat above 50 per cent. The leading interest will operate better in July than was expected, since, in line with its recent practice of closing mills for short periods, in order to distribute work among the men, it had intended to close two plants on July 1, but it has just been decided to keep those plants in operation for a time after July 1. Tin plate prices are being strictly adhered to, except in the case of various accumulations of misfit material, which is being offered at prices that will eventually, though quite gradually, work it off.

The tin plate mills that do black plate business are having a good trade in that line, which is in contrast to the light demand for coke bright plates. An order for 4,000 tons of black plates has been received by the leading interest, deliveries to run to the end of the year, and no price guarantees attached. There is also a good demand for terne plate. While this does not run largely into tonnage, it is very satisfactory, compared with the light business of the last two years. Wartime restrictions shut off the manufacture of terne plate almost entirely, but if there had been entire freedom of production last year it is doubtful if there would have been much buying.

There has been a further improvement in the demand for sheets, and the great bulk of the business is being done at full or regular prices. There continues to be shading, but it affects no more than approximately 10 per cent. of the total sales. Most producers claim that the cutting is confined to a very few mills, and that it is being done chiefly because, from one circumstance or another, the mills find it necessary to buy their way into the market. It is claimed that cutting of that sort does not menace the general market stability. No serious fears are entertained that wage disputes will interfere with mill operations. While it is quite improbable that an agreement will be reached by July 1 with the Amalgamated Association on the scale, it is thought that there will be no more idleness than that of a few union mills at the outside.

There has developed a better demand for wire products than was expected a few weeks ago. Some mills that scheduled extensive repairs and improvements for the Summer, expecting that the capacity remaining available would be ample to take care of their trade, are now running behind in deliveries, sometimes to the extent of several weeks. Demand is chiefly for common wire, manufacturers' wire, and wire nails. The demand for fabricated wire fence is of decidedly moderate proportions, but is expected to open up toward Fall. Wire prices are reported as being strictly maintained all along the line, except that coated nails, nominally $2.85 a keg, are being shaded about 10 cents a keg.

The demand for plates continues extremely light, and is running well under 50 per cent. of capacity, the latter being much larger than before the war. There is a fair demand for plates for building tanks, and there is a large outlet for plates through the larger sizes of lap welded pipe. There is scarcely any car building, which eliminates one outlet that usually is quite important. As for plates for structural purposes, the demand is still light, although it is still improving. The plate price of 2.65c, Pittsburgh, is reported as being well held in the main, but as formerly there is more or less cutting, particularly when an inquiry of any size comes out. This cutting is understood not to run beyond $2 or $3 a ton.

Heavy melting steel seems fairly quotable at the range of $17.50 to $18.50. The lower figure represents a price almost any one would be willing to pay, while the higher figure represents the price at which some dealers would willingly sell, although in limited tonnages only. The market is very narrow, as there is so little material available, and it is easier to make an appraisal of what scrap is worth than it is to find a tonnage, irrespective of price. There is no price that would bring out the yard scrap, as bidding in advance would merely encourage dealers to hold it for an additional rise. The Government is selling its scrap more freely than formerly. At first it was simply a matter of bids being solicited and being referred to Washington, where they would be lost or rejected. Now there are transactions. A pile of shell blanks here has been sold to a large Pittsburgh dealer at $17.55, free on board location. The material is forged, but not otherwise touched, and will probably go as low phosphorus scrap, not comparing with billet and bloom butts.

There has been an additional increase in the demand for welded tubular goods in the last two weeks. Demand for lap weld is considerably in excess of capacity, while demand for butt weld sizes is described as equal to about 80 per cent. of capacity. As usual, the lap weld demand is for oil country goods, where there is no abatement of orders. Prices on pipe are being very well maintained. The rumors of price shading have disappeared. Demand for welded boiler tubes is relatively light, much lighter than it was earlier in the year, when much repair work was being done. In the future, demand will depend chiefly upon construction work by way of power generation, and there is not much of that occurring at present. Seamless tubes are in only fair demand. Mills whose capacity was practically monopolized by war demands lost many customers, and buyers have not all returned to their original sources of supply.

RESERVE BANK AIDS IN MONEY FLURRY

REPORT SHOWS ITS VALUE

Temporary Stringency Caused by the Heavy Income Tax Payments.

The sharp advance in call money rates to 15 per cent. last Monday, coming on the heels of the first Clearing House deficit since the Fall of 1914, when the whole financial structure was shaken by the outbreak of the world war, served to break the stock market and caused many to wonder if the financial situation had not worked itself into a highly precarious position.

The rate—it was reported after the close of the market on Monday that 20 per cent. had been paid for loans, but this could not be verified—was disconcerting. So was the fact that the renewal rate on that day was made at 10 per cent., the highest recorded since 1912, and forebodings still existed Tuesday, when call loans were renewed at 6 per cent. and little money was to be had at the usual hour for opening the money market.

Minds became easier later in the day when a considerable volume of money appeared, and rates fell to 5 per cent. in the last half hour of business. Then, with a return of something approximating normal conditions, Wall Street had a chance to review the situation and find out what had happened.

Probably the most ridiculous assertion heard during the stress of the flurry was that the Federal Reserve system had broken down. Far from breaking down, the system had asserted itself, it was shown by subsequent developments. It showed its power in many respects. The proof of this was found in the weekly statement of that institution issued yesterday.

It is clearly evidence now what forces were at work Monday and Tuesday. Monday the second installment of income tax and other internal revenue payments were due. These payments were very large, and the banks were called upon to help finance them. This demand, added to the ever-growing demand for stock market accommodations, had swelled Clearing House bank loans to $5,135,419,000 on Saturday a week ago, and had left the banks with a deficit of $656,050.

Money Returned to Banks.

The taxes were paid Monday, and by Tuesday the money began to return to the banks. The clearings at the Clearing House Tuesday totaled $1,138,000,000, a sum which, by its very size, caused delay in getting the balances through, so that it was after the usual hour before the banks finally knew where they stood. This caused some delay in getting money on to the Stock Exchange, and accounted for the early stringency and the 8 per cent. renewal rate.

Bank clearings were large again Wednesday, totaling $941,000,000, which indicates that not all the unusual volume of business over the tax-due date had been handled on Monday's sheet, but by Thursday clearings were back to more normal proportions, amounting to $852,000,000. Thursday, and again Friday, the call money market was normal, with rates ranging from 5 to 6 per cent., and the supply entirely sufficient for all demands. In fact, money brokers on the Stock Exchange said Thursday afternoon they had returned to the banks many millions which could not be loaned to brokers. The same thing occurred Friday, the last day on which there was any business in call money.

That the Federal Reserve Bank was functioning with great efficiency is evident from its statement. About two weeks ago the Reserve Board sent out a warning against over-speculation. It was said then that the Board contemplated an investigation to find out what relation there was between bank offerings of call money and the amounts they were borrowing from Reserve Banks on war bonds. It was intimated that the Reserve Board would be pleased to see member banks reduce their borrowings on war bonds, whether there was a relation between these and the call money market or not.

In the New York Federal Reserve district there had been a steady decrease in war bond borrowings for several weeks. On May 16 the total of such borrowings here was $792,953,323, and in the statement of June 13 this had been reduced to $630,111,583. The last week there was another reduction, this time of $45,398,882, making the total amount now $584,512,701, or $208,440,622 below the high-water mark of May 16, and the smallest total since Jan. 17 last.

More Trouble in Sight.

At the same time, the New York Reserve Bank has not hesitated to purchase bills in the open market, this week's statement showing an expansion of $8,956,165, to $80,948,596, the greatest total in this item since Jan. 31. The rediscounts of bills secured by collateral other than Government bonds also expanded this week, the increase being $9,137,911, to $39,782,165.

Meanwhile, Clearing House banks were putting themselves in better position. The loan account, which showed $5,135,419,000 a week ago, now stands at $4,929,818,000, a decrease of $205,601,000, while demand deposits have come down $128,596,000, to $4,006,332,000, and the deficit of $656,050 of a week ago has been wiped out and in its place there was yesterday a surplus of $30,406,580.

Bankers believe there is a chance of another flurry in money rates before the end of the month. The June 30-July 1 corporation requirements for interest, dividends, and maturities are the heaviest of the year, with the possible exception of those at the Dec. 31-Jan. 1 period. This demand will begin to make itself felt toward the end of this week. However, it is believed that stock market loans have been considerably reduced since last week, and it is generally felt that, barring another great splurge of speculation, the banks will be able to handle the end-of-the-month requirements and still have enough surplus to take care of the legitimate needs of the stock market.

BOSTON COPPER GOSSIP.

Calumet and Hecla Mines Produced 6,797,219 Pounds in May.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, June 21.—The Calumet and Hecla and subsidiary copper companies in May produced 6,797,219 pounds of refined copper, compared with 8,554,413 pounds in April and 9,652,033 pounds in March.

Chile Copper Company in May turned out 5,066,000 pounds against 5,024,000 pounds in April and 7,506,000 pounds in May, 1918.

Kennecott's May production was 3,342,000 pounds, compared with 3,528,000 pounds in April and 3,404,000 pounds in May a year ago.

May production of Mohawk was 1,062,738 pounds of copper, compared with 1,191,225 pounds in April and 918,000 pounds in May of 1918.

Wolverine produced 352,130 pounds in May against 493,860 pounds in April and 340,000 pounds in May last year.

Havre Coffee Market to Reopen.

PARIS, June 21.—The coffee market at Havre, which has been closed since January, 1918, will reopen Monday, it was announced here today, for dealing in futures.

LESS GOLD ON HAND IN RESERVE BANKS

Decline of $28,100,000 for the Week Reported—Discount and Acceptance Holdings Higher.

WAR PAPER LIQUIDATED

$73,000,000 Worth of These Holdings Given Up by the Banks During the Last Week.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Liquidation in some volume of war paper fully offset, however, by increases of other discounts and of acceptances on hand, also a decrease of $28,100,000 in gold reserves are indicated in the Federal Reserve Board's weekly bank statement issued as at the close of business on June 20.

As against a decrease of $73,600,000 in war paper there are shown increases of $32,900,000 in other discounts, and of $40,200,000 in acceptances. The total of war paper on hand includes an amount of $127,500,000 discounted for other banks by the Cleveland, Chicago, St. Louis, and Minneapolis Reserve banks, while the total of acceptances on hand comprises $27,500,000 bought from the New York Federal Reserve Bank without the latter's indorsement.

A decline of $2,500,000 in Treasury certificates represents in part liquidation of temporary purchases of certificates from non-member banks. As a result of all these operations total earning assets show a decline for the week of $3,100,000.

Government deposits fell off $83,800,000, reserve deposits increased $15,000,000, while the "float" carried by the Reserve Banks was $45,500,000 less than the week before. Net deposits show a decrease of $22,400,000. Federal Reserve note circulation declined about $11,000,000, Philadelphia, Cleveland, and Richmond reporting the largest decreases. Direct withdrawals of gold by member banks and exchange of notes for gold to meet the export demand, account largely for the decrease of $28,100,000 in gold, and of $27,500,000 in cash reserves. The bank reserve ratio shows a decline from 52.7 to 52.5 per cent.

FEDERAL RESERVE BANK STATEMENT

Education Notes.

The Board of Education has granted a leave of absence, without pay, to Charlotte H. Binner, a teacher in the Julia Richman High School, from Sept. 8, 1919, to Aug. 31, 1920, to organize a School of Commerce for Women at Dallas, Tex.

George W. Hunter, teacher of biology at De Witt Clinton High School, will leave that school this Summer to take a similar position in a Minnesota school.

Mother's Day celebration will be held at the Manhattan Trade School for Girls, Twenty-second Street and Lexington Avenue, on Monday afternoon, when parents of girls who have attended the school and completed the millinery, dressmaking, lamp-shade and other trade courses will examine the exhibition of work completed by the students. Young women graduates of the school have also invited their employers to the exhibition so that people in trade may see just how, when, and where the girls have received their education. Miss Florence Marshall is principal of the school.

The City College will hold a clinic for the correction of speech defects. It will consist of a ninety-hour course, giving a thorough practical training to those desiring to become specialists in the correction of speech defects. Thirty hours will be devoted to theory and sixty hours to clinical practice. The Summer session will commence June 30 and end Aug. 1. The lectures will include an intimate study of the anatomy, physiology and development of the vocal organs, the psychology of speech and the pedagogical principles and methods employed in the analysis, classification and correction of all cases of defective speech. There will also be an intimate study of "Shell Shock," as manifested in the actual experience of members of the staff of this clinic, now supervising the work for the United States Government. This course will prove of service to all teachers of English or Elocution, heads of departments, superintendents, physicians, kindergartners and those in charge of mentally retarded children. The methods taught are those now employed by the Department of Education. Information may be obtained by applying to Dr. Frederick Martin, Director of Speech Improvement, Board of Education, 157 East Sixty-seventh Street.

The City Superintendent of Schools has been empowered to assign the teachers in charge of libraries in the day schools to libraries in their respective schools where playgrounds are established, during July and August, their pay to be $2 for each playground session, viz., from 1:30 P. M. to 5:30 P. M.

This is the last week of the public school season. The schools will close on June 27 and not reopen until Sept. 8.

United States.

The commission announces for July 22 an examination for die and toolmaker, for men only. Two vacancies in the equipment shops of the Post Office Department, Washington, D. C., at $4.25 to $4.50 a day, will be filled from this examination. As the commission has had difficulty in securing eligibles for this position, qualified persons are urged to apply. Certification to fill the higher salaried positions will be made from those who attain the highest average percentages in the examination. Appointees will be required to make dies and tools used in the manufacture of padlocks and mail bag attachments. Competitors will not be required to report for examination at any place, but will be rated on physical ability, 40; training and experience, 60. Applicants must show that they are skilled workmen, and that they have had at least one year's experience, exclusive of apprenticeship, making dies for stamping, piercing, and forming small articles of sheet metal, including the hardening and tempering of such dies. Persons whose only experience is that of a toolmaker are not considered qualified for this position. Applicants must have reached their twentieth birthday on the date of the examination.

Some of the Events at Gimbels That Emphasize Savings

Hats to Charmingly Grace Summertime Attire

Of Various Hours and Occasions

Fill the French Millinery Salon with Their Illusive Feminine Loveliness

A hat of black horsehair with a great crush bow of soft black net.

A tailored-type hat of white Georgette immaculate with white burnt ostrich bands.

Tailormades of Heavy Silk Shantung

FOR WOMEN

Every one who has seen them since they've been unpacked from their wrappers has exclaimed over their smartly tailored lines—their wonderful quality at such a price.

Not a dot of the best sports tailored lines and details has been omitted. Notch collar, gradual pinch pleats back and front; double patch pockets with buttoned laps, 3-button cuffs.

Cool, smart, correct for travel, town or country wear. Sizes 34 to 44.

GIMBELS—WOMEN'S SUIT SALON—Third Floor

Four "Casaques" of Personality

That Will Transform Simple Skirts to Costumes of Distinction

Are Specially Priced $29.75

The smart American, as the Parisian, now appreciates the practicability of the "Casaque." She may express her individuality in one or another of these models suitable for any hour of the day.

(A) Georgette crepe in China blue, black, navy, flame, embroidered, in the delicate floral treatment of the Japanese, with metal thread and silk.

(B) Crepe de chine in navy blue, black, emerald, in a distinctly Parisian model, embroidered in wool and gold thread and heavily fringed.

(C) A Pinafore "Casaque" of georgette crepe in jade green, navy, black, grey, copen, outlined in silver cloth at neck, pockets, panel back, sleeves and border.

54-inch All Wool Poiret Twills, $3.95 yard.
Fine close twill in cream, white, navy blue and black.

50-inch All Wool Fine Twill Serge, $2.65 yard.

GIMBELS DRESS GOODS SECTION—Second Floor

Beautiful Georgette Underwear, $2 and $3.95

No matter how diverting the subject of one's clothes may be, no woman thinks of planning her wardrobe without first considering the foundation—dainty undergarments; even if this were not so, they would instantly convert a woman—for never have lovelier undergarments been so moderately priced.

Camisoles at $2.00

Fashioned of georgette, trimmed with tucks, hemstitching, shirring and Valenciennes lace in the delicate colors of pink, nile and canary. Shoulder straps of self material.

Envelope Chemises, $3.95

Fashioned of georgette with shoulder straps of self material and trimmed with several rows of stitching. Shown in orchid and flesh.

GIMBELS—LINGERIE SECTION—Second Floor

A Sale of 400 Women's Smart Silk Dresses of the Mid-Summer Mode

A Round-Up of Groups of Dresses Secured in Fortunate Special-Price Purchases From the Best Makers

Each Dress An Extraordinary Value $27.50

Marked for a Special Monday Selling Event

Foulards in Summery Patterns of Blue and White

—with a Redingote or a drapery or a fold-trimmed tunic of navy blue Georgette crepe that follows a bodice veiled in it. A model embroidered in white braid, after the Greek key pattern - - $27.50

Moire Taffetas in Navy Blue or a Soft Brown That Paris is Favoring —with the new ankle-hugging upside-down frills; with the new hip-line silhouette, and the dearest frill neck-line, $27.50

Watteau Georgette Crepe Over Taffeta in Navy Blue—the Most Desired

—with the new draped cascade pannier tunic of the Georgette crepe; with multitudes of fine frills - - - - - $27.50

Plenty of the very type of smart Summer silk dress for the woman who is spending the summer in town—with its multitudes of attractions.

Plenty of lovely fashions in lighter shades for the morning at hotel resort—for the afternoon—for trips to town—for the informal evening dance.

In time to enjoy the dresses fully comes this event.

SEEK A BUILDING FOR CURB MARKET

LIMIT MEMBERSHIP TO 500

Governors Hope to Bar All Dishonest Dealers Whose Practices Are Suspected.

FEAR NO NEW MARKET

Brokers Declare Any Other Organization Dealing In Open Air Would Be Sure to Fail.

It was announced yesterday that the Board of Representatives of the New York Curb Market Association had adopted a resolution at a special meeting limiting the future membership of the association ot 500 members. This was accepted in some quarters in the financial district as proof that the brokers who are now members of the association are eager to further the plan to house the market, so that the stocks and bonds and the methods of trading may be more closely supervised and controlled.

Many brokers believe that the movement to house the Curb Market will be successful, because the men behind it have gone further than in any of the other instances where such an action was proposed. A realty company, to be composed of association members, who will receive equal amounts of the stock, has been formed, and a special committee is conferring every afternoon with real estate men in a search for a suitable location for the market. The outdoor market now spreads over a large section of Broad Street, between Exchange Place and Beaver Street.

Daily Disclosures Influenced Them.

Although representatives of many Curb houses assert that the projected movement of this market under a roof has not been caused by the recent activity of the District Attorney's office in disclosing sharp practices among some individuals who have operated in the market, other brokers declare that that activity undoubtedly has had an influence on the Governors of the market.

Many Curb brokers have deplored the lack of control that made it possible for any one to enter and offer to buy and sell stocks. It has been the experience of some of the older Curb market operators that during periods of prosperity, when the public is attracted to the markets by daily reports of advances in stock prices, most of the warnings they issue against the great majority of untried and unknown securities which are floated on the Curb, are wholly disregarded. They pointed out that in the recent oil boom, when several issues which made their appearance in the outside market at a few cents a share jumped almost overnight to dollars because of the bringing in of a gusher, speculative enthusiasm was at its height, and any stock of almost any oil company found a ready market.

Honest operators declare that the public was in a gambling humor, and that many small investors who, by chance, had won a big return on less than $100, reinvested sudden profits along with savings and, hitting in the dark, without any investigation as to the merits or standing of the company behind the stock, lost everything in some companies that had prepared pitfalls. Many bought stock in oil-leasing companies which failed to bring in any wells.

Question of New Market.

The question has been raised in some quarters in the financial district as to whether the New York Curb Market Association has assurances that, after it moves into a new building, an independent trading market will not be allowed to spring up where the association now holds forth in Broad Street. The men behind the move to house the market pay little attention to this possibility, and believe that such a market would lose caste the moment it opened as an exchange which would handle only the issues which could not gain listing privileges with the association.

They point out that the authorities probably would co-operate with them to prevent the establishment of a market which would be run by an element which they desire to eliminate. Another phase of the situation is the attitude of the New York Stock Exchange toward the movement. At the present time, when the majority of the brokers on the Curb have all of the business they can attend to, it is estimated that 60 per cent. of the sales are for Stock Exchange houses.

It was said that, three years ago, when a similar movement to house the Curb market was proposed the opposition of some of the members of the big board aided in blocking it. The report of a special New York Stock Exchange Committee on the proposed housing is awaited with interest on the Curb market.

FRENCH INDO-CHINA CALM.

Chinese Piracy on Border Sole Distraction, Governor General Says.

PARIS, June 21.—Generally satisfactory conditions in French Indo-China were reported by Albert Sarraut, Governor General of the colony, upon his arrival yesterday at Marseilles.

"Everything was calm there when I left, except on the northern frontier, where some of the Chinese tribes are committing acts of piracy and robbery," said the Governor General, "but the importance of this should not be exaggerated. The colony is in a prosperous condition and has a splendid future in prospect."

SAYS JEWS FAVOR THE POLISH STATE

New Nation's Consulate General Sees Harmoney Between the Two Races.

A statement was issued from the Polish Consulate General in this city yesterday, asserting that the Jews in Poland were in harmony with the Polish Government and were opposed to alleged attempts of Jews in other countries to promote nationalistic feelings which might set Polish Jews against Poles. The statement was as follows:

"On May 23 there took place in Warsaw the general meeting of the Union of Jews in Poland. Delegates from all parts of the country were present. The President of the meeting, Mr. Loewenstein, a member of the Polish Diet, stated in his speech that it was the duty of the Jews in Poland to seek to check separatistic tendencies of Jewish nationalists who, under the form of national autonomy, wish to re-establish the ghetto.

"The chief speaker of the meeting, Mr. Sterling, declared that the Russian and German Governments had made every effort possible in order to provoke misunderstandings and conflicts between the Christians and the Jews in Poland. He stated that the nationalistic Jewish tendencies were discountenanced by serious Jewish opinion. Nevertheless, Zionistic organizations are continuing to excite foreign public opinion against Poland. It is, therefore, the duty of the Jews in Poland not to remain inactive, but to fight against these machinations of the Zionistic nationalism.

"The speaker proposed then to adopt the following program for the Union of Jews.

"Whereas the Polish Democracy can guarantee the equality of rights to the Jewish citizens, it is necessary to leave to the Polish people alone the right to solve the Jewish question, without intervention of foreign influences, which would only deepen the conflict.

"The territorial development of the Polish State will permit an easier repartition of the Jewish population over a larger space, and will diminish the economical causes of the conflict.

"The free access to the sea and the possession of Danzig by Poland will facilitate the relations with the West, will contribute to the Jewish emigration, and will destroy the German influence among the Jews, derived from the community of the language.

"The meeting adopted this program and voted an appeal to the Jewish merchants in Poland, inviting them to subscribe for the Polish State loan."

"PROTECTOR" FOR LABOR.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, June 12, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Appointment of a "protector" to look after the interests of Jamaica labor in Central America is being considered by the Government as the result of a British commission's report on recent disorders attending a strike on the United Fruit Company's plantations in Costa Rica.

The commission, formed at the instance of the late British Minister to Panama and Costa Rica, Sir Claude Mallet, was headed by William McAdam, British Consul at Limon, Costa Rica. It was instructed to investigate charges by British employes of the United Fruit Company that strikers, mainly Jamaicans, were dealt with violently and that many lost household goods and money.

The report, signed by Consul McAdam and four other commissioners, exonerated the fruit company of the charges against it, but recommended the dismissal of a deputy police chief. The commission found the strike had been fomented by agitators. Seven ringleaders now are on trial. The violence attending the strike followed the ejection of strikers from the living quarters furnished to employes by the company. The Rev. E. C. Notman of Bocas, Panama, a member of the British Commission, reported unofficially, that conditions among West Indian laborers had improved.

TO ELECTRIFY BELGIAN LINES

Twenty-five-Minute Trip from Brussels to Antwerp in Prospect.

BRUSSELS, June 20.—Electrification of Belgian railways has been decreed by the Minister of Railways, following a favorable report on such a project made by a committee appointed to investigate such a course. The first line to be electrified will be that from Brussels to Luxemburg, and later the Brussels-Ostend railway. Action to this end probably will be taken in August, with the expectation of beginning the reconstruction work at the beginning of next year.

Electrification, it is said, will make it possible to go from Brussels to Antwerp in twenty-five minutes and to run trains at intervals of fifteen minutes.

TO AID FUND FOR CHURCHES.

Catholic Society to Make Appeal at Carnegie Hall Tonight.

A mass meeting will be held at Carnegie Hall tonight to aid in the campaign of the Society to Help Devastated Churches in France at 124 East 28th Street, to provide at least $500,000 to aid in rebuilding destroyed Catholic churches. An appeal for help for this fund by Archbishop Hayes will be read in every Catholic church in this city today. It was announced yesterday that Pope Benedict had cabled the following message to the society:

"I congratulate with all my heart those who are helping to rehabilitate the devastated churches of France and I pray God to shower upon them graces and blessings."

A statement of the society calling on the Catholics for generous subscriptions for this cause points to the campaign of the Protestant churches to raise $170,000,000 and quotes William D. Guthrie as asserting that this fund is intended in part for Protestant propaganda and for proselyting to Protestant denominations in Catholic countries.

TODAY IS THRIFT SUNDAY.

Churches Aiding Government Campaign to Establish Policy of Saving.

In practically every church in the Second Federal Reserve District today the clergy are again supporting the Government by transmitting to their congregation a message from Carter Glass, Secretary of the Treasury, supplementing the appeal for the nationwide observance of thrift as a national habit. The Secretary's message will be read and a personal appeal made by thousands of ministers for the advancement of the work which the fiscal representatives of the Government have undertaken to perpetuate the principles of wise saving and sane spending.

A special message from Secretary Glass designated today as Thrift Sunday and requested ministers to coo-perate with the Savings Division of the Treasury Department in its efforts to widen the scope and influence of the Government's permanent saving policy.

THINKS TRACTION CONTRACTS UNFAIR

Commissioner Nixon Says Interborough and B. R. T. Have Best of Bargain.

HAS CHANGES TO PROPOSE

Believes City Should Be Paid Before Some Other Obligations of the Lines.

How the city's interest compares with the interests of the Interborough and Brooklyn Rapid Transit companies in the dual contracts was explained yesterday by an expert of the Public Service Commission.

Public Service Commissioner Lewis Nixon and Transit Commissioner John H. Delaney agree that the companies have the best of the bargain, and that there should be a readjustment of the contracts before any increased fares should be granted. They say that the time to obtain amendments to the contracts is now, when the companies are seeking from the city help to increase their revenues.

The contracts provide that the Interborough Company shall receive a preferential of $6,335,000 a year, and that the preferential of the B. R. T. Company shall be $3,500,000. These stand sixth in a list of eleven items designating the manner in which the earnings of the companies operating the rapid transit lines shall be disposed of.

The first provision in the contract with the Interborough Company is that the company shall take all the receipts of lines in existence at the time, and of the new lines to be operated later, and shall use them for the following purposes:

To pay rentals on existing lines, taxes on the property used in operating the lines, operating expenses other than for maintenance, 12 per cent. a year as a fund to be set aside for maintenance exclusive of depreciation, 5 per cent. as a fund for depreciation for the first year and a sum for other years to be agreed upon by the contracting parties, a preferential of $6,335,000 a year, which was said to be the amount the company had been earning on railroads when the contract was made, and 6 per cent. on the amount contributed for the cost of construction and of equipment, which has now reached $58,000,000 and may reach $80,000,000, the limit allowed, was created.

The city is allowed 8.76 per cent. on part of the cost of constructing new lines to be paid for by the city, to offset the preferential, but this payment is not to be made until all the other claims are satisfied. There is also to be put aside 1 per cent. to create a separate fund to cover depreciation. After these payments are made, the city and the company are to divide evenly anything that is left.

The contract with the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company has similar provisions except that its preferential is $3,500,000 a year, the depreciation fund is to be agreed upon every year, the city is allowed the interest it has to pay on its bonds, and a 4 per cent. fund is to be set aside for depreciation.

Mr. Nixon wants the city to receive half of the net earnings before the preferentials, the 6 per cent. allowed for the cost of construction and equipment or the 1 per cent. for a depreciation fund are paid.

The intimation is that if the companies agree to these concessions the Commissioner will favor a just and reasonable fare increase when the companies prove they need it to provide adequate service through an economical and efficient administration of its affairs. Mr. Delaney wants the companies to agree to the concessions, but he has withheld what his position would be if the concession was agreed to. The inference is that he would adopt a position similar to that of Mr. Nixon.

MUST GIVE 'BLOCK TICKETS.'

P. S. C. to Investigate Complaint Against the Interborough.

A complaint was received yesterday by the Public Service Commission of the habit of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company in accepting fares from the public when trains are not operating. It was said that on Friday evening when local trains were held up money was taken from passengers, who were afterward unable to get it back or to receive "block tickets" enabling them to ride at some future time.

James B. Walker, Secretary of the commission, said that if the company refused to issue "block tickets" it had violated an order of the commission, which provides that after a block of fifteen minutes demands of those seeking tickets permitting them to ride another time should be granted.

"The company," he said, "has a very poor emergency system. When trains have ceased to run the company should cease selling tickets."

Chief Daggett of the commission's transit bureau was directed to make an investigation and to report to Commissioner Nixon. Some effort would be made, it was said, to compel the company to obey the orders of the commission and to protect the public from paying money to the company for services which cannot be given.

CUBA GIVES FLAG TO ROME.

Presentation to University Made by Dr. Bustamente, Peace Delegate.

ROME, June 20.—Dr. A. S. de Bustamente, head of the Cuban delegation to the Peace Conference, presented a Cuban flag to the University of Rome today. He was accompanied to the university by Antonio Martin Rivero, Cuban Minister to Italy, and the personnel of the Cuban Legation. Professor Alberto Tonelli, the rector of the university, and the Marquis Borsarelli, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, received the Cuban visitors at the university.

Dr. Bustamente, speaking in Italian, declared that Cuba was Latin in race and tradition, and had a feeling of veneration for Rome, the mother of Latin culture, adding:

"Cuba, my heroic country, is Latin in heart and blood and received as a blessing and has kept as a relic the glorious Italian banner presented by the students of the University of Rome to the University of Havana. The University of Havana has asked me to offer you as a symbol of its affection and admiration the banner of Cuba."

Professor Tonelli said Italy was proud of the sympathy shown by Cuba at the moment when Italy was still struggling to obtain satisfaction of her sacred claims.

Martinez Fraga, speaking in Italian, said he brought greetings from the students of the University of Havana. An Italian student, in the uniform of a Captain in the army and wearing decorations gained in fighting at the front, replied in Spanish.

Camp Dix Boxers to Stage Fight in Air; Meet in Tonneau of Bombing Plane

CAMP DIX, N. J., June 21.—A boxing bout in an airplane, probably the first fistic battle ever fought in the clouds, is planned by Government airmen as a thriller next week in the Air Service recruiting campaign, of which Camp Dix is the main centre. This unusual sporting event probably will be staged Wednesday, provided the New Jersey State Boxing Commission offers no objection. Although it is a question whether the Commissioners have jurisdiction in the air, the airmen, out of courtesy, will seek an official permit.

Lieutenant John S. Donaldson of the 1st American Pursuit Squadron in France, whose air-circus exploits have amazed thousands of soldiers and visitors at Camp Dix in the last fortnight, threw his hat into the ring for the novel bout last week. The challenge was met the following day by Lieutenant Leroy M. Wightman, formerly an officer in a "Lightning Division" machine-gun battalion and now in the Air Service.

The boxers will be belted into a ring formed by removing the seats in the tonneau of a Curtiss bombing plane, so that there will be no danger of the loser being knocked "down and out." The flying arena will be driven by Sergeant John Morse. If other planes can be obtained, the referee and timers will sail alongside, to judge points made in the sparring. Otherwise they will keep tabs on the boxers through field glasses.

Donaldson at first proposed to stage the bout on the wing of a big plane while flying, but it was decided that the difficulty of counterbalance, to keep the plane righted, presented too great a problem and that the tonneau would be more satisfactory.

BUREAU FINDS JOBS FOR 5,000 SOLDIERS

Re-employment Organization Gets Funds to Continue Its Work Until Sept. 1.

PROFESSIONAL MEN PLACED

Places for High-Salaried Specialists Filled—Catholic Service Expands.

Nearly 5,000 discharged men have been placed in jobs by the Re-employment Bureau of New York City for Soldiers, Sailors, and Marines, 505 Pearl Street, since it opened April 23, according to a report issued yesterday by Major Warren Bigelow, who is director of the work.

It was announced that this record in less than two months has persuaded the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., K. of C., National Catholic War Council, Salvation Army, War Camp Community Service, and Jewish Welfare Board, which, under the auspices of the Merchants' Association, have supported it, to pledge financial aid until Sept. 1. The summary of the work shows that in all 11,137 ex-service men have applied for jobs at the bureau. These include men from every arm and rank of the service.

Among the highly qualified men, many of them accustomed to high-salaried posts of responsibility, who have been placed by the professional division are lawyers, traffic managers, civil and mining engineers, accountants, claim adjusters, and sales managers. Salaries received by them from jobs obtained through the bureau have ranged upward to $7,000 and $8,000 a year. Other men who have secured good posts are high-class sales managers, certified public accountants at $4,000 and $5,000 a year; production managers of factories, $3,500 a year and up; machinery designers, railway equipment men, $5,000 a year; steam engineer, $6,000 a year; X-ray men from the Medical Corps, and dozens of others.

Among the 4,801 men who hve reported back to the bureau are 782 office clerks, 415 shipping and stock clerks and packers, 358 chauffeurs and auto truck drivers, 315 salesmen, 208 bookkeepers, accountants, and cashiers; 212 stenographers and typists, 188 welders and cutters, 174 watchmen, janitors, and guards; 101 apprentices, all trades; 89 machine hands and specialists, 86 machinists, tool and die makers; 86 electricians, 68 auto mechanics and garage workers, 48 pipefitters and plumbers, 49 trainmen, dispatchers, and engine men; 39 carpenters, 29 boot and shoe workers, 37 firemen and oilers, 49 shipbuilding laborers, 29 printers and pressmen, 28 elevator operators, 19 chefs and cooks, 18 painters and paperhangers, 8 blacksmiths and boilermakers, 14 polishers and buffers, 9 cabinetmakers, 5 engineers, 6 textile workers, 18 bakers, 4 millwrights, and 513 common laborers.

Efforts of the Bureau of Re-employment of the National Catholic War Council will be directed toward the solution of the soldier re-employment question by Oct. 1, it was announced yesterday by William J. Carey, who has just been made Assistant National Director of the bureau in charge of the territory east of Chicago. He has offices at 1,457 Broadway. Mr. Carey is a Rochester attorney, and has been State organizer of the National Catholic War Council. The territory west of Chicago will continue to be looked after by National Director P. J. Hanley, who has headquarters in Portland, Ore.

Since his appointment Mr. Carey has visited several cities, and he reports excellent results being achieved by the bureau. Mr. Carey emphasized the fact that the work of the bureau is entirely nonsectarian, and help is given to all former service men regardless of nationality, color, or creed.

ROCHETTE AGAIN ON TRIAL.

Alleged French Swindler Served in War Under Assumed Name.

PARIS, June 20.—Henri Rochette, banker and promoter, who was convicted of swindling before the war and who disappeared while the case was on appeal, only to return to France and serve under an assumed name in an automobile section, was brought before the Criminal Court again today on the charge of abuse of confidence in connection with the issue of 8,000,000 francs in bonds of the Central Mexican Railroad in 1910.

Rochette throws the responsibility on his associate, M. Carbonneau, now dead, who, he says, sent part of the funds realized from the sale of the bonds to a Mexican named Madero, who used them for revolutionary propaganda in that country.

Rochette was arrested in 1908, charged with wholesale swindling in connection with bucket shops, it being alleged that more than $20,000,000 was involved in the case. He was later released on bail, and remained at liberty until 1912, when he disappeared. He was located in Mexico City subsequently, and occupied a position close to Francisco Madero, then President of Mexico.

The French Government demanded his extradition, but he disappeared, to return to Europe, where he took refuge in Switzerland. In October, 1916, he was found in an automobile section of the French army and placed under arrest. He had served since the first of the war under the name of Georges Bienaimee.

In 1912 the charges were made that Government officials had been interested in protecting Rochette following his release on bail. A parliamentary committee investigated and reported that there had been "Government intervention" in the case. In 1914, when Gaston Calmette, editor of the Paris Figaro, was shot and killed by the wife of M. Caillaux, former Minister of Finance, the case was revived. The shooting was the result of violent attacks made upon M. Caillaux in the Figaro, among the charges made against the former Minister being that he had been connected with Rochette's operations.

LACK MICE TO USE IN CANCER STUDY

Dr. Wood of Columbia Reports Shortage Because Armies Needed Them.

HELD UP RESEARCH WORK

War's Absorption of Scientists Who Entered Service Also Retarded Investigations in Disease.

Study of cancer during the war was impeded, not only by taking physicians from research work but because of the shortage of mice, which were used in large quantities with the allied armies for the detection of gas and the diagnoses of certain types of disease, according to the report of Dr. Francis Carter Wood, Director of the George Crocker Special Research Fund of Columbia University.

Thousands of mice which had been raised for research work were turned over to the Government. The mice breathe very rapidly and are far more sensitive to gases than human beings, so that they were kept in exposed sectors and observed closely, because their behavior would indicate the coming of gas long before it could be detected by human beings. It was also announced that mice had been sent out on board every submarine, for the same purpose.

One of the most common troubles on submarines has been from chlorine, due to wet batteries. The mice react to the gas long before it is dangerous, or even perceptible, to the crew, thus enabling them to find the difficulty and repair it before the air becomes so tainted as to be dangerous. In the British Army hundreds of canaries were used, as well as mice, for the detection of gas. In addition to supplying thousands of mice to the Government, the George Crocker Special Research Fund raised enough, however, to supply many medical schools and research laboratories throughout the country.

The other use of mice in the war was in discriminating between the various types of pnuemonia prevalent at different times. Different types of the disease are treated differently, but it is often found impossible to discriminate between the different classes of symptoms in men. When mice were inoculated with the germs, however, effects were produced which readily classified the disease.

Dr. Wood reported that various changes in cancer statistics has resulted during the war, especially in England, where large classes of the population had been sent to the war, but that a careful analysis of the figures showed that the changes were mainly due to dislocation of classes of population, not to any remarkable increase or decrease in the disease itself.

As cancer is most prevalent in persons over the military age, the proportion of deaths from this cause naturally jumped, where the proportion of men of younger ages was reduced. In this country, likewise, the records were found to show that cancer was most prevalent in Vermont and least so in Utah and Montana, but this was explained as being due to the fact that a large percentage of the youth of Vermont had migrated and that a large proportion of the population in the Western States was composed of new comers, generally young men and women.

Among countries, cancer mortality was greater in Switzerland, and was highest generally where the highest civilization was found. Dr. Wood supposes this to be due, not to any connection between cancer and a high state of civilization, but to the fact that cancer is less often diagnosed and reported as the cause of death in countries like Russia.

HOSPITAL MEMORIAL FUND.

Citizens Raise $100,000 for Two Queens Institutions.

In less than a week Jamaica and eleven other communities in the Fourth Ward of Queens have raised more than $100,000 toward a fund to provide Jamaica and St. Mary's Hospitals with additional buildings to be dedicated to the soldiers, sailors, and marines from the district who died in the war.

"Every community," declared Father Duffy, "is attempting to do something to honor the boys who gave their all in the great cause for which we fought. The citizens of the Fourth Ward have determined on a most practical memorial to their boys in two new hospital buildings. Their objective is a large sum of money. It is all needed by the Jamaica and St. Mary's Hospitals, whose work is familiar to the residents of New York. I could appeal to you for no worthier charity."

Fifteen hundred workers, men, women, and children, are co-operating with the Memorial Hospital Campaign Committee.

TO TEST PORTO RICAN TAX.

Business Interests Contend That New Special Levies Are Excessive.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, June 30.—Business interests have initiated a movement to test the legality of the recently enacted excise law, unless the Legislature should repeal the low or modify its terms when it reconvenes on June 30. The leaders of the movement have declared the taxes excessive. The law provides for taxes of 10 per cent. ad valorem on automobiles, accessories, phonographs, records, and cameras; 35 per cent. on jewelry, and 2 cents a foot on motion picture films.

The direct appropriations of the Legislature and authorized bond issues total $17,500,000.

BORDER SKIRMISH SPEEDS RECRUITING

Possibility of Active Service Causes Many to Enlist in Cavalry Arm.

CALL ISSUED FOR 10,000

Officers of the Army Recruiting Service in this city announced yesterday that men who wished to enlist in the army also could choose their branch of service on the Mexican border as members of the increased border station and patrol force now being assembled. Of the 25,000 new soldiers who are desired for service on the border, 10,000 are to be in the cavalry arm, and recruiting officers intend to put forth their best efforts to make up this contingent as soon as possible, because mounted soldiers are most important in the Mexican service.

"The great influx of applicants for the cavalry which has marked the recruiting drive for the last few days is directly tracable to the Mexican situation," said one of the bulletins of the Recruiting Service, issued yesterday. "Cavalry today seems to mean active service, and every regiment of the mounted forces in the entire army is now stationed at a point where action may be seen at any moment. There are eleven regiments of cavalry now on the border, all the cavalry now in this country."

Advantages of Cavalry.

"Recruits are making no mistake in joining the mounted service," said Colonel J. T. Conrad of the Army Recruiting Service, who holds his commission in the cavalry arm. "They will have an active, healthy life at all times. They need have no fear that cavalry can be replaced by any other medium of defense or attack. It is true that there was little opportunity for the use of cavalry in the later stages of the great war and the maintenance by Great Britain and France of large forces of cavalry in Europe made the introduction of American cavalry unnecessary. Ordinarily, it would be impossible for any force to maintain a continuous line flanked by the sea and impassable mountains and not render cavalry almost useless.

An outline of the advantages of the cavalry arm for the recruit, prepared by Lieut. Col. Isaac S. Martin, assistant commandant of the mounted service school at Fort Riley, also was given out by the Recruiting Service. Colonel Martin said that a good cavalryman was never lonesome, and that no man who did not like horses should choose the cavalry arm.

"Cavalry is a branch of the service that depends almost entirely on the successful care and management of the horse in conjunction with the effective military training of the men," said Colonel Martin. "For this reason a recruit for the cavalry should be a man who loves horses. It is not necessary that he know how to handle horses. That can be taught him. But he should feel that he would enjoy work and association with horses both under normal and adventurous conditions.

"There is no hard and fast rule that can be set down as inevitably bringing success in the handling of a horse, and that is one of the things that makes the cavalry so interesting. Horses are like children. They must be studied. Of course, cavalry horses are alike in one respect, and that is that each cavalryman has the best horse in the army while he is that particular cavalryman's mount. If a man has not the disposition to share his horse's labors, as well as his pleasures, he has no place in the cavalry.

Need Good Horsemen.

"Real horsemen in the United States are decreasing in number. For the sake of the country this condition should not be permitted to continue. The cavalry is doing its best to keep the horse in his proper and important place in the nation's life. Men who join the cavalry have an opportunity to learn everything there is to know about horses. They can learn about breeds and breeding, conditioning and training, inspecting and selecting, and finally, performance.

"Schools are maintained for the cavalryman in every post where cavalry troops are stationed. The Mounted Service School at Fort Riley, Kan., also conducts a school in swordsmanship for noncommissioned officers. Other schools to which cavalrymen are frequently sent are the Saddlers' School at Rock Island Arsenal and the Farriers and Horseshoers' School at Fort Riley. The instructors at the former school are skillful harnessmakers and experts in their trade. The men sent there usually have no knowledge of that trade, and are taught to repair and make any horse equipment or harness. At the Farriers' School the men get training which is hard to find anywhere outside the army. A soldier who has completed the course is sure of a paying occupation in civil life."

Anxious to Build Up.

"Old cavalry officers who chased Indians for so many years and took part in so many campaigns do not approve of the comparatively silent part taken by their arm in the war," said one of the recruiting officers, "and they are anxious now to see every regiment filled up so that their branch may be prepared for any possible call for service."

Recruiting officers here reported yesterday that for the last two days more than two-thirds of the applications for enlistment in the army in the metropolitan district had come from men on the east side. The offers of education in useful trades, as well as the opportunity to qualify for citizenship, are given as the cause for the spurt in recruiting there.

"The fact that a lack of knowledge of English is no longer an obstacle to enlistment has opened the way for a large number of foreigners who have been barred from the army until recently," said the Recruiting Service bulletin. "The foreign language papers have dwelt enthusiastically on the opportunities offered by the army and have described the school for illiterates now being conducted at Camp Upton."

On Friday seventy men applied for enlistment at the east side stations, and twenty-one were accepted. On the west side twenty-nine were accepted out of forty-seven applications; in Brooklyn only twenty applied and only five were accepted; and in Jersey City six were accepted out of twenty-four who wished to enlist. In the five days ended on June 20, the Motor Transport Corps led in the total enlistments in this district, having crowded out the infantry with eighty-two recruits. The infantry, the arm that usually leads in the totals, enlisted seventy-seven men.

Recruiting officers see in all the totals the effect of the promises to give each recruit training in some useful trade. The opportunities of air service attracted fifty-three in the five days, and Engineers Corps attracted fourteen. Possibility of active service caused forty-three to enlist in the cavalry. Totals in all the other arms were comparatively small.

It was announced yesterday that the recruiting service would carry its campaign to the open air this week. A meeting will be held tomorrow at noon at 149th Street and Third Avenue, in the Bronx, and meetings probably will be held daily in other parts of the city.

WOOD FEARS WEDGE AGAINST OUR ALLIES

Says the Enemy Will Try to Split Off England, Italy, and France by Propaganda.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., June 21.—A victory rally was the chief gathering of sons of Wesleyan University on this alumni day in the commencement program. A speaker was Major Gen. Leonard Wood, who discussed some of the problems which follow the war. Of international relations, General Wood said:

"Let no one arise to drive a wedge between us and our allies. Strong propaganda will eventually be brought to bear upon our people with a view to driving that wedge, especially between ourselves on the one side and England, Italy, and France on the other. The enemy does not want an enduring understanding between us. If he can only break up the fine relations which now exist his prospects for the future will be brighter. If he can separate us and sow discord and hate he may yet win the war."

Of immigration, the speaker said we should turn our faces against those who come to us with ideas repugnant to our civilization and with purposes and ideals hostile to our Government. We must look forward to a sound system of national preparedness, not for war, but as an assurance against war.

SAVES TRAIN FROM BANDITS.

Safety Chain Helps Engineer and Holdup Men Are Routed.

CINCINNATI, June 21.—A nervy engineer on Baltimore & Ohio train No. 57, Detroit to Cincinnati, foiled an attempted train robbery near Lima, Ohio, early today, as well as prevented what appeared sure to be a bad wreck, if he had obeyed the orders of the holdup men, according to statements of train crew and passengers on their arrival here this morning.

The train was preparing to take a siding near Lima to allow Train 58, Cincinnati to Detroit, to pass. Four men, who were in hiding, crept out and uncoupled the train from the locomotive. But the holdup men failed to notice the safety chain. They demanded that the engineer to pull his engine away from there. The engineer refused, but did put on steam enough to give the train a jerk, the safety chain standing the pull. The train crew, knowing that No. 58 had not passed, rushed out of the train when it began to move, and drove off the bandits with revolvers.

The express car was directly behind the engine, and would probably have been looted. If the engine had continued to pull it would have been directly in the way of No. 58, which came through not five minutes after the bandits had disappeared into the woods.

DEWEY TO STAY IN CHINA.

Columbia Professor to Help Build Up Educational System.

Professor John Dewey of Columbia University in a letter received at the university yesterday tells of the growing influence of American universities in China. Professor Dewey, who has received an additional leave of absence of one year from Columbia, describes his journey through Japan, where he addressed large audiences at the Imperial Universities in Tokio and Kioto. He also spoke to teachers in Chinese cities. Everywhere he notes signs of an intellectual and educational awakening.

Professor Dewey says he is eager to take up the work of helping upbuild the educational system in China, which he was asked to do by the Chinese Government. In his letter he says Chinese educators feel the present is a critical time in Chinese education, and American aid is more necessary now than at any time for a long period.

After spending the last academic year lecturing at California, Professor Dewey went to the East to acquaint himself with conditions there. While he was in Japan officials of the Chinese Government sought his services.

METHODISTS GIVE BIG PLAY.

"The Wayfarer" Marks Opening of Centenary Exposition at Columbus.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 21.—Marking the beginning of a new era in modern church policy, a capacity audience here last night witnessed the premier performance of "The Wayfarer," a gigantic dramatic spectacle representing the triumph of Christianity through the ages, in connection with the opening of the Methodist centenary celebration. The huge Coliseum at the State Fair grounds has been transformed into a theatre for the centenary, and, with what is said to be the largest stage in the country, gives ample room for the more than 2,500 persons in the cast. The drama, suggested by the music of Handel's oratorio, "The Messiah," was accompanied by a chorus of 1,000 voices, the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra of seventy-five members, and a mammoth pipe organ.

More than 30,000 people were estimated to have attended the opening day of the exposition, which celebrates the one-hundredth anniversary of the founding of Methodist missionary endeavor. Eight buildings, filled with exhibits from every country under the sun, were packed all day. During both afternoon and evening a magnificent display of fireworks entertained the visiting thousands in the outdoor amphitheatre, which has a seating capacity for 25,000 people. The gates of the exposition were opened at noon by a message from Acting Secretary of State Frank L. Polk, at Washington.

All exhibits will be closed Sunday, but eminent Methodist divines will conduct religious services on the exposition grounds.

PLEA FOR POOR NEIGHBORS.

United Neighborhood Houses Urges Thought of Summer Suffering.

"Give a thought to your neighbors," says the United Neighborhood Houses of New York in an appeal issued yesterday. "The coming Summer," says the statement, "will cause the usual suffering to the people living in the poorer districts of the city.

"In the hot weather the effects of overcrowding and unsanitary living conditions are most severe. Infantile mortality will increase and the imminent ice shortage is likely to cause added misery. Those who live in more favorable conditions are asked to give a thought to their less fortunate neighbors. That this thought will be converted into action is the hope of the United Neighborhood Houses."

An urgent need for volunteer workers to take children on day excursions in the country is seen. Men and women who can volunteer a few hours a week for this or other service are asked to send in their names to the United Neighborhood Houses, 27 Barrow Street. Those who cannot help with their personal service are asked to help by giving financial assistance to the Neighborhood Houses.

URGES WAR WORK UNDER ONE HEAD

Fosdick Advocates Letting the Government Direct Social Activities Among Soldiers.

SECTARIAN BASIS WRONG

Report Praises Efforts of Six Organizations with Army in France.

ESPECIALLY LAUDS WOMEN

Says Criticism of Y. M. C. A. Is Largely Unjustified—Some Mistakes in Personnel.

Raymond B. Fosdick, Chairman of the Government's Commission on Training Camp Activities, who recently has returned from an extended tour of the American camps and stations in France and Germany, has submitted a report to Secretary of War Baker in the course of which reference is made to the work of the war work organizations that operated with the land forces in Europe. In his report Mr. Fosdick says:

"Of the seven organizations that joined in the united war work campaign for the $170,000,000 fund last Fall, six are working with the troops in France—the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the National Catholic War Council, (Knights of Columbus;) the Jewish Welfare Board, the Salvation Army, and the American Library Association. The other organization, the War Camp Community Service, is not represented, as it would be impossible to develop its specialized line of work in France.

"These organizations have been working directly under the administration section of General Pershing's Staff. Added to the tremendous project of education, athletics, and entertainment which the army itself is conducting, the work of these societies helps to form what is probably the largest and most comprehensive leisure-time program ever undertaken. The effect of this work upon the future citizenship of the United States is incalculable.

"Of the six organizations, the Y. M. C. A. is the largest. Its budget constitutes 58 per cent. of the money collected last Fall. It has received a good deal of criticism from the soldiers. Some of this is merited; much of it is due, I believe, to misunderstanding. Probably the bulk of the criticism arises from the operation by the Y. M. C. A. of the army canteens. Personally I believe it was a mistake for the Y. M. C. A. to go into this business. The canteen has been an army perquisite by which company funds were increased, and the soldiers could not understand why it should be handed over to a private society which was raising millions at home for support.

"Moreover, the personnel of the Y. M. C. A. was untrained for this kind of work. In the minds of the soldiers it became a commercial organization, and from this stigma it has never succeeded in freeing itself. It must be remembered that the Y. M. C. A. undertook this work as a service to the army command. The charge that it made money out of the canteen is erroneous.

Praises Y. M. C. A. Women.

"Another ground for criticism may be found in the character of its personnel. While many of the men were excellently qualified, many others were utterly unadapted to the work, and had no common ground in mixing with our virile red-blooded young soldiers. The Y. M. C. A. women in France were of an exceptionally high order, far better adapted on the average than the men. The Y. M. C. A. has 2,500 young women serving with the troops. Their work is beyond praise. The Y. M. C. A. had the entire womanhood of America to draw from, whereas the best material among the men was in the army.

"In discussing these criticisms one must not forget the enormous volume of creditable work which it has carried on. Its huts are to be found with nearly every unit of troops in the A. E. F. Its athletic department, its widespread entertainment facilities, its admirable organization of the leave areas, the work which it did in forming the educational machinery of the army, are all on the credit side of the balance, and at General Headquarters I found the liveliest gratitude for the Y. M. C. A.

"The work of the Y. W. C. A. covers two general fields: Providing proper accommodations for women employed both by the army and the welfare societies, and providing rest and recreation rooms for French women in war industries. The work of this society is of an exceptionally high character, and its willingness to accept responsibility, together with its imagination in discovering and its ingenuity in meeting the real needs among women workers, have had gratifying results.

"The Knights of Columbus is carrying on work largely similar in plan to that of the Y. M. C. A. It has a substantial number of huts and recreation halls, and it has done good work. It has done much to stimulate the interest of the army in boxing and is taking generally a prominent part in the interallied games at Pershing Stadium, near Paris. A legitimate criticism would be that the amount of its work in France is not as large as the size of its allotment in last Fall's campaign would seem to suggest.

"The Knights were late in starting and they have never overcome that handicap. Moreover, I believe they are losing a real opportunity through failure to employ women personnel. I am convinced that the average woman worker attached to a hut is worth four or five men workers. Certainly her effect on the morale and spirit of the troops is extraordinary. An "honest-to-God American girl," as the soldiers call her, can do more to keep the men cheerful and create an atmosphere of home than any other factor, and the work of our women in France has been in no small degree responsible for the unflagging devotion and inexhaustible patience with which our troops carried forward their high enterprise.

The work of the Special Committee of the National Catholic War Council which corresponds somewhat roughly to the Y. W. C. A., is being conducted in Paris with marked success. The institution which this committee is conducting in Avenue Wagram in Paris is perhaps one of the most interesting and significant pieces of work in the city.

Favors Unification of Work.

The Jewish Welfare Board is admirable in every respect, and is working under able leadership. Its buildings serve all troops regardless of faith, and I was interested to note in a trip to the Le Mans area how widely its facilities were employed by Jew and Gentile alike.

The Salvation Army is easily the most popular of the six organizations. The work of this organization is much smaller than most people think. Where the Y. M. C. A. has 6,000 representatives in France, and the Knights of Columbus 800, the Salvation Army has less than 200. Its fame has spread far beyond its work, and it is difficult to find a doughboy who does not speak its praise. Contrary to general belief, it does not give supplies away free except in cases of need. Its policy is to sell its canteen supplies—even its famed doughnuts. It is the inherent spirit of service that has endeared this organization to the doughboy. Its personnel has been carefully selected from trained workers in the Salvation Army, and no task has been too humble, and no service too small for them to perform.

The American Library Association, with its ample supply of books, has worked largely through the other organizations, although, through its mail service, it has sent thousands of books to individual soldiers upon request. No matter how isolated a soldier might be he could have books for the asking.

"I have come increasingly to the belief, in two years of intimate association with this work, that the sectarian basis underlying much of it is fundamentally wrong. None of the societies works exclusively for its own constituency, but the auspices through which privileges are extended are sectarian. The tendency of this arrangement is to stimulate rivalries. To see the representatives of these agencies vying in an attempt to make a last good impression upon returning troops is to despair of the whole system of social work in the war.

"To have Protestant huts, Catholic huts, and Jewish huts in the same camp or operating in the same area is wrong in principle and represents a waste of overhead and a duplication of personnel. No one resents this more than the troops themselves. A baseball is a baseball to the soldiers no matter whether it is presented by the Y. M. C. A., the Knights of Columbus or the Jewish Welfare Board. The same is true of huts, chocolate, entertainment, stationery, or good advice.

"If we ever have another war, I believe far better results will be obtained by eliminating religious stratification of the sort just mentioned and by reducing to the lowest possible minimum the number of organizations working directly with the troops. There is no reason why a single non-sectarian organization in this war should not have handled the whole problem of recreation for the army.

"I believe we have reached a point in the development of much of this social work. The successful experience of the army officers at home and in France in handling complex entertainment and educational programs justifies this belief."

HAVE PICTURE RECORD OF ATLANTIC FLIGHT

Complete Story of Voyages of Three Seaplanes Prepared for Naval Archives.

One of the unique and interesting features of the navy's recent transatlantic flight is the compilation for the historical archives of the Navy Department of a complete pictorial record of the flight, including drawings, sketches, photographs, motion pictures and oil paintings. This record will show the construction and trace the development of the NC type of planes in which the flight was made, besides depicting actual scenes of the preparations for the flight and its progress across the ocean.

Navy photographers have photographed every interesting phase of the preparations and the trial flights at Rockaway Beach. Later, when the course had been selected, other photographers were sent to Halifax, N. S.; Trepassy, N. F.; Ponta Delgada, Azores; Lisbon, Portugal, and Plymouth, England, where landing stations and bases had been established. Several thousand feet of motion picture film and several hundred photographs were taken at these stations, and from these a careful selection will be made for the department's permanent pictorial record.

The task of making a pictorial record on canvas was intrusted to Lieutenant C. E. Ruttan, U. S. N. R., of New York, who was designated by the Navy Department as the official artist for the flight. He was temporarily assigned to the U. S. S. Melville, which acted as a supply and repair ship for the seaplanes at Ponta Delgada. Lieutenant Ruttan, who is a qualified pilot, brought to the work a long and valuable experience obtained in painting naval aviation pictures on the western front.

During the three weeks the Melville was stationed at Ponta Delgada, Lieutenant Ruttan made nearly a dozen sketches in oil, illustrating the most interesting and exciting scenes of the flight. One sketch shows the arrival of the NC-4 at Ponta Delgada, with cheering crowds lining the beach and all ships in the harbor outlined in bunting and flags. Another shows the arrival of the damaged seaplane NC-3, which motored into port under her own power after being adrift for fifty-three hours. Two of the pictures illustrate planes passing a destroyer station ship. The first, a day view, shows the plane flying above storm clouds and the destroyer tossing about in a rough sea. The other, a night view, shows the plane silhouetted against the moon and the destroyer aglow with lights and her searchlights piercing the darkness. Another sketch represents the crew of the NC-1 being rescued by the Greek steamer Ionia. Others picture exciting incidents during the periods that the NC-1 and NC-3 were adrift in the rough seas.

The artist contemplates painting a panoramic view of Ponta Delgada harbor at the time of the NC-4's arrival for a frieze in the building or section of the Navy Department to be devoted to aeronautics. It is probable that the pictures will be placed on exhibition within a short time and later assigned a permanent place in the Navy Department Building in Washington.

British Knight Late Col. Bacon.

The late Colonel Robert Bacon, former Secretary of State and Ambassador to France, who died on May 29, was made Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George by the British Government. The Order was conferred upon Colonel Bacon for his services while attached to General Pershing's staff. The Order was received at his home on Thursday.

TELLS OF ITS WORK IN RECONSTRUCTION

AN AMERICANIZATION PLAN

The New York State Reconstruction Commission issued yesterday a report of the work it has done during the four months which have elapsed since its appointment by Governor Smith to solve some of the problems attending the readjustments from war to peace conditions. While the chief of its activities has been the study of the housing problem in which it has made studies and recommendations, other problems have been under investigation and reported upon to the Governor, while still others are being studied but are not yet developed to the point where definite recommendations can be made. Two recommendations which were acted upon by the State Legislature were the proposal that the Legislature provide an emergency appropriation of $50,000 for the State Employment Service for the next fiscal year because of the cutting down of Federal funds for this purpose, and the suggestion that the Legislature provide a sum sufficient to carry on employment work for eight months looking toward a subsidy from the Federal Government on a "dollar for dollar" basis for the State service during the next year, with the idea that Federal agencies should be used as a clearing house and standardizing medium only.

Public health bills and changes in the military training law were introduced at the instance of the commission, but failed of passage.

During the four months of its existence the commission has held eleven meetings of its full membership at various points in the State. At these meetings the subjects discussed were taxes, unemployment, and demobilization, daylight saving, public works, housing, land reclamation, military training for boys under 19, Americanization, health insurance and the vehicular tunnel between New York and New Jersey. Reports have been sent to the Governor on unemployment, health insurance, military training, Americanization, business readjustment and retrenchment, the vehicular tunnel, and on housing.

The Committee on Education held nine public hearings on the question of technical military training for boys under 19 and questionnaires were sent throughout the State to Chambers of Commerce, to commercial organizations, schools, welfare societies, labor organizations, and also to army and navy organizations, and to representative individuals interested in military affairs or in education.

The consensus as shown at the hearings and in the answers to the questionnaire, was overwhelmingly opposed to technical military training for the boy citizen under 19.

In view of these facts the commission made certain definite recommendations to the Governor in regard to the matter of such military training. In the first place, it was recommended that the functions and budget of the Military Training Commission be transferred to the State Department of Education, on the ground that technical military training for boys of this age is not the most effective method for developing the future citizen. In the second place, it was recommended that any features of military training which might continue to be used should be employed solely for such values as they might have for the physical, mental, and moral development of the boy or girl citizen. In the third place, the commission recommended that health instruction and all-around physical development, including supervised games, should receive the greatest possible attention in the schools of the State, and that appropriations to this end should be generously furnished.

After a study of the housing problem the commission made the following recommendations to the Governor, which at the special session last Monday were embodied in a memorial to Congress to act:

"1. Exempt from Federal income tax mortgages upon real property not used in the operation of public utilities and participations in such mortgages and bonds secured by mortgage or deed of trust upon such real property. Such exemption to be to an extent not greater than, say, $40,000 of principal in the hands of each taxable person. This would enable large loaning organizations to attract investors of moderate means to the purchase of mortgages. At present the net returns from mortgages, due to the Federal income tax, are so small that money cannot be attracted to these investments. Even large loaning institutions are investing in other securities rather than loaning money on mortgage.

"2. Exempt from Federal income taxation bonds of the Land Bank of the State of New York and similar institutions in other States. The bonds of the State Land Bank, which could be made an important source of financing for building and loan associations, are now subject to Federal income tax, and it is therefore impossible to sell these bonds at the present time, since the fact that they are subject to tax makes them unattractive as an investment, compared with Federal and other State and city bonds which are free from all taxation. If we are to relieve the situation of the small house owner, the Federal income tax should be removed at once from the bonds of the State Land Bank.

"Not only New York City, but the entire State faces a serious housing shortage, and our commerce and industry will suffer unless permanent measures for relief are undertaken. We therefore would also recommend that you request the members of the Senate and Congress from the State of New York to do all in their power to initiate and carry through legislation with this end in view.

"We would suggest that Chambers of Commerce and banking and loaning institutions of every kind throughout the State be asked to name committees to join in this request made by you."

Another study of the Committee on Education was concerned with the problem of Americanization, and led to the following conclusions:

"We recommend the enactment of a bill establishing continuation schools for boys and girls at work under 18 years. In such continuation schools instruction in the English language and at least in the elements of American history would be included. All of those at present illiterate under 18 years of age would thereby be reached.

"There is at present a law on the statute books attempting to attain the same means by imposing a fine for the employment of illiterate minors under 18 years of age. But this law is not generally enforced or enforceable. A law establishing continuation schools for all minors whether illiterate or not would not be open to the same objection.

"The committee recommends, finally, that lectures and stated courses in American institutions and ideals be authorized and developed more than they have been in the past. The foreign tongue, instead of being forbidden, should be allowed, and even encouraged, as a necessary provisional means of conveying the essential American point of view to the foreigners who intend to make their home with us."

In addition to the above recommendations the following was added by the Executive Committee as a substitute for a recommendation which was submitted by the Committee on Education:

"As for persons over 18 years of age who are unable to read and write the English language, some form of compulsion to acquire the language should be provided."

GOLD MOVES BOTH WAYS.

Situation Between England and America, However, Not Novel.

Movement of gold bullion from New York to London in the last few days, at the same time that agents of the Bank of England are shipping gold here, is not as unusual as it appears at first glance. That such shipment has been made, and may continue to be made, seems contrary to the usual movement of gold, which flows from one country to another when the exchange of the first is selling at a discount in the second, and has aroused comment, as sterling exchange is now at a 5 per cent. discount in this market. The United States Government has removed the embargo on the exportation of gold, and in spite of the contrary quality of the $300,000 or $400,000 shipments to London the movement is evidently gathering headway.

This sending of gold to the East is attributed to the inability of British goldsmiths to obtain adequate requirements from their home sources, as well as to the fact that when they have been able to buy gold at home for industrial purposes they have had to pay for their accommodation. It is reported that British jewelers have to pay £1 an ounce more for the metal when they are able to secure it.

This £1 payment extra cannot be called a premium, as gold is the standard of value in England, but it might be called a privilege. It means that the jewelers have been paying a privilege of almost 25 per cent. for the gold they have secured.

When our Government lifted the gold export embargo it offered a way out to the British arts. The jeweler in London could buy dollars here and take his loss in exchange, which would be 5 per cent., order the shipment of gold to the other side, and pay probably less than 1 per cent. for shipment and 1 per cent. for insurance, and be able to begin working the metal with a net loss to himself of 6 or 7 per cent. as compared with the 25 per cent. privilege he must pay in England for the same amount of metal.

The contrary movement of comparatively small amounts of gold from New York to London when other shipments of great magnitude are coming into this city to serve as a stiffener of sterling exchange is not new. There were similar shipments last in 1917, which were made to meet the same requirements.

BLAME FRENCH AGITATION.

Germans Print Alleged Order for Separatist Propaganda.

In the course of an article attributing the agitation in the Rhine Valley in favor of an independent republic to French propaganda, the Frankfurter Zeitung of May 18 printed what it said was the first part of an official army order issued by the French in the occupied territory. This document read as follows:

"VIII. Army, General Staff, 5th Bureau, 5th Section, No. 3,810.

"Q. G. A. March 16, 1919.

"Service Instruction.

"Instructions as to the attitude to be adopted by the officers and men of the occupation army of the Palatinate toward the population. (To be communicated down to the batallion staffs!)

"The conditions of the preliminary peace to be imposed upon Germany are now under discussion. The sections of these conditions which have to do with the boundaries of Germany will, doubtless, govern the fate of the territories on the left bank of the Rhine.

"Thus far our activities in the district of the Palatinate have been limited to conciliating the spirit of the population. I: seems timely to utilize present conditions for the purpose of going a step further.

"The events that have been occurring in Germany for some time have really made a deep impression upon the population of the left bank of the Rhine and have drawn it closer to us. It sees in our presence a guarantee against anarchy and a pledge for a better future. These people fear Bolshevism most of all, and they calculate that the troops of occupation are their best safeguard. Consequently there is the inclination toward separatism which manifests itself pretty generally all over the Palatinate. It is a matter now of exploiting this inclination by making the people of the left bank of the Rhine understand that it is to their material and moral interest to separate themselves from the right bank.

"For this purpose it is advisable first of all to relieve the inhabitants of all fear as to the future of their country by showing them that the Allies are not pursuing any annexation plans, but merely wish to forestall any fresh German attack through the occupation of the country. Therefore, it is to their interest as well as ours that the war doesn't break out again.

"The territories on the left bank of the Rhine will remain free, free to gr o themselves according to racial ties, according to historical laws or economic advantages; they will be free to manage and govern themselves.

"The great idea of liberty must above all else be placed in the right light. Political, professional, religious and commercial liberty, liberty of all kinds, guaranteed by the Allies, and especially by France. It always was the glorious rôle of France to carry liberty to the nations, and, everywhere her flag flies, to insure the reign of right and justice.

"It may be added that the Palatinate will be free of the military burdens, which will weigh down the other peoples more or less continuously; that the Palatinate will have an open highway to the sea via the Rhine; that the protection of their economic interests will be better assured through victorious France than through defeated Germany; that perhaps the burdens falling upon them through the German defeat may be lightened. * * *

"This propaganda must be carried on discreetly, i. e., without apparent intention, without display, through individual activity, especially with persons who are in possession of a certain amount of the public authority, (Deputies, Mayors, various administrators, heads of factories, members of the clergy, et al.) Regarding the Palatinate in particular, it may be understood that its boundaries, in accord with the desire of the population, may be extended beyond their present limits through the attaching of the provinces that used to belong to it.

"Two ideas must be absolutely opposed: 1. The formation of a unified or federated republic of the left bank of the Rhine. [The best way is to bring the inhabitants of the Palatinate into opposition to the Rhinelanders of the north.]"

The Frankfurter Zeitung said that it was not in possession of the rest of the alleged service order, but that enough had been given to show how the French occupying authorities were working for the dismemberment of Germany, and it went on to quote from a circular said to be in process of distribution in the Upper Rhenish City of Bergzabern, calling upon the citizens to sign a petition for annexation to France. The Frankfort paper also told how, at a session of the Armistice Commission held on April 30, General Nudant had assured the German delegates that France had nothing to do with any separatist agitation in the Palatinate. As reported in a special cable dispatch sent to THE NEW YORK TIMES on June 8 from Wiesbaden, the movement for a Rhineland republic headed by Dr. Dorten turned out to be a fizzle, largely because of the hostile attitude of the American and British authorities.

Resume Tennis in Toronto.

The first city tennis championship tournament to be held in Toronto, Can., since the war began got under way yesterday under the auspices of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association. Many of the soldier players are back on the Canadian courts again and the tournaments are beginning to take on their former significance. In the Toronto tournament a move in favor of the less experienced players has been taken with the division of the handicap events into two classes.

ADJUSTS 1,437 RENT DISPUTES IN WEEK

Mayor's Sub-Committee on Law Reports on Work in Housing Inquiry.

TENANTS WIN CONCESSIONS

Settlements with Landlords Generally Reached Upon a Basis of Yearly Leases.

Nathan Hirsch, Chairman of the Mayor's Committee on Taxation, Mortgage Loans, and Rent Profiteering, said yesterday that the committee, through its Sub-Committee on Law, of which Supreme Court Justice Robert L. Luce is Chairman, had settled 1,437 cases of rent disputes within the week. Of these 468 were in the Bronx, 486 in Manhattan, and 584 in Brooklyn. Settlements in every case, were concessions on the part of landlords and were on the lines of the yearly lease.

Here are some of the cases settled:

The H. S. Dewey, Inc., owners, 1,899 Monroe Avenue.—This case was settled some time ago. This week the company's representative changed his mind and procured dispossess warrants for six of his tenants. Each tenant's rent was increased $3 per month.

Joseph Jovans, property 66 Fort Washington Avenue.—Increased rents of all his tenants from $15 to $35 per month each. He agreed to a settlement by allowing $5 and $10 reductions in his demands to practically all of the forty-two tenants.

Sol Blum: Proerty, 15 West 116th Street, leases of house 61 East 103d Street.—Mr. Blum increased the rents $4 a month in November, $1 to January, $1 in May. The matter was adjusted by the tenants paying the last two increases, to begin Nov. 1 next. Thirty-two tenants.

I. Schultz: Lessee property 57-59 East 100th Street.—Raised rents in May 2. Tenants went on strike. The lessee agreed that the tenants should pay the old rent. Fifty-eight tenants.

H. J. Schum: Property 231 and 235 East 103d Street.—Rents raised from January to May $8 each. The owner agreed to take off the last raise, made in May, and dispossess the janitor. Fifty-eight tenants.

David Spain, Property 1482-1486 Pitkin Avenue, Brooklyn.—Accepted an increase of $1 from July 1 to Oct. 30, 1919, with an additional increase of $1 from Nov. 1 to June 30. Eighty-eight tenants.

H. Schulmann, Property 354-358-362-366-370 Cypress Avenue, Bronx.—The landlor in May raised the rentals, the first time in two years, $2, $3, $3.50, $4, $4.50, and $5. Thereupon the tenants went on a rent strike. Settled on the following basis: The $2 and $2.50 advances were cut to $1, the $3 and $3.50 advances were cut to $1.75, the $4, $4.50, and $5 were cut to $2. One hundred tenants.

Joseph J. Brown, Property 61 East 102d Street.—Demanded increase in May of $5. Settled by accepted $2.50. Twenty-four tenants.

Geller & Goldenberg: Lessees Property 59 Eagle Avenue—Raised rents $2.50 in May and asked another increase of $6 to take effect in June. Settled with tenants on basis of rental paid May 1. Twenty-five tenants.

Isaac Smith: Property 1,352, Forty-third Street, Borough Park—Asked $5 increase. Settled with tenants for $1 increase. Twelve tenants.

Dora Baraky: Property 360 Beekman Avenue—Raised tenants $5 from June 1. Settled by accepting one-half the raise demanded. Forty tenants.

Florence Newfield: Property $2 and 34 Glenmore Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.—Asked increase of $4; got a year's lease with $1 raise from June 1 to Oct. 30, and an additional $1 advance from Nov. 1, 1919, to May 31. Forty tenants.

Automatic Realty Company: Property 1,600-1,604-1,608 Madison Avenue, Manhattan—Asked raise from $8 to $9 per month. Settled by accepting $2 increase from June to Dec. 31, and an additional $1 from Jan. 1 to April 30, 1920. Seventy tenants.

Sadie Polotnick, 705 East Ninth Street.—Rents increased $3 to $8 each tenant. She agreed to an increase of $3 a month. Thirty-two tenants.

A. Sanderer, property 538-40 West 148th Street.—Rents raised from $7 to $12 a month; agreed to reduce his demand to $3 all through the house. Forty-five tenants.

Prompt Realty Company, property 639-647-647 East 138th Street.—Raised tenants $2, $3, and $4 a month. Settled by an increase of $1 from July 1 to Oct. 30, with an additional increase of 50 cents from then to May 31, 1920. Ninety tenants.

William Brandries: Property 559, 561, 563, 565, 567, 571, 573 Cleveland Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.—Those tenants went on strike for no apparent reason whatever. This landlord had not increased their rents within one year. The tenants demanded, however, a lease for one year from him from May 1, with no increase of rent, asking all manner of impossible things, threatened the life of the landlord and his family, and refused to pay rent until they had received their demands. The landlord, Mr. Brandries, thereupon procured dispossess notices for nonpayment of rent. The tenants then appealed to the Mayor's committee, and a settlement was effected as follows: Tenants to pay $1 per month increase, landlord to give them a year's lease, and to make all necessary repairs. One hundred tenants.

Goldmyr Realty Company: Property 522 West 112th Street.—Raised the rents from $10 to $15 in each case, to go into effect Oct. 1, and agreed to make extensive alterations. The landlord agreed to reduce the demands so that a profit of 6 per cent. on their investment could be made. Thirty-two tenants.

Philip Rubin: Property 615 Watkins Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.—Demanded $2 increase. Settled by giving tenants six months at the old rate and $1 advance for the last six months. Eighteen tenants.

David Buckner: Property 512-518 West 151st Street.—Raised tenants from $6 to $9 per month. Settled at one-half the amount demanded. Fifty-eight tenants.

Charles Kohler: Property 248 Wadsworth Avenue.—Raised the rents so they would average $10.50 a room. Settled with tenants on a basis of $9 a room. Forty tenants.

Yetta Kaufman: Property 579 Hopkinson Avenue, Brooklyn.—Asked $3 advance. Settled without any increase. Thirty-six tenants.

Silne Bakin: Property 196 Atkins Avenue, Brooklyn.—Asked $2 raise. Settled without any increase. Seventeen tenants.

Rose Fletcher, property 1,448-1,451 Hoe Avenue, Bronx. Asked increase of $4 a month. Settled on basis of $2 increase.

The Mayor's Committee took up yesterday the case of two brothers, who charge that while serving in the army in France they were personally deprived of their house and a younger brother and a sister sent to an orphan asylum. One of the brothers lost a leg in the Argonne Forest and the other was wounded in the St. Mihiel drive.

While they were in France their father, half owner of a house in Brooklyn, died, and a woman represented herself as executor of the estate and sold the furniture and collected rents. The brothers said this woman was no relation of theirs.

MOUNTAINEER NINE STRONG.

Only Three Defeats in Eighteen Games is West Virginia Record.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., June 21.—The West Virginia University baseball team has ended one of the most successful seasons a Mountaineer nine has ever had. Only one previous West Virginia team, in the thirty years one has been supported here, has had a higher percentage of victories, fourteen games being won, three lost and one tied. Conspicuous among the teams defeated were Cornell, Syracuse, Lafayette, and Washington and Jefferson. One of the three games lost was by two runs and each of the others by the margin of one run.

Dorsey, who played in ten games in right field, led the team at batting with a mark of .543. Captain Rodgers was next, with an average of .375, and Dawson hit for .315 in the standing. Rodgers led in stolen bases with ten and Dawson stole nine. Dawson led in extra base hits and Rodgers followed him.

In fielding Jack Latterner, the star hurler, had a perfect average in twelve games, and Bed Pride, the first baseman, had but two errors in 186 chances for an average of .988. He was closely followed by Martin and Rodgers.

In the pitching department it is worthy of note that no Mountaineer hurler was knocked from the box or relieved from a game after starting during the whole season. Lemley is credited with winning five games, losing one and tieing one. Latterner won eight, lost two and tied none, and Carden won one game, becoming ill and compelled to leave the team. Rodgers, Pride and Latterner have now finished their periods of service, but all others of this year's team will be back in 1920.

MANY STRANGERS HELPED.

Travelers' Aid Society Reports Much Activity Last Month.

According to a report made public yesterday, the Travelers' Aid Society gave assistance to 4,385 men, women, and children during the month of May. Of these 818 were married, 798 unmarried, 597 were children, 140 were under 16 years and were traveling alone, and 900 were between the ages of 16 and 20 years.

At steamship piers 552 strangers were cared for. These were helped to their destinations and in many cases were assisted in obtaining lodgings and food during their stay in the city. In addition, a corps of agents were always on duty at the railway stations, and 1,557 persons were cared for. As it is the work of the society to care for travelers of all nationalities, it was found that persons of thirty-six different nations and races were listed during the month.

The work of the society covers every need of the stranger in New York. There were 242 cases cared for during May when its agents were asked by out-of-town persons to meet and care for their friends or relatives who were to arrive here. The scope of this work has increased rapidly during the past five months. Since January, 1919, its agents have met 288 steamships, sent 604 telegrams, cared for and discharged 1,618 persons, met 992 by appointment, helped 402 men, served 2,093 meals, and has provided lodgings for 825 men, women, and children. Up to January the society has definitely assisted 139,149 persons.

Orphan House for Boys and Girls
463 Hawthorne Avenue, Yonkers.

Since its foundation—75 years ago—this charity has taken from the streets children bereft of parents, and has fed, clothed, and educated them and rendered them splendid citizens. Today the asylum seeks to extend its activities by the addition of farm work on its property at Tivoli-on-Hudson. Here are the facilities for fine national work.

TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS NEEDED

for equipment of farm buildings, purchase of stock and implements. The house at present cares for 285 children, and it is proposed to bring the number to 500.

To help the orphan is a sacred duty. Will generous Americans let slip an opportunity such as this?

BELGIAN WHO DARED, FAILED, AND DIED

Why Thielt Honors the Memory of Alois Van Keirsbilk, Called "The Silent."

PLANNED THE KAISER'S END

But a Change in Schedule Made the Air Raid Abortive and the Germans Discovered Who Told.

By ROBERT HANS.

"Alois Van Keirsbilk is to be buried tomorrow."

This was the message which on April 8 had spread like magic through the Belgian town of Thielt, and the people prepared in silence to pay their last tribute to their "hero martyr."

Alois van Keirsbilk was the idol of Thielt, for he was the man who "almost killed the Kaiser with hundreds of his mighty crowd" when the Kaiser visited the town in 1914, while it was the headquarters of the Duke of Württemberg, Chief of the Fourth German Army. Before that Alois had done many other big things in the war, in which his success had been complete, but he will always be known best to his fellow-men and to their children and grandchildren for the attempt in which he failed—" the almost killing" of the Kaiser. Now his remains were to be brought from Ghent, where back in 1914, with the bodies of three other men, they had been thrown into a ditch dug in haste after twelve German soldiers had riddled Alois with bullets. Thus the whole town would honor the memory of one of its sons whose name will be mentioned as long as the great war is spoken of, as that of a man who knew no fear and who, in the face of death, refused to involve in his own miserable fate those who were suspected with him.

Here is the story from the beginning, as it was whispered back in 1914 all along the electric cable of death bordering the Belgian frontier which all secrets had to pass to reach the outside world, though many had to be kept until the day of deliverance came. The secret of Alois Van Keirsbilk's work was one of the latter.

Thielt was the headquarters of the Fourth German Army and sheltered the Commander-in-Chief with a staff of hundreds of officers. Alois Van Keirsbilk was chief conductor on the railway between Thielt and Bruges. Also he was the chief of a secret organization which had only one object—"help to our boys and death to the enemy." The organization was in communication with the Belgian army through spies who made regular trips into Holland across the "cable of death," and many a German plan originated at headquarters in Thielt failed, thanks to the activity of Alois and his men.

It was not long before Alois saw his chance for a big stroke. The Kaiser was coming to Thielt on 11 first of November. A desperate attack was to be made against the Belgian forces along the Yser and from there on against Ypres and Dunkirk, and Wilhelm II. in person was to inspect the preparations.

Kill the Kaiser and the war will be over, was the firm conviction of Alois and his friends, and they set to work. Alois acquired all the information that his organization could procure as to the movements and schedule of the imperial visitor, and sent all the details to his agents in the Belgian army, with the request that airmen be sent at the opportune moment "to kill the Kaiser!"

Only one of the three messengers who were sent out reached the other side of the electric cable, for at that time the guards were doubled. But one was sufficient and when the first of November came Alois felt confident that something would happen.

The big dinner at which the Kaiser and his staff were to gather around the table, and for which all the best silver in town had been requisitioned, was to begin at 2 o'clock. At that moment anxious eyes watched the sky toward the west. Would they come, the airmen with their bombs to do the deed that would finish the war? Would they be in time?

At 2:15 there was a speck in the blue sky. It grew bigger and bigger, and soon the watchers distinguished three flying machines. In haste Alois communicated with his friends. Barely had those who were warned taken shelter when the first explosion was heard. Then for a few minutes the town of Thielt shuddered as bomb after bomb exploded.

It was a well-managed raid and the daring airmen escaped in safety, but it was all in vain. There had been a sudden change in the Kaiser's schedule and the war lord had left Thielt at 2 o'clock sharp. During the bombardment his motor cars were speeding along the road to Bruges and his life was safe.

But the commander of the Fourth German Army raged in his private office at the kommandatur. The secret of the visit had plainly got out. The Kaiser, the idol of 70,000,000 Germans, had barely escaped death. The guilty had to be found and punished.

A counter-spy system was organized at once and large sums were promised for any bit of information. Slowly but surely Alois was drawn into the net woven by a most minute and complete investigation. On Feb. 2 he was summoned to the kommandatur and taken prisoner. Already three of his co-operators were there.

It was then that Alois Van Keirsbilk showed the courage which won for him the name of "the Silent Hero." He knew that one word spoken lightly might betray the whole of his organization, and his last word to his friends who were still free had been, "Do not let my absence or death scare you; but keep up the work that we have been doing." After his arrest nothing could induce him to speak even a word. All devices, old and new, were tried by the kommandatur—tortures as well as promises, the menaces of a cruel death, and the promise of life in luxury. It was all in vain. Perhaps Alois thought of the many lives he had in his hands. Anyway, he remained silent.

He was condemned to death on Feb. 8, and then, the Germans created and applied as devilish a scheme of mental torture for a human being as could be devised. Alois had two children, and a third was to be born soon.

"On the day that new life enters your home your life will end unless you speak," said the German inquisitor. Undoubtedly Alois thought of his wife, who would be calling for him on that day more than ever. Perhaps he thought of

GREAT SEJM SPEECH OF M. PADEREWSKI

Reports in Warsaw on the Work for Poland Done in Paris.

ASKS PEOPLE'S GRATITUDE

Says Colonel House Won Heart of Wilson for Poland's Cause—Hoover's Promises for Food.

President Paderewski, after two postponements, made before the Sejm, or Assembly, on May 22, his much-advertised speech—the first since his arrival in Warsaw, after being in conference in Paris.

According to the special correspondent of The Daily Telegraph of London, who telegraphed his paper the full text of the speech, it was delivered amid outbursts of enthusiasm. President Paderewski said:

The Polish nation is today living through solemn moments. I suppose that in its eventful history there was never a time more solemn, more fateful than the present. The fate of our country is at stake; powerful people, holding in their hands the destiny of the world, are building a framework for our independent existence, are deciding the frontiers of our State, and soon will pronounce a final sentence, from which, no doubt for long years, there will be no appeal, perhaps for many generations. Violent bursts of hope and of joy and anxiety are strongly shaking our national spirit. From every side, from every corner of our former Commonwealth, people are coming here to Warsaw and going there to Paris, in frock coats and smock frocks, in old-fashioned country dress, in mountaineer costume, and they cry aloud and implore that their distant provinces should be united to the Polish State. The Polish eagle does not seem to be a bird of prey, since people are gathering themselves under its wings.

What Will Poland be like? What will be her frontiers? Will they give us everything we should have? These are the questions that every Pole is asking. I am here to answer, as far as I am able, all these questions. I have taken part in the work of the Polish delegation to the Peace Conference, and I am here to report on this work to the Sejm, and I ask for attention.

I will begin with what has been done. The conference has only dealt as yet with one of its defeated adversaries, the Germans. Conditions have been dictated to them, though they are not yet signed, which give us considerable advantages on the west frontier. We are not all satisfied with our frontier. I admit freely that I belong to the unsatisfied ones; but have we really a right to complain? The conference tried to decide justly according to the rule of ethnographical and national majority as regards all territorial questions. It applied this rule to our territory, and we have obtained considerable advantages from it on the west. But not everything was decided according to this principle. Thus, for example, our Polish population in the Sycowski and Namyslowski district and in some parts of the locality of Posen has distinctly been wronged. The Polish peace delegation will do its best to have this remedied.

Addition of 5,000,000 People.

The press has already published the chief points of the Peace Treaty. I will, however, remark in passing that by the treaty we are to receive more than 5,000,000 of population. This territory may yet be increased if the plebiscite in other districts formerly Polish has results favorable to us. The Peace Conference has not yet given us Warmia, Prussian Masuria, part of the Malborg district, also the Strumsan, Kwidzynsan, and Suski districts, through which passes the railway line from Gdansk (Danzig) to Warsaw by way of the Iliava. The Peace Conference has given us the Kaszybski coast, the Silesian mines, and the unlimited use of the port of Gdansk, also complete control over our Vistula, and a protectorate over the town of Gdansk under almost the same conditions as we had it in the most glorious days of our Commonwealth.

These conditions are different only in so far as present-day life is different from the life of that time. The area of the free town has been considerably increased. In the course of 126 years of Prussian oppression and systematic Germanization many Poles have forgotten their native tongue, and there are many really Germans settled in Gdansk. However, the former will soon remember Polish, and the others will soon learn it. Gradually Gdansk will tend to become what we wish it to become. If we show seriousness and common sense, enterprise, and political understanding. All Polish State property is returned to Poland absolutely, without any burdens or expenses. On the whole, I consider that Poland may be grateful for the verdict. If we are not obliged to shed more of our blood, I say that this is a great and fine gift from God.

For about two weeks the affairs of the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy have been under consideration. Naturally, our affairs there are extremely important. Already the matter has been eagerly discussed, and has been the subject of passionate and violent interpellations in this House, and of certain painful reproaches. Fortunately, this affair has taken a good turn. Our dispute with the Bohemians was not settled offhand. Time has calmed passion, and today, without renouncing our rights, we are quietly considering these matters, and the Bohemians are doing the same. The Peace Conference wishes that we should settle our quarrel with the Bohemians in a conciliatory manner among ourselves. Mr. Lansing expressed this wish in the name of the American delegation. I have had many conferences with Mr. Benes, the Bohemian Minister for Foreign Affairs, and with the most important representatives of Silesia, and I am glad to say that in my opinion the matter is on the right road.

New Republic's Aims.

If Parliament honors me with its confidence, I shall see President Masaryk in Prague tomorrow or the day after to settle the preliminaries of the agreement with him. I want to have the conference on our territory in Silesia, with the co-operation of delegates of the Polish Government, representatives of the General Military Staff, members of the National Council, also specialists, engineers, and lawyers. Yesterday I had the following reply to a question addressed to Mr. Masaryk, which I translate: "Thank you for your kind telegram. I shall be very happy to welcome you on a day to be named by yourself, only please give me immediate information as to the day of your arrival. I agree to the plan of a conference, and I expect we shall be able to lay a firm foundation for it. With most sincere good feeling for you and your people. MASARYK."

I come to other affairs. True to the national spirit, we shall never wage a war of conquest or gain. We sacrifice our lives in defense of the lives and property of our countrymen, and in the conviction that our great sacrifice will insure the preservation of order and will protect Europe from the threatened ruin of the world's civilization. In defending the borders of our former Commonwealth, the life and property of the inhabitants, without discrimination, between religion or language, we are to Gratitude to America.

I come to still more pressing matters. As you know, we have recognized the authority and dignity of the Peace Conference, as all other civilized nations have done, and we wait for its verdict. Up to the present its verdicts have been favorable to us. We voted here an alliance with the Entente, that is, with France, England, and Italy, who are continually sending us the help which is absolutely necessary to us in present circumstances. We have very much to be grateful for from America and its President. Without the powerful support of President Wilson, whose heart the best friend of the Polish cause, Colonel House, was able to win for us, Poland would no doubt have remained an internal question for Germany and Russia, at best confined within those frontiers which were assigned to her by the Germans in the act of Nov. 5, 1916. America is giving us food, America is giving us clothes, boots, linen, and munitions of war, and other supplies, on very easy terms, and with long credit.

Just before my departure from Paris, I received a letter from Mr. Hoover, promising Poland effective financial and economic help. That is the beginning of a very important help for us. Yesterday I learned that 2,000 tons of cotton would arrive at Gdansk in a few days, and that the Ministry of Finance in Washington were considering the question of granting Poland a considerable loan. Gentlemen, the Peace Conference, and especially England and America, with President Wilson at the head, while recognizing the necessity of our defending ourselves against the Bolsheviki does not wish for further war on any front. Mr. Wilson expressed this wish repeatedly and very firmly. Could a Polish Prime Minister, director of the Polish Government, a man upon whose shoulders fa...s the really dreadful responsibility for the fate of his people in the near future, could such a man wave aside such demands? I did as my conscience prompted me. I acted as my love for my country and my honor as a Pole demanded. I said that I would do all I could to satisfy these demands, and I have kept my word.

Haller's Army Withdrawn.

An armistice was demanded. I agreed in principle to that. It was demanded that Haller's army should not fight against the Ukrainians. It was withdrawn from the Ukraine front, and finally it was required that the offensive should be stopped. Although the Ukrainians in their telegram of May 11 asked for the cessation of hostilities on the 12th, at noon, they attacked us treacherously near Ustsyk, bombarding the town of Sanok from airplanes. In the face of this criminal attack no force could stop the elemental impulse of our young soldiers. Like a whirlwind they threw themselves upon the enemy, and with lightning swiftness took Sambor, Drohobych, Borysław, Strey, Iaolkiew, Sokl, Brody, and Zlocszow, being joyfully greeted everywhere as saviors by the Polish and Ukrainian population. Today our soldiers are probably approaching Stanislavow. [A voice: "It is taken already."]

So much the better. But from Podwoloczysk and from Husiatyn a strong Soviet army has entered unhappy Galicia, our native Bolshevik Muller's army will probably be obliged to fight on the Ukraine front, but not against the Ukrainians, only against the Bolsheviki, and perhaps it is fighting today.

On May 14 it broke off by telegraph all negotiations for an armistice, as I considered that, after the way the Ukrainians had behaved themselves, an armistice was absolutely impossible. The oppression, violence, cruelty, and crimes committed by them are without parallel. Wounded soldiers were buried alive in a wood near Lwow. Which of us has not heard of the young officer Loels, who, when wounded, was taken prisoner, and, after dreadful tortures, was also buried alive? Only the day before yesterday I had news of a young man who was known to me as a child, the twenty-four-year-old Wolsky, who was taken as a hostage, first tortured, and then knouted. He received 110 blows, and finally died a martyr's death, together with sixteen of his comrades, killed by the Ukrainian soldiers in Zlocszow. Yesterday news came which brought mourning to our Ministerial colleague Lande. His wife's sister was murdered in Kolomia.

Gentlemen, I am far from blaming the Ukrainian people for such crimes. It is not they who made such an army. Other people made it for them. [A voice: "The Germans."] But speaking of the Ukrainians, I must state that people who do such monstrous deeds cannot be treated as an army. Thus our Polish expedition into East Galicia is not a war, but a punitive expedition against bandits from whose oppression both the Polish and the Ruthenian population must be set free before law and order can be set up on this immeserably Polish territory.

Law and order will quickly be introduced there by every possible means. We are, at least for the moment, strong there, but we shall not use this strength, None of us think of retaliation or revenge, nor would Polish sentiment ever permit such a thing. There should be liberty, equality, and justice for everybody. And in this spirit, and with this wish I ask the honorable Sejm to vote in favor of autonomy for East Galicia, and at the same time I ask for power for the Polish Government to open peace negotiations with any Government in Ukrainia that shows moral strength and inspires confidence. I have finished.

HOW PAY INDEMNITY? ASKS DERNBURG

German War Debt Already 185,000,000,000 Marks—9,240,000,000 Marks Annual Interest.

A TREE WITHOUT ROOTS

Loss of 15% of Labor Forces in War Dead—Agriculture Fell Off 75%.

A detailed attempt to analyze the financial condition of Germany with a view to showing what she can pay and what not in settlement of her war liabilities to the Allies is contained in the Berliner Tageblatt of May 3, just received here, which publishes an address on the subject delivered by Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, the German Minister of Finance, before the Berlin Chamber of Commerce on the preceding day. Dr. Dernburg figures that the total essential budget requirements that were an absolute vital necessity for the German people in order to meet the pre-war expenditures and war relief and pension needs amounted to 17,420,000,000 marks annually, of which 12,000,000,000 marks must be raised each year through taxes alone. He insisted, therefore, that it was utterly impossible to pay the Allies the war indemnity that had been suggested, about 120,000,000,000 francs.

After pointing out the tremendous undermining of German commercial and financial strength due to the war, the blockade, the seizure of German interests and trade abroad, the sudden demobilization of the 8,000,000 German troops and the strict armistice conditions with the surrender of 5,000 German locomotives and the bulk of German shipping, Dernburg enumerated also the loss of Germany's oil supplies derived from Luxemburg, coal from the Saare Valley, and potash from Alsace-Lorraine.

"Until the political overthrow, the German war burdens, exclusive of annuities for the wounded and for the survivors of the war victims, amounted to 135,000,000,000 marks," he said. "The armistice has brought a stoppage of our national business, but not of our national expenditures. We have lost more than 8,000,000,000 marks alone in war material. To this must be added the war expenditures for the armies of occupation on the left bank of the Rhine, and an annual cost of 4,200,000,000 marks for the support of war victims alone.

"Over against this Dr. Helfferich, former Finance Minister, who alleged that the national assets amounted to between 310,000,000,000 and 315,000,000,000 marks, figures that applied only to the then flourishing state of our national wealth and which were even then criticised as too high. Our opponents fail to recognize also that all estimates of national wealth have meaning only from the point of view of income gains, that is, gains in proportion to the backing afforded by the hands of working men behind the assets. By the seizure of our transit facilities and shipping and the destruction of internal and foreign trade, this income value has everywhere been tremendously depressed. The Prussian railroads alone in peace times brought a surplus of 600,000,000 marks, whereas now they operate under a deficit of more than 2,000,000,000 marks. In our war dead, our labor forces have suffered a loss of 1,600,000 men, which is 8 per cent. of the total population, 10 per cent. of the labor strength. Add to this the retention of 800,000 war prisoners, and the fact that millions of war wounded are hampered in the labor formerly carried out by them, while the general undernourishment of the population during the four years of war further weakens the labor strength. Our soil has been exploited to the very limit of its capacity. The productivity of our agriculture has declined 75 per cent.

A Tree Without Roots.

"What means are now at hand that can serve for payments abroad? Inasmuch as we have already surrendered locomotives, ships, securities, and our capital in foreign lands, the answer can only be: We have no more of such means. The blame for this lies not so much in the war as such, as in the war measures of our opponents against German trade and German business, which have struck the national business to the heart. We stand here like a tree from which all roots have been cut off. How shall this tree put forth blossoms and fruits? How are we to create new values if we are denied raw materials, foodstuffs, labor, and credit? We have bound ourselves to accept the Fourteen Points of Wilson and to make reparation for the damage in occupied territories. This promise we shall keep, in spite of all hardships in the way. HOW THE WORLD'S WORK IS DONE IN THE CURRENT WEEK.

Delegates from the Lithuanian societies in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut will hold a convention at the Vanderbilt Theatre, in West 43d Street, today, "to demand recognition of the Lithuanian Republic and to protest against Polish depredations and pogroms."

Harold G. Blodgett will speak on "Duty in the War" at the men's meeting of the West Side Y. M. C. A., 318 West 57th Street, at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The graduating exercises of the class of 1919 of the Eastern District High School will be held at the school, Marcy Avenue and Keap Street, Brooklyn, on Tuesday evening, beginning at 8 o'clock.

Methodists will celebrate their Centenary Jubilee by boat trips up the Hudson to Bear Mountain on Thursday.

Margaret Bondfield, woman delegate from the British Trade Unions Congress to the American Federation of Labor, will speak at Cooper Union on Thursday evening.

The graduating exercises of the class of 1919 of the Julia Richman High School will be held at the Washington Irving High School on Thursday evening, beginning at 8 o'clock.

The National Institute of Investors will give an informal entertainment and dance for the installation of officers at the Broadway Central Hotel on Friday evening, beginning at 8 o'clock.

There will be a garden fete on Saturday under the auspices of the New York League of Women Workers on the estate of Mrs. Bernard E. Pollak at Larchmont for the benefit of a working girls' club.

Dr. L. H. Bailey will speak on "Some Books on Gardening" in the Museum Building of the New York Botanical Garden in Bronx Park at 4 o'clock on Saturday afternoon.

Appeal to Allies.

"And we hope that through increased sense of common interest and avoidance of friction it will become possible for us to make good the destruction of wealth and to attain to an orderly peaceful life with understanding also for the needs of our neighbors; and that thus, too, the logic of fact will lead our opponents to understand that these principles must be applied also in international life. This realization has already been made in minds that think in economic terms, particularly in the leading circles in America. May it also appear in the powers at Paris in good time, so that the great words about a new world, built upon reconciliation and equal rights, may not remain an empty caricature."

WEST TO INVADE SARATOGA.

Crack Kentucky Thoroughbreds Will Be Sent to Meet Easterners.

Saratoga has for many years been the meeting place for Eastern and American thoroughbreds, and there is great rivalry among the representatives of the different sections. This promises to be keener than ever during the coming meeting in August, for the West is preparing a string of cracks that is sure to give trouble to the champions of the east. Writing on this subject the Latonia correspondent of Racing Form says:

Western horsemen are going to invade Saratoga with greatly increased forces at the coming meeting at that track, according to the plans being arranged by numerous stables now racing at Latonia. The West has in past years invariably had a good representation at the Spa meeting, but this year promises to outdo all former records in this regard. The commencement of the Saratoga meeting fits in well with the close at Latonia. The interval of almost four weeks between the two meetings will give the Kentucky horsemen sufficient time to ship their horses and give them a brief rest for the strenuous campaign at Saratoga, where they will be pitted against numerous high-class and fast horses from the Eastern stables. The Kentuckians are confident that they will be able to hold their own against the Eastern cracks. As a matter of fact, the Latonia contingent is in good racing trim, and when the horses reach Saratoga they will be fully prepared to uphold the honor of Kentucky.

Among the more prominent stables that will participate in this year's Saratoga meeting are those of Thomas C. McDowell, E. R. Bradley, B. J. Arpaman, Jonas Goldblatt, Miller Henderson, H. B. Hewitt, Jefferson Livingston, George J. Long, John E. Schorr, J. W. Parrish, J. C. Milam, J. N. Camden, W. F. Polson, M. Quinn, J. B. Respess, C. T. Worthington, C. B. Rowe, F. D. Weir, George M. Hendrie, W. Perkins, M. C. Moore, Waldeck Stable and L. Neusteter.

Among the better known horses of the older division that will represent the West are Old Rosebud, St. Bernard, Lucky B., Legotal, Beaverkill, Grundy, Herald, Firecutter, Leochares, The Porter, Escoba, Midway, Buford, Omond, Old Coin, Bullion, Viva America, Rancher, Basilius, Mistress Polly, Hendrie, Trooper, War God, Dodge, Ocean Sweep, Major Karle, Prince of Como and Green Grass, nearly all of which have been displaying winning form at this meeting. The three-year-olds that will participate in the Saratoga meeting are a good band, the more important ones being Jennings Park, St. Bernard, American Ace, Sam Hen, Clermont, Vulcanite, Omond, Lillian Shaw, Toto, Madge F., Bon Jour, Looking Up, Regalo, Dancing Spray and Sellsolar.

Among the best two-year-olds shown this year that will represent the Westerners will be T. C. McDowell's High Command and Distinction, the latter the holder of the American record for four and one-half furlongs; Miss Jemima, regarded as the best filly in the West; Best Pal, Sam Freedman, Westwood, Mickey Moore, Lunetta, Red Red Rose, and Atta Boy II.

Kay Spence, who has been planning a campaign at Saratoga, has rearranged his plans and instead will transfer his stable to Louisville at the conclusion of the Latonia meeting. His decision was due to the fact that most of his horses are on the ailing list, Hodge pulled up lame in his last race, and Hoenir, one of the best horses in the stable, sustained a bowed tendon. The three-year-old Rosilita V. and the two-year-old Miss Bo-Peep are bothered with throat trouble. Spence has arranged that his crack rider T. Murray will not be idle during the off season in Kentucky. The boy will be sent to Saratoga to ride for one of the large stables that will be shipped there.

Clifford Robinson, the sensational Canadian youngster, also will be seen in the saddle at Saratoga. He will accompany the Ogden stable and will be in charge of Miller Henderson, the stable's trainer and part owner. Jockey Jack Howard, now riding for the stable of T. C. McDowell, also will be seen in the saddle at Saratoga for the first time in several years. Other good riders who will represent the West at the Spa are H. Lunsford, S. Boyle, D. Connelly, E. Pool, L. Gentry, M. Garner, F. Murphy, W. Warrington, H. Thurber and N. Barrett. Col. R. L. Baker will not race at Saratoga, and he has given Garner, the stable's rider, permission to ride at the meeting.

"WHY I AM GOING TO EXCHANGE MY PIANO FOR A DUO-ART PIANOLA PIANO"

"My daughter is studying and plays very well—but I believe she will enjoy her musical study more and play still better under the inspiration that will come from hearing the Duo-Art's perfect reproduction of the playing of such masters as Paderewski, Hofmann and Ganz, in her own home.

"I find that I can sit down at the piano myself and, using the instrument as a Pianola, play any and all of my favorite music with my own expression and taste—although I cannot play a note by hand.

"The Duo-Art is a fine piano too, among the very finest the music industry offers, and the Aeolian Company will make me a liberal exchange offer on my present piano. The balance I am to pay in convenient monthly installments."

THE Duo-Art is obtainable in either Grand or Upright pianos of the following superior makes: Steinway, Steck, Strobel and renowned Weber.

Prices from $975.

YANKEES A MENACE TO LEAGUE LEADERS

New Spirit of Aggressiveness Causes Trouble for All Opposing Teams.

PITCHERS SHOW STRENGTH

Timely Batting a Factor in Success of Huggins's Men, While Squeeze Play Has Been Utilized.

Much of the rumpus which has caused the excitement in the American League this season thus far has been stirred up by the Yankees. Huggins's club, while it has its faults, has developed a spirit of aggressiveness which has been missing in the past. The Yanks are the greatest obstacle on the circuit route to first place in the league standing. From the first, the Yanks have been a menace to the strongest clubs in the Johnson show, and while too much should not be expected of them this year, they are sure to be one of the most important factors in the fight right up to the end.

Before the season opened, it looked to the dopesters as if the Boston Red Sox would cause most of the trouble this summer. Boston has taken a back seat and up into the fight rushed the Yankees, making life miserable for the White Sox, Cleveland and Detroit, the most important clubs in the pennant chase. Instead of Boston being the bone of contention in the league race, it is the Yankees. The White Sox fear them, the Indians do not relish their talent and Detroit shivers a little when they see them coming. Strange as it may seem, the St. Louis Browns is the only club which has given the Yanks much trouble this season. But during the last series here, it looked as if the St. Louis difficulty has been successfully removed from the Yankees' stock of worries.

The two most valuable assets the Yankees have are pitching and timely batting. It is the pitching of three flingers, Shawkey, Thormahlen, and Jack Quinn, which has kept the Yankees an important factor in the race. These three have won the majority of the games. They rounded into shape quickly and have shouldered the brunt of the work. In addition to this pitching, the Yankees have been doing some timely work with the stick. As a club, their hitting is not heavy—they rank fourth in club batting—but their hits have been bunched, and each batting rally has come at a most opportune moment.

Squeeze Play a Big Factor.

There is nothing especially brilliant about the inside work of the Yanks. There is little so-called inside ball attempted, for Manager Huggins evidently figures that with good pitching and good batting enough runs will trickle over the plate without filling the players' heads up with the details of strategic tactics. Of course, when the Yanks run up against a pitcher who is able to spike their batting enthusiasm their advance is temporarily halted.

There is one trick play which Huggins has used this year and has been unusually successful with. This is the squeeze, which has been worked by the Yankees more than by any other club on the circuit. The squeeze at times seems to have been overplayed by the Yanks. Anyway, it has obtained the desired results, and it will continue to be a source of worry for all clubs that are playing the New York aggregation.

Detroit, for example, has tried time and again to work the squeeze play, but does not seem to be able to use it. In fact, no club in either league has been quite as successful with the bunt and run play as the Yanks. The Yankees undoubtedly lack speed on the bases, but thus far this season this deficiency has been overcome by strength in the other departments. There have been many runners, however, which were left stranded on the bases nevertheless because of the lack of base running ability.

The Yanks do not take the chances on the sacks that other clubs show. Huggins usually plays safe. There is not the dash and boldness about their work on the bases which the playing of a team like the White Sox.

Huggins evidently realizes to futility of taking too many base-running chances with players like Bodie, Hannah, Baker, and Pratt. They are not cut out for brilliant base ballopers. Slow as he appears on the sacks, however, Bodie has almost as many stolen bases to his credit as any other man on the club.

Duffy Lewis has been a big help to the Yankees. Always a slow starter in the Spring, Lewis did not do much for the first month. His speed and batting strength have increased, however, and he looks better each day. In the past Lewis has always hit at a high figure after July 1, and it looks as if he was going to do the same this year. Lewis's hitting is timely, and he has already become a popular figure with the Yank left field bleacherites. This is usually a test of a players ability, and they have put the stamp of approval on Duffy without a doubt.

Yankees Are Feared on the Road.

The short sojourn of the Yankees in first place a short time ago was unquestionable proof that they have the stuff in them to play the leading role. They, more than any other one club, are making the banner pursuit in the American League one of the best races in recent years. Strange as it may seem, the Yanks are more feared on the road than they are on the home lot. In the Western cities, the Yanks are one of the best drawing cards and the reason for this is that at any time Huggins's club is apt to jump into the fray and smash the best of winning streaks all to pieces. The Yank pitchers can stop the league's best hitters, and any club which has such a valuable asset is dangerous at all times.

Huggins is building for the future and with a few changes in the make-up of his club, the Yanks would loom up easily as a pennant possibility. The burden which is now resting on the Yankee pitchers is too heavy to carry them through a whole campaign. Huggins fortunately has several flingers in reserve and some of these should be in shape to take the regulars' pitching turn in the near future. Ernie Shore has been gradually rounding into form and seems ready for regular duty. George Mogridge has not been able to show his best wares yet, but Huggins expects to have him in shape before long. Pete Schneider, who came to the Yanks from Cincinnati, was handicapped in the Spring with a sore arm, but he is working out every day and is about ready to start.

Of the young pitchers on the Huggins staff, Lute Nelson looks like a good possibility. Nelson already has two victories to his credit. He has the disposition of a successful pitcher for he is cool under fire and has plenty of gameness. Russell has not been especially effective this season. He is a moist ball pitcher and that sort of pitching is usually unreliable. When the wet ball is spinning right it is hard to beat but most of the time it is working with uncertainty and is apt to fly anywhere. It is because of this wildness that Huggins is afraid to intrust Russell with many starts.

The Yankees have been unusually successful up to the present time and there is no reason to believe that their playing will drop off after the first of July. The club has met the best in the league under all conditions and has held its own. Right field has always been a problem on the New York club and it is still one. Sam Vick, who is now covering that portion of the lot, is playing his first year in the big show and lacks experience. His work has been above reproach but it cannot be expected to measure up to the work of a seasoned player. Vick isn't a consistent hitter but when he hits the ball, he hits it hard.

Fighting Spirit Developed.

Nearly all the fans who attend the games at the Polo Grounds this season agree that the Yankees are playing faster and more interesting ball than they have for the past few seasons. For one thing, there is more life and action in their work and more evidence of a fighting spirit. While the Yanks probably never lacked this spirit, there have been so many times when there was no outward evidence of it that it has been often supposed that this quality was lacking in the club. On most ball clubs there is plenty of evidence of a fighting spirit. In fact, it often takes a form where it becomes objectionable, but with the Yankees it has been the other way. They have always taken reverses quietly and without any evident effort of serious objection. It is without doubt the quietest troupe of ball players on the circuit.

When most clubs are on their toes fighting hard there is a constant chatter of conversation among the players. Words of encouragement fly thick and fast. With the Yanks at times there isn't even a whisper. This isn't because the players are not trying but this outward form of aggressiveness is not their way. Huggins, when he was with St. Louis, used to be a little fire-eater on the field, but in his present managerial berth he seems to have acquired the quiet method almost to a fault.

But while the Yankee players have been noisier and have showed more spunk and gumption about their work. It used to be a rare thing for the Yanks to kick at an umpire's decision. If a team is playing hard, with the desire to win in uppermost in the players' minds, it is only natural that they should kick once in a while at the umpires. Such flights of oratory should not reach the point where they become objectionable, but nevertheless this is one of the clearest evidences to the fans that the players are fighting hard to win.

There is a difference between legitimate objections to bad decisions and "crabbing." Even baseball, the umpires, like every one else, make mistakes. They are not infallible, although invariably right or wrong, they take that attitude. There has been a lot of officious umpiring this season, and maybe that is the reason that the Yanks have been roused to make themselves heard once in a while.

There is a vast improvement in the playing of Pratt at second. Last season he did not measure up to the reputation he brought from St. Louis, but this season he has become rejuvenated, and is playing the best ball of his career. The real star of the Yank club, however, is Peckinpaugh. His work ranks with the best infield play in the game, and his timely hitting is driving in many runs. Peck's work does not stand out in its true worth at all times, because he does a difficult things so easily and gracefully that he does not appear to be exerting himself.

The new spirit which has been instilled in the Yanks has been so evident during their present stay at the Polo Grounds, and has increased their popularity to such an extent that the club has more supporters right now than at any time since the American League invaded Manhattan.

BOOM IN BRITISH SPORTS.

Classic Turf Events Run and County Cricket Resumed.

Sports of all kinds are enjoying a wonderful boom—a real comeback—throughout the British Isles this season. Many familiar faces of past champions are missing on all sporting fields, but the games are carried along with intense enthusiasm. The king of sports, horse racing, is now in full swing, several of the pre-war classics having been run off while many more are scheduled during the season.

County cricket was resumed last month after a stoppage since August, 1914. With the exception of Worcestershire, all the counties which competed for the championship before the war are playing two games each week, which attract large crowds.

While the open championship will be omitted this year, golf is steadily resuming its pre-war appearance. The Professional Golfers' Association Victory Tournament, which was played two weeks ago, attracted 103 entries, including all the leading professionals. It was won by the veteran James Braid with a score of 155. Harry Vardon was eighth, (166,) Edward Ray ninth, (166,) George Duncan eleventh, (165,) and J. H. Taylor nineteenth with 166.

Athletic meetings are held each week all over the country, several promising youngsters having already been unearthed.

Lawn tennis is enjoying a strong revival, many of the famous old tournaments being scheduled.

Howard to Defend His Title.

Kenneth S. Howard of Rochester, holder of the State chess championship, will defend his title in the forthcoming tournament to be held in connection with the annual meeting of the New York State Chess Association at Troy and scheduled to start on Aug. 5. The intercounty matches for the Genesee trophy will be contested on Aug. 4.

Some of the Yankees who are doing much to keep the team in the forefront of the pennant race.

GREAT ADVANCE BY WOMEN AT THE NETS

Play of the Feminine Racquet Wielder Shows Improvement in Mixed Doubles.

The advance of women's tennis in America was strikingly illustrated by the high quality of play in last week's nationals tournament in Philadelphia, but the most significant strides were unquestionably revealed in the mixed doubles event. It has long been claimed that Americans cannot play good mixed doubles, one reason given being that the girls are not able to stand the pace of the American volleying game. In England a far higher standard has prevailed in mixed competition for some years.

There are two kinds of mixed doubles: the informal, week-end house-party type, and the stern, honest-to-goodness tournament play. In the former the men either hit consistently at one another, or pat easy balls to the girls, who shriek ecstatically whenever they make what is considered a good return. The latter, however, is relentless and purely business-like. Since it is one of the cardinal rules of doubles to play as far as possible at the weaker member of the opposing team, it is only natural that the girl should bear the brunt of the defensive work in any high-class mixed match. And since no chain is stronger than its weakest link, the power of a team usually depends upon the ability of its feminine member.

It is wrong to assume that a first-class mixed tennis player can score at will by simply slamming the ball at a girl. That may have been true years ago, but it by no means applies to such players as Mrs. George Wightman, Miss Eleanor Goss, Miss Marion Zinderstein, Miss Molla Bjurstedt, or Mrs. B. F. Weaver. These women ask no favors when they enter a mixed doubles tournament. They stand up close to the net and volley the hardest drives, and even when they are forced out of position in deep court they are quite capable of responding with deep lobs that have practically an offensive value. Moreover, they do not approve of poaching by their men partners. Certain shots are necessarily taken by the better volleyer, or the surer back-hand hitter, even on borrowed territory, and this applies to men's doubles as well as mixed. The deliberate sacrifice of position is bad tennis tactics at any time, and rightly resented by a partner of any ability whatever.

A player of the type of William T. Tilden is a poacher by instinct, and he flashes so many startling shots at crucial moments that his ranging propensities are readily forgiven. He has made a practice of playing men's doubles with very youthful partners, whom he can coach and command whenever necessary, and the system has proved remarkably successful. But it is astonishing how many mixed teams have proved winning combinations with practically a balance of power, good teamwork, mutual understanding, and an intelligent grasp of court tactics. Such a team is that of Mr. and Mrs. George Wightman, where there is no real weak spot, and where the woman knows as much tennis as almost any man in the game. Another well-balanced mixed team consists of Mrs. S. Fullerton Weaver and William Alex Campbell of the West Side Club, and it was unfortunate that this strong combination, winners of, both the Pelham and the Ardsley invitation tournaments this season, could not take part in the national event.

When fully a dozen pairs of top-notch players appear as mixed doubles contenders, including such stars as Tilden, Vincent Richards, Craig Biddle, Wallace Johnson, and Irving Wright, as was the case last week at the Philadelphia Cricket Club, it is a sure sign that what was once a social pastime has developed into a real sport and that the experts of the racquet will henceforth look upon mixed doubles as something not merely to be politely tolerated, but as worthy of their best and most serious athletic efforts.

New Men Among Detroit Coaches.

Two men have been added to the sports governing staff at the University of Detroit. They are Lieutenant James H. Brown and William A. Reid. Reid has been signed to assist James Duffy as coach of the football squad, and to coach the baseball, basketball, and track teams. Brown is to replace Duffy as athletic director. Both men are former Colgate graduates and have made their reputations as athletic mentors in the East.

TEN SECTIONAL TITLE TILTS.

McLoughlin and Sundy May Seek National Honors Again.

With only one of the sectional doubles championships complete—the Middle Atlantic, played at Columbia Country Club, May 30—tennis players throughout the country are turning their attention to these events. Under the rules adopted at the last annual meeting of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association, the doubles championship of the country at the Longwood Cricket Club the week of Aug. 11 will be open only to teams which have won sectional events.

This action was advised at the meeting of the Executive Committee held in Chicago at the last clay court championship when delegates from the Middle West urged a return to the sectional basis for the doubles instead of the open tournament which had been established in the belief that it would broaden the interest in this branch of the game. Quite the contrary opinion was expressed, for J. B. Adoue of Texas, Ward C. Burton of Minneapolis, C. Drummond Jones of St. Louis, and L. Harry Waidner of Chicago, members of the committee, declared that in their localities the sectional system was far more attractive to the players.

On their recommendation a committee was named which reported at the annual meeting the following rules:

1. To be eligible for competition in the national doubles championship, a team must first have won a current sectional doubles championship.

2. Each member of a sectional doubles team must be a member in good standing of a club in good standing, belonging directly or indirectly to the U. S. N. L. T. A. Any team or player who has won a sectional doubles championship is ineligible for play in other current sectional doubles championships.

3. The place for holding the national doubles championship shall be decided at the annual meeting. Each duly accredited section shall be entitled to a doubles championship.

4. In the national doubles championship the teams shall be bracketed by the usual draw. The winning team shall have the right to challenge the champions, and the challenge round shall be a part of this tournament. The winners of the challenge shall become the national double champions.

The adoption of these rules means that the winners of the sectional doubles tournaments thereby qualify for the national championship. The sectional events are open to any teams that have not won in other sections, irrespective of residence. Medals for the winners of these tournaments are given by the U. S. N. L. T. A.

As a result of this change a complete schedule of sectional championships was established with the exception of the intermountain section. The dates follow:

May 30, Columbia Country Club, Middle Atlantic; June 23, Orange Lawn Tennis Club, Middle States; July 5, Long Beach, Cal., July 10, Minnesota Yacht Club, Northwestern; July 21, Cleveland Associated Tennis Clubs, Tri-State; July 21, Asheville Country Club, Southeastern; July 28, Longwood Cricket Club, New England; July 29, Dallas Tennis Club, Southwestern; July 28, Rockhill Tennis Club, Western; Aug. 4, Tacoma Lawn Tennis Club, Pacific Northwestern.

Adoption of this plan did away with the Eastern doubles, formerly played with the Longwood singles, and made it necessary to hold the Middle Atlantic, Middle States, and New England championships as separate events, following the geographical sections of the country, as outlined by the constitution of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association.

From the interest already manifested, it is plain that this scheme appeals to the players, for a number of teams are making ready to try for their local titles, and if they win are planning to play at Boston. Word comes from the Coast that Maurice E. McLoughlin and Thomas C. Bundy, former champions, are practicing steadily, in the belief that they can regain their championship form. Ralph Burdick and Walter Hayes of Chicago are a formidable team. Beals C. Wright, who held the title with Holcombe Ward, also is to make another try at the championship, and a host of newcomers are active.

NEW BACKFIELD FOR NAVY.

Difficult Task for Dobie to Replace Last Season's Stars.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 21.—Coach Gilmour Dobie, who will have charge of the Naval Academy football team next season, fully recognizes that he has a difficult task before him in building up his directt attack having been lost to him this season. It will be no easy task to replace a backfield, probably the best in the country last season, without such men as Ingram, Butler, and Roberts, and even Ort, a fourth classman last year, who has resigned, completing the wreck.

In spite of serious losses of line men also, a strong aggregation of forwards can be outlined already. The regular linemen who graduated are: Arthur, centre; Perry, guard, and Scaffe, tackle. Perry will be missed particularly on account of his punting. However, excellent men are in sight for all the positions except one guard. Foster and Larson, both of whom have played the position in a number of games, are available for centre, while Denfeld is an experienced and aggressive guard. The tackle positions are likely to be specially well cared for by Hing and Murray, both fourth-class men last season, and powerful and active players, who are likely to improve greatly next year.

Ewen, who has been elected Captain, can be counted upon for one end position, while Graves, a regular two seasons past, but who was out of the game last season on account of injuries, is again available. Shively probably better than any end, except Ewen, the squad had last season, while Snively and Lowe are two excellent substitutes. Excellent line substitutes of last season are again available are Moore, Clapp, and Newby.

Doble has in sight now as backfield material, Clark, Benoist, Severn, Rawlings, Alvord, and Rodes. All of these are good men, and were used in portions of games last season, so they are not without experience. It is thought that one or more of them will develop into high-grade backs during the coming season under Doble's coaching. Alvord and Severn, both active young fellows weighing in the neighborhood of 170 pounds each, are the most promising.

Terse News of Sports in Town and Out

Singer Employes to Hold Meet.

Many Metropolitan A. A. U. junior track and field champions will probably compete in the Singer Employes A. A. outdoor meet to be held at Elizabethport, N. J., June 29. Max Bohlasd has already entered. He will compete in the two-mile run, three of his most formidable rivals being Louis Kaufman and Andy Craw of the Brooklyn A. A. and Casper Scheffer of the Morningside A. C. Twelve clubs have nominated full track teams and seven have entered teams for the medley relay race.

Consider Tin Hats to Save Heads.

Players in the International League will probably soon be discussing the advisability of including tin headpieces similar to those worn rakishly by Uncle Sam's doughboys in the late war, in their equipment. An alarming number of knockouts, in which craniums have come in contact variously with balls and bats, has caused the players to seek some sort of protection for themselves and their skulls. Last Monday was a red-letter day in knockout activities, a quintet of Dave Fultz's stars were separated from their senses in a series of six knockouts. The day held the greatest misfortune for Schulte of Binghamton. He managed to get hit twice. In Binghamton's game, too, Kennick of Reading was knocked senseless. This three-ply display of unconsciousness led in the day's average. Over in Newark the clash between the Bisons and Newark ran a close second in the number of accidents. Bruggy, the Newark catcher, was hit on the head and so was Thomas of Buffalo. Bruggy's enforced sleep was odd and at the same time dramatic. Casey, one of Buffalo's heaviest batters, swung mightily at a third strike and missed. There was so much momentum to his swing that Casey turned around twice. On the second lap Casey's war club came into contact with Bruggy's head. The other knockout was delivered to Jacobson of Baltimore.

Evander Marksman Wins.

Marksmen of Evander Childs High School carried off the chief honors in the Public Schools Athletic League subtarget tournaments for first and second teams for the Whitney trophy. The first team captured the division trophy, having a higher aggregate score than the Eastern District H. S. team, with which Evander Childs finished the schedule tied, with 8 matches won and 1 lost. In the second team standing Evander Childs tied with Curtis, but the latter got the trophy through having the higher score. The individual championship was won by J. Phillips, Jr., of Evander Childs, whose record for the tournament showed a score of 368 out of a possible 375.

Limits Schoolboy Affiliations.

The P. S. A. L. has taken steps to prohibit scholastic athletes from competing for their schools in track athletics and representing clubs in open A. A. U. competitions. At the High Schools Games Committee meeting, A. A. Mason of Stuyvesant H. S. submitted an amendment which will compel the schoolboys to confine their athletic activities either to their schools or clubs in track competition. Violation of this rule will draw a suspension for a period to be determined by the P. S. A. L. committee.

School Golfers to Decide Title.

Golf teams of Stuyvesant H. S. and Richmond Hill H. S. will battle for the P. S. A. L. championship title over the links of Van Cortlandt Park either tomorrow or Tuesday. These two teams finished the title tournament deadlocked for first place, each having won four matches and lost one.

Sharkey Surprises Milwaukee.

Bar Schoolboys as Instructors.

Schoolboys will not be permitted to accept positions as playground instructors or compete as amateurs, according to an announcement made yesterday following a meeting of the P. S. A. L. High Schools Games Committee. As a war emergency plans were in the making whereby provision would be made for the schoolboy athletes to replace the playground instructors who had gone to war. When the armistice was signed and instructors permitted to return to their vocations, the emergency was dispelled and the plans were tabled.

Indorse New Tennis Club Rule.

St. Louis tennis players are looking with favor on the adoption of an individual sustaining membership amendment to the rules of the St. Louis Tennis Association recently. This legislation makes it possible for the Missouri city's association to continue along lines which are expected to stimulate interest in tennis and gain additional exponents for the court game. The amendment permits any one to enter the association's activities upon payment of $3. In return for this the holders of a sustaining membership will be entitled to free admittance to any exhibition matches given by the association, and will receive copies of the yearbook and the tennis players' directory.

Ban on Boxers is Reduced.

The six months' suspension meted out to Lee Flynn and the boxers under his management for an infraction of its rules has been decreased to three months by the New Jersey State Boxing Commission.

Aids Indiana Amateur Athletics.

One of the leading figures in the agitation for the separate A. A. U. Association for Indiana, recently obtained, was Ben Levy, formerly connected with the Gilsons A. C. of Harlem. He accepted a position some time ago in Indianapolis and almost immediately upon his arrival there saw the possibilities of an immense athletic boom if Indiana could have more favorable conditions for a direct supervision of amateur sport.

New Mark for Southern Miner.

The Southern Association has among its players two "Iron Men," who recently went through twenty-three innings of a pitchers' battle which ended when the umpire called the game because of darkness. The game was deadlocked at 2 to 2. The contending teams were Chattanooga and Atlanta. Rube Marshall, the Chattanooga twirler, was touched for sixteen hits during the game. His greatest work came after the fourteenth inning, when he allowed only two hunts to the Crists. He beat the entire twenty-three frames without sending a pass. His rival was Roberts. The game created a new distance record for the Southern Association. Official figures show twelve innings to be the record game for a minor league.

URGE BETTER PLAN FOR GOLF DATES

Events Coming Too Closely Together Keep Stars from Playing in Many Tourneys.

CONFLICTS ARE NUMEROUS

Players Would Have Program Arranged to Allow More Time Between Championship Fixtures.

As the result of the experience gained so far this season in holding championship tournaments, golf enthusiasts are urging that a more flexible program for the important title events be arranged in awarding the dates for next year. It is not only desired to avoid actual conflicts, but also to have the dates set so that there will be sufficient time intervening to make it possible and convenient for the leading players in the country to compete in as many as they wish to enter.

This arises from the fact that many of the best golfers have not been able to play in some of the championships which they might have competed in had the time arrangements been better. In arranging the dates for this year it was probably not anticipated that the game would enjoy such a remarkable revival and that there would be such a great demand for the appearance of the stars in all the big meetings. As it is, there have been some disappointments.

It is contended that the National Open, the Jaques Memorial Cup and the Western Championship came too close together to make it convenient for many of the amateurs to compete in all events. The result was that some of the events did not come up to expectations.

Early Dates Conflict.

The National Open at Brae Burn, an event which always attracts country-wide attention as well as the cream of American golfers, had a representative field and was a great success in every respect. No golf fixture has attracted more interest since the year Ouimet defeated Vardon and Ray for the same title. But this was followed closely by the competition for the Jaques Cup and the Western Championship at the Sunset Hills Country Club in St. Louis. Francis Ouimet, holder of the Western title, had particularly desired to defend his laurels, and Chick Evans, holder of the National Open title, had also intended to compete at St. Louis. He had for a time decided not to defend at Brae Burn so as to be able to give what limited time he could spare to golf to the St. Louis tournament. He was urged so strongly to go to Brae Burn that he finally decided to do so. He had to make a choice between the events. Ouimet was obliged to give up his plan to go to St. Louis when he decided to compete for the Jaques Cup. This latter event was quite convenient for him since it was held in the Boston district, but it made it impossible for him to go into the Western championship. Consequently, the Western championship lacked the color which national figures lend to such an event and was not at all what it might have been under other circumstances.

Golf events rushed so closely upon each other this year that many other golfers were unable to fill the engagements they had planned. The Metropolitan championship at Brookhaven, which was played the week preceding the National Open, prevented local players from getting into the open inasmuch as they had no opportunity to familiarize themselves with the course at Brae Burn, while many were not able to take the time for both events, coming, as they did, so closely together.

To avoid such a conflict in the future at least one of the tournaments will in all probability be held later in the season. It is already planned that the Jaques Memorial Cup competition in the Autumn of next year. It is felt that the tournament lost much in the size and quality of the field through conflicts with other tournaments. The Trans-Mississippi tournament at St. Louis took many players who might have otherwise entered the competition, and the Buckwood trophy tournament at Shawnee and other played it is also complained, that the Jaques Cup tournament lost much interest through the fact that it came right on the heels of the National Open which had held the interest of the golfing world for several days. As so many tournaments are scheduled for June each year a later date seems to be the only remedy for the situation that occurred this year.

While the amateurs were forced to give way to the professionals this year, Francis Ouimet, at least, has recovered whatever prestige he may have lost through his failure in the National Open. Instead of permitting disappointment to prey upon him he at once returned to his best form in winning the Jaques Cup.

Ouimet's Fine Victory.

Perhaps the most striking thing about Ouimet's victory in the Jaques Cup tournament, 72 holes of medal play, was that his winning total, 303, was a stroke better than the score at which he tied with Vardon and Ray on the same course in 1913. Its special significance lies in this fact: That many followers of golf were of the opinion that he was aided materially six years ago by the fact that the ground was wet and soft throughout the championship, so that the rolling hillocks for the pins and feel that his ball would not roll far, the inference being that Vardon and Ray were more skilled in the art of applying a heavy backspin or cut to their approach shots and that, in view of the nature of the soil, they gained no benefit from their greater skill.

There was no soft turf to aid Ouimet at Brookline this year. The course was a better test of golf than it was in 1913, in that it had all of the old distance, if not a little more, and is even more extensively bunkered now than it was then. Furthermore, the rough right now is at its worst, as Ouimet found in playing the fifth hole, one of his rounds. He was able to make only about 125 yards in one shot out of the long, and was tied up in such heavy grass for his next that he could not punch it out the seventy-five yards or so to get the green, landing the ball in a bunker and taking 6 for the hole.

Possibly it was the confidence derived from using a new putter, after his unfortunate results with the old, at Brae Burn, that put new spirit into Ouimet's play in a supreme way, his driving was truly remarkable, as were other long shots. Where he had been trying to play within himself at Brae Burn, he here let out to the limit of his powers and the ball responded, something remarkable in the line of long hitting.

Alex Smith and Gil Nichols are booked to play Jerry Travers and Tom McNamara at the Wykagyl Country Club, New Rochelle, today for the benefit of the New Rochelle Day Nursery. An invitation has been given to the public to attend and make up the large gallery that is anticipated. Alex Smith is in the fine form, having notched up a 39 over the course last Monday, two strokes under par. Jerry Travers is a member of Wykagyl and Tom McNamara is coming over from Siwanoy to play.

Golfers of Worcester, Mass., are up in arms as the result of a ruling recently made by the City Solicitor which makes the playing of golf on Sunday a violation of the law. It was ruled that golf came under the ban as well as baseball. The enforcement of this blue law has called attention to the need of some more liberal legislation.

The Nassau Country Club is having a busy season which reminds the members of the pre-war days, in addition to a number of tournaments several good matches have been arranged for the Summer season. The President's Cup will be played for August 19, and on Labor Day the cup will be awarded to the player with the best gross total score for twenty-two holes.

COLLEGE GOLFERS MEET THIS WEEK

Princeton Presents Strong Combination for Struggle on Links—Other Tournaments.

Three championship tournaments, one invitation meeting and a couple of one-day gatherings will keep the golfers busy this week. Junior players will attract attention at the Siwanoy Country Club on Tuesday and Wednesday, when they take part in the sixth annual metropolitan championship tournament, while golfers from the various universities will compete in the intercollegiate championship meeting at the Merion Cricket Club, from Monday to Saturday.

The Apawamis Club, at Rye, N. Y., will stage an invitation tournament on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, the same days as those taken for the Connecticut State Golf Association championship over the Shuttle Meadow course. A one-day tournament under the auspices of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association will be held at Scarsdale, on Tuesday, while tomorrow members of the New York Newspaper Golf Club will fight it out in the semi-final and final rounds for the press championship over the Engtwood Country Club course.

As intercollegiate tournament has been held since 1916, when over the Oakmont course, Princeton won the team championship, and J. B. Hubbell, representing Harvard, captured the individual title. The matches call for Monday and Tuesday to be devoted to the team competition, seventy-two holes of medal play with the first four men of each college to figure in the scoring. This is a new procedure, as usually the colleges send their best six men.

On the third day a medal round of thirty-six holes will be brought off in the qualifying round for the individual championship. Sixteen will qualify, the first round of the match play to take place on June 26, with the semi-final the following day. These meetings will be at eighteen holes, but on the last day the final will be brought off over the double circuit.

The Princeton combination, including such men as J. Simpson Dean, runner-up in the Sleepy Hollow tournament a few weeks ago; Richard A. Haight, R. Woolworth, R. W. Thorington, Jr., W. Pulling, T. W. Gregory, and Howard Maxwell, Jr., the Captain, looms as the strongest in the North, for the Tiger golfers have defeated Dartmouth, Harvard, Yale, and Pennsylvania by wide margins.

Doubtless A. L. Walker, Jr., of Columbia, will compete at Marion, and if he displays the same brand of golf that he has been playing thus far this season, there seems little reason to doubt that he will lead the field for the individual. Walker a week or so ago won the medal in the qualifying round of the Metropolitan Amateur Championship Tournament at Brooklawn, and later reached the final round, where he was beaten by Oswald Kirkby, the defending champion.

CENTURY RACE FOR AUTOS.

Hundred-Mile Derby on July 4 Attracts Noted Drivers.

In the 100-mile auto derby, to be decided at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway on July 4, it is said the biggest field of international stars that ever started in a race in this country will go to the post. It will be the first real test in the East of all the modern racing machines. A sample of what can be expected of some of these land fliers was had in the international races at the Bay last Saturday when Tommy Milton created new world's figures in the ten-mile event. In the race on the Fourth Milton will have as team mates Eddie O'Donnell and Dave Lewis. The latter two will have specially built Duesenberg cars.

Among the drivers who are said to be anxious to get into the 500-mile classic are Roscoe Sarles, who is piloting one of Barney Oldfield's Golden Submarines, and Jules Goux, the noted French driver who finished third in Indianapolis. Goux has a Peugeot that has turned over 122 miles an hour in trial spins. He beat one of the famous Bablot cars in one of the elimination trials in Indianapolis.

The card on July 4 also will include a match race and a short-distance sprint. There is said to be good prospect, too, of a match between Wilcox and De Palma.

WESLEYAN GRIDIRON PLANS.

Seven Games Arranged for Middletown Eleven Next Fall.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., June 21.—The Wesleyan football schedule for next season consists thus far of eleven games, four at home and three out of town. A game with Trinity has not as yet been arranged, but it is expected that a date will be secured. The season will open Oct. 4, when Worcester Tech. will be played in this city.

The schedule of games arranged is as follows:

Oct. 4, Worcester Tech., at home; Oct. 11, Rhode Island State, at home; Oct. 18, New York University, at New York; Oct. 25, Union, at home; Nov. 1, Williams, at home; Nov. 8, Amherst, at Amherst; Nov. 15, Columbia, at New York.

RING HISTORY LIKELY TO BE MADE IN WILLARD-DEMPSEY BOUT IN HUGE ARENA AT TOLEDO

RING TITLE BATTLE PROMISES THRILLS

Willard's Physical Prowess to be Put to Supreme Test by Challenger.

DEMPSEY FIGHTS FAST

TOLEDO, Ohio, June 21.—The greatest day in his career is less than two weeks away from Jack Dempsey, the Salt Lake City heavyweight, who will strive to wrest the championship title from Jess Willard at Bay View Park here on the afternoon of July 4. Challenger and defender have entered upon the final stages of their preparatory work, both resolved to crowd into the thirteen remaining days enough exercise to fit them for the battle of their lives.

Into the life of every boxer, particularly the heavier exponents of the ring sport, comes the aspiration to wear the crown emblematic of the highest honors in the class. Dempsey is no more than human; therefore he is no exception to the rule. If he is successful in his efforts here on Independence Day, Dempsey will embark on a journey to fame and riches, which have increasingly attached to the ring's heaviest championship with each successor to the title.

If, on the other hand, Dempsey fails in the coming attempt, he will still remain at the head of the heavyweight championship eligibles, for there are admittedly no fighters near the Salt Lake City lad's weight who can seriously be considered his rivals. It will only be a question of time, therefore, in the event of failure, when opportunity will again come knocking at Dempsey's door in the form of another crack at Willard and the world's title.

The Utah mauler, as he has been nicknamed, not only aspires to the title, but is confident he will win the forthcoming bout. Dempsey's belief in his ability has its origin in the confidence of youth, his past successes in the ring, his speed, and his stamina. Upon these qualifications the Salt Lake City lad leans for success in the approaching conflict.

Youth Favors Dempsey.

When he enters the ring against Willard, the challenger will have youth in his favor, the speed that goes with youth and the stamina which is naturally a part of his general make-up, but which has never really been tested since Dempsey advanced to the first ranks of the heavyweight class. And when it comes right down to business the challenger undoubtedly will be capable of as great efforts on the offense as Willard, despite the latter's towering bulk and advantage in weight.

Dempsey is planning his part in the coming bout no differently from his style in his previous ring engagements. The fact that he will be competing in his most important match has not caused the challenger to attempt a different style from his natural fighting front. The Salt Lake City heavyweight, while realizing that he will be facing a far more formidable Willard than many appreciate, nevertheless intends to waste not a moment in his work in quest of the title.

The rise of the contender to the title is little more than one year has been meteoric. In that comparatively small space of time Dempsey has risen from the obscurity of the heavyweight ranks to a position where in some quarters his enthusiastic admirers place him above the champion. The Utah boxer has swept every one and everything before him, topping over those who would question his right to the place of honor among heavyweights, and chasing to cover others who, while they spasmodically proclaimed themselves greater, nevertheless inwardly dreaded the possibility of humiliation which would be the natural result of contact with the powerful blows dealt out by Dempsey's flailing arms.

The humbled Fred Fulton, who once was regarded as a likely successor to Willard, is one of the former topnotch heavyweights who tasted the Dempsey blow. Carl Morris, also a giant of the ring, fared likewise. These two are the most formidable victims in Dempsey's list of knocked-out rivals. They reflect the size of the men Dempsey has bested, for they both towered over the Utah mauler as will Willard in the coming bout.

Flynn Among Victims.

Others who have fallen before the mighty Dempsey wallop include Jim Flynn, the veteran Pueblo fireman, who never before had felt the sensation of ring-floor resin on his back; Dan Porky Flynn, a lumbering giant from Boston; Battling Levinsky, the clever Hebrew heavyweight who was regarded as one of the ring's cleverest fighters, and many others of lesser abilities. Porky Flynn, who had been disposed of in ring bouts several times, twice by Sam Langford and once by the late Stanley Ketchel, nevertheless managed to acquit himself against the other aspiring heavyweights and furnished somewhat of a stumbling block until he encountered Dempsey's mighty fist. Levinsky's fall at the hands of Dempsey stunned a boxing public which had come to believe that the blond-haired Battler was capable of jabbing, hooking and swinging his way to many more ring victories before the fatal night in Philadelphia.

In all his bouts Dempsey has demonstrated that he is a quick worker. He hesitates not a moment from the tap of the gong which unleashes him on an opponent, and he seldom stops in his efforts, except for the rest between rounds, until he has his adversary reclining on the ring floor.

This style has filled Dempsey's record of ring achievements with quick and decisive victories. His quickest was over Fulton at Harrison, N. J., where last July the Utah heavyweight disposed of his leading rival in twenty-three seconds. In this bout Dempsey's weight was 197 pounds, and he stood six feet tall. Fulton's weight was 212, and his height 6 feet 5½ inches.

Against Willard Dempsey plans a similar assault. On this style alone Dempsey's chances of success practically depend. In Willard he will be facing the ring's superman. Youth will be Dempsey's chief asset. The challenger cannot hope to gain the title on this edge alone, however, for Willard possesses all the requisites of a champion.

Willard Bigger in Size.

Willard will have advantages in height, weight, and reach; almost insurmountable assets with a man of Willard's ability. Then, too, the title holder possesses clever tactics which he expects will frustrate the cyclonic style of his young rival. Whether Dempsey will be able to batter his way past Willard's defense and land with a vital blow is an issue. The challenger can hardly hope to stand off and box Willard, for Dempsey makes no pretense at cleverness in the ring.

Willard has not been active since winning the title. He took part in only one bout since beating Jack Johnson more than four years ago. This was the contest with Frank Moran in New York in March of 1916. That bout will be remembered as hardly a test for the titleholder. Yet, in defeating Moran convincingly, Willard gave evidence of form which put into the discard reports that he was an accidental champion. Willard contented himself in that match with outboxing Moran.

The question of stamina may play an important part in the outcome of the bout, despite the fact that the contest will be only twelve rounds. In this respect a comparison of the men is difficult. Dempsey has not been called upon to display his gameness since attaining heavyweight heights, for none of his rivals have tested him seriously. He has seldom been stung with a crushing blow, and, therefore, has seldom been in danger from his opponents.

Willard's greatest display of stamina was in the twenty-six rounds he survived before downing Johnson. The big Kansan showed his courage when he stood and took the heaviest blows without displaying any visible effects. Johnson tried with every blow in his repertoire to topple his white rival, but the negro's heaviest punches made little impression on the huge human hulk of Willard. And Johnson will be remembered as a powerful hitter.

In height Willard's advantage will be about five inches. The reach that goes with this tremendous size will give the champion an advantage of about five and one-half inches. The weight advantage in favor of Willard will amount to about forty-five pounds. Coupled with all these assets is Willard's cleverness on offense and defense, as reflected when he boxed the ten-round bout against Moran.

Champion Fights Cleverly.

With Willard's boxing, too, there is intelligence manifested. The champion directs his efforts in the ring as the situation before him demands. For this reason Willard seldom enters the roped arena with any set plans of campaign. His brain works with his arms. Dempsey, on the other hand, hits out at random, with no sense of direction to his blows, although they are aimed in the general direction of a vital spot.

The hitting powers of the two prospective combatants favors Dempsey on past performances. Not that Willard is incapable of landing a decisive blow. It would seem only natural that Willard could disable a foe with one swoop of his arm. But the champion has never really struck at an opponent with his full strength behind the blow. Even after the Johnson bout four years ago Willard declared that he had not attempted to unlimber all his hitting strength at any stage of the contest. In the coming contest Willard declares he will unloose all his strength, directing his efforts consistently to retaining the crown which Dempsey covets.

Dempsey's ability as a hitter is well known. The Salt Lake City lad lashes out with both hands continually, and in each arm there is enough driving power to dispose of anything human with which the fist comes in contact. Dempsey's record of one-round knockouts reflects this wonderful hitting ability as nothing else can. His style of landing his blows smothers an adversary's defense. In fact, Dempsey is accepted as a heavier edition of the late Terry McGovern, when the latter was in his prime.

While aware of his own tremendous hitting powers, Dempsey is not unaware of the latent strength behind the massive shoulders of his opponent. The challenger appreciates that Willard has powerful punching facilities, and has declared that he does not intend to stick his chin out as a target for the champion's drives. Likewise, Willard respects the hitting powers of his rival, and plans to take every precaution against a dangerous blow or a chance punch which will rob him of the title.

Betting in Abeyance.

There has been little betting on the bout to date, but in expressions of opinion backed by monetary displays, both boxers seem to have an equal amount of support. Willard is expected to enter the ring a favorite. However, popular feeling may favor Dempsey. In the coming bout this will be particularly likely, for Willard during the time this country was in the war drew upon himself considerable criticism and unfavorable attacks because of his indifference to appeals for various war charities.

In the face of the champion's form, however, it is not expected that this popular clamor will sway the decisions of those who wager. Followers of the sport realize that Dempsey must be even greater than Willard, the superman; he must be better than the greatest heavyweight in ring history.

The forthcoming bout will undoubtedly make ring history. Great interest is being manifested in the match. Advance requests for seats have caused Tex Rickard, the promoter, to increase the seating capacity of the arena he is having constructed. Already the sale has passed the $400,000 mark, and many prospective spectators have yet to be heard from. The tickets are selling from $10 to $60, the latter price being for ringside box seats. Tickets are on sale in all large cities with reputable agencies and individuals. Billy Gibson, manager of Benny Leonard, the lightweight champion, has made arrangements for a special train to be run to the bout, on which the cost of the trip will include a ticket for the contest.

PUBLIC INTEREST IN TURF GROWING

Plants Being Improved to Meet Demands of Steadily Increasing Attendance.

STIRRING RACES IN VIEW

Purchase's Victory Over Eternal Focuses Attention on Meeting with Sir Barton.

That racing has come back as a popular sport in a measure that has surpassed the fondest hopes of the leaders of the turf has now been demonstrated beyond the shadow of a doubt. The wild hurrah with which the season opened might have been due to the natural feeling of relaxation after the war, and it was within the realm of possibility that a slump would follow. All chance of a falling off in interest has disappeared now, for with the season about half over the public is stronger than ever in its support, while better acquaintance with the horses engaged has brought a keener interest in the races. The followers of the turf have already selected their respective champions, and from now until the snow falls men and women in stores and offices, and even on street corners, will be arguing on the merits of Sir Barton and his great rival, Purchase.

The Jamaica meeting, which has been in progress during the last nine days, has furnished proof that the interest in the sport is growing in intensity instead of falling off. It was Jamaica that opened the season in the middle of May with a program that possessed the charm of novelty and which was well patronized during the six days of the initial meeting. The crowds were encouragingly large then, but it is apparent to the most casual observer that they increased throughout the Belmont meeting, and that at the Jamaica meeting just concluded the daily average was several thousand more than at the opening session.

Indications of prosperity are also to be found in the action of all the local associations in voluntarily raising the overnight purses. Jamaica announced that this would be done after its first successful week and Belmont Park had only been running a few days when the financial inducements for horsemen were increased. The same policy has been announced for Aqueduct and Empire City, so that it is assured that the turfmen will share in the profits to a larger degree than they have hitherto done.

Expanding Capacity.

For the first time in many years extensive improvements to the plants, which have been sadly needed, are being made. Belmont Park managed to worry through its Spring meeting as it did last year without any changes of note looking to the accommodation and comfort of the public, but apparently even everybody is now convinced that the renewed interest will be permanent and workmen are busy erecting extensions to the stands that will insure the seating of thousands of extra patrons in the Fall. Jamaica added to its clubhouse, which helped a little, though the accommodations are still insufficient on big days.

When the gates at Aqueduct are thrown open tomorrow for the running of the Brooklyn Handicap visitors will find many improvements, the most substantial being the moving of the former field stand so that it is now a part of the main structure. There is now a seating capacity of 6,000, every chair has an additional depth of five rows, and there is a broad promenade in the rear. The remodeled structure is thirty-five feet longer than the old building, and from the clubhouse to the upper end of the stand is more than 600 feet.

Sixteen additional boxes have been built behind the press stand, giving a total of fifty boxes, excluding those in the clubhouse. There is a velvety lawn which extends almost to the furlong pole, and borders on additional parking space for automobiles made possible by the removal of the field stand. A new receiving barn of thirty-six stalls has been built adjacent to the paddock, and it is the intention of the management to rail in the paddock proper so that those wishing to view the horses at close quarters will be safeguarded from accident.

The increased attention given to racing is more noteworthy because a large portion of it is due to the encouragement of men high in authority who realize that racing is more than a medium for speculation. The United States has embarked in the breeding industry and the horse of blood now has friends all over the country who are not afraid to sound his praises and insist on his retention as the backbone of the breeding of utility horses and animals suitable for remount. Thus the prosperity notable enough in the East is even more pronounced in the West, where the large breeding studs are located.

Kentucky Purses Big.

Kentucky has long been regarded as the home of the thoroughbred, and under the inspiration of a general desire on the part of Government officials for the encouragement of breeding, the men interested in that business have themselves taken direct charge of the racing, which is the root and foundation of the breeding business. The legislators in that State have seen the good accruing from racing when the public is properly protected, and the legalizing of pari-mutuel betting has led to tremendous crowds and large profits for the associations. Much of this money is turned back to the horsemen in liberal purses, and Kentucky has been able to go ahead of Maryland and the rest of the country by announcing the slogan of no purse less than $1,200. Stakes have been increased in proportion and the public is not only willing, but anxious to supply the sinews of war by attending the races in force and liberally patronizing the mutuel machines.

Much the same story could be told of Maryland in the Spring, and the officials of the jockey clubs in that State are now preparing programs for the Fall meetings that will eclipse in value and importance any previous fixtures. Richer stakes will be offered all around, and at Laurel improvements are contemplated in keeping with the changed conditions.

Taken altogether, the prospects for horse racing on a well-conducted scale never were better. Owners are spending big money for high-class racers, the contests are attracting large fields, and the interest of the public is maintained from day to day in a manner that has not been exceeded since the turf became an American institution.

Entries Attract Public.

An illustration of the point that the intrinsic merits of the racers go far toward creating public enthusiasm was furnished on Thursday, when, without any preliminary trumpeting, the new crack Purchase was scheduled to meet the old favorite Eternal in the Stuyvesant Handicap at a mile. The publishing of the entries was sufficient to attract the real horse lover who scented a contest worth while, and the result was that the attendance was half as large again as on an ordinary week-day. The casual racegoer and the man who only turns out for big events realized that turf history was in the making, and these elements were sufficient to add 5,000 persons to the usual crowd.

These sportsmen who sacrificed other engagements to see the running of the Stuyvesant, were by no means disappointed, for they saw in Purchase a horse that is very likely to be much in the public eye for the remainder of the season. There was an ancient score to be settled between Purchase and Eternal and Purchase wiped out the account. Nearly a year ago, when the public was in doubt as to the respective merits of Billy Kelly and Eternal, George Odom, then trainer of Purchase, had the temerity to wish to include his pet in the race to determine supremacy. The event hung fire and finally Billy Kelly and Eternal met, the latter winning, while most people laughed at the pretensions of Purchase's inclusion in that select company.

The laugh is now entirely on the side of Odom and Hildreth, the latter having faith enough to pay a big price for Purchase when he was offered at auction. Purchase may or may not have been the best two-year-old, but there is little doubt now that he is the master of both Billy Kelly and Eternal. The Hildreth crack had taken Billy Kelly into camp in the Southampton Handicap on the opening day, and on Thursday he disposed of Eternal just as easily.

Just how the near star is to be rated with Commander Ross's all-conquering Sir Barton it is hard to say. At the beginning of the season Sir Barton had less to recommend him than Purchase, as he was an absolute maiden. This year Sir Barton made ample amends by winning every event in which he started, and that with consummate ease. He was reckoned unapproachable until Purchase flashed out late in the Spring at Belmont Park, and since then this son of Ormondale has become more formidable with every start, so that he is now considered a real rival to Sir Barton.

In his races this year Purchase has not been asked to travel further than a mile and a sixteenth, but his manner of going suggests that he will be able to retain his speed and smoothness of going over a distance of ground. Purchase carried more than scale weight in his latest winning effort and won very comfortably, but albeit not with that extreme ease that signalized Sir Barton's victories in the Withers and Belmont Stakes.

A definite idea of the merits of these great three-year-olds is not likely until the Dwyer Stakes at Aqueduct on July 10, the distance of which is a mile and a furlong. Sir Barton is being pointed for that event, while Mr. Hildreth realizes that if he is to claim any lasting fame for Purchase he will have to add the scalp of that great colt to those of Billy Kelly and Eternal.

A victory for Sir Barton will eliminate Purchase from serious consideration for the three-year-old crown, but should the Hildreth crack be the victor it would only serve to heighten the competition in this division for the balance of the season. The reason for this is that by his victories in the rich three-year-old stakes this year Sir Barton has incurred a penalty of six pounds under the conditions of the Dwyer Stakes, while Purchase, not having won a race value $5,000 is entitled to an allowance of three pounds. Sir Barton, therefore, will have to carry 127 pounds to 118 for Purchase, so that the latter can win and still not prove himself the best horse.

Cardinals Sign College Pitcher.

The St. Louis Cardinals have signed a college pitcher who has much promise. He is Dennis Curran of the Spring Hill College. He is a right-hander, 6 feet 2 inches in height, and weighs 180 pounds.

BROOKLYN HANDICAP ON CARD TOMORROW

Turf Classic, First Run in 1887, Marks Opening of Summer Meeting at Aqueduct.

None of the great turf classics have furnished more thrilling finishes than the Brooklyn Handicap, which will be run tomorrow as the feature of the opening of the Queens County Jockey Club meet at Aqueduct. The initial running, in 1887, set the example which has been followed by the contenders on many other occasions. In that first struggle for the prize Dry Monopole, Blue Wing, and Hidalgo finished heads apart, and a picture of that thrilling finish was for years used as a poster to advertise later races. Thirty years later the first finish was almost duplicated when H. P. Whitney's Borrow just nosed out his stable mate Regret, with Old Rosebud lapped on the Whitney pair. Borrow set a record of 1.49 2-5 for the distance of a mile and a furlong on the Aqueduct track, figures that the competitors tomorrow will find it hard to equal.

There was a great throng at the course at Kings Highway for the first running, but it is safe to predict that tomorrow's outpouring of enthusiasts, if the weather is kind, will far surpass that which cheered the superb struggle thirty-two years ago. Racing in that day was at the very outset of a period which saw half a dozen individuals dominant in the control of the sport, and speculation was the incentive for its very being. The horse was the means to the end and there was little sentiment outside of a few breeders who got a thrill when their own colors finished in front.

It is a pity that the Aqueduct course, excellent as it is in equipment, does not permit of the running of big fields at more than a mile and a furlong. The Brooklyn would be a much more satisfactory test of the merits of the horses engaged if the distance were a furlong further, as in the days at Gravesend. Every good horse in training with the possible exception of Sir Barton, which is an ineligible, is among the candidates, and it should bring about a stirring contest.

Many good horses have won it, among them, The Bard, conqueror of Hanover, which he vanquished at equal weights over a muddy track; the demon Exile, the sway-backed Tenny, one of the freaks of the turf, who would have been a leviathan had he not been born at the same time as Salvator and Longstreet, both of which surpassed him; Sir Walter, a very game and consistent racehorse; Ornament, a bad-tempered but fleet son of the English sire Order, who served to introduce Tod Sloan's jockeyship at its very best; Banastar, the uncertain, but with the speed of the wind, having Danny Maher in the saddle; Kinley Mack, rated by many as the best horse in a year when there were a great many stars; Irish Lad, as great as any of them and game to the core, as witness his Brighton Handicap in 1904, when he ran Broomstick to a head and finished on three legs, after having had the additional honor of winning the prize as a three-year-old; King James the lion hearted; Fitz Herbert, the aristocrat; the giant Whiskbroom; the game and fast Friar Rock, which had the distinction of winning the race with more weight up than any other three-year-old; good old Borrow, and the reliable Cudgel, winner in 1918.

Students of racing have long maintained that thoroughbreds attain the top of their form in the Autumn of their three-year-old career. The records of the Brooklyn Autumn Handicap show that in the thirty-two years of its existence five three-year-olds have been successful—Conroy in 1901, Irish Lad in 1903, Friar Rock in 1906, Superman in 1907, and Celt in 1908. Three of those bore the colors of the late James R. Keene. There were fourteen four-year-old winners, six five-year-olds, two six-year-olds, one seven-year-old, and the veteran Borrow, whose ninth birthday had passed when he landed the trophy.

A glance at the list of winning riders for the race shows that many of them have passed to other scenes. McCarthy, who piloted Dry Monopole, and whose verbal duels with Starter Caldwell will never be forgotten by those who heard them, was killed at Morris Park by a crazy filly called Little Nell; Hayward, a fine horseman of the old school, who was active in the saddle until well past his forty-fifth birthday; Hamilton, Barnes, Maher, McCue, T. Burns, and McCahey are

Ty Cobb and Gavvy Cravath Are Entrenched as Leaders in Batting

Other American League Hitters Press Georgia Peach, While Cravath Holds Long Lead—Giants First Club to Score 200 Runs.

Ty Cobb is setting the pace for the American League hitters, with a mark of .358. The Peach has also batted out the most base hits, 63; Roger Peckinpaugh is the leading run scorer, with 34 runs scored to date. Doc Johnstone stole the most bases, 17, and Eddie Cicotte, who won 12 and lost 2 games, is in the van among the pitchers.

Elmer Smith failed to hit Jack Quinn after carrying a streak through 11 games, during which Smith spanked out 15 hits in 44 tries for an average of .341.

Gavvy Cravath is the leading National League batsman. The old Phillie slugger has a mark of .415. Larry Doyle, with Ivy Olson, George Burns, and Benny Kauff scored the most runs, 31, to date. Olson batted out the most hits, 64, and Carson Bigbee is showing the way to the base runners. The speedy Pirate stole 16 bases. Cecil Causey, who won 8 and lost 2 games, tops the hurlers.

The Giants, which is the only major league club not to feel the bristles of the whitewash brush this season, was the first club in the big leagues to tally 200 runs, McGraw's crew scoring their double century during their last victory over the Cubs on June 16.

The following figures are compiled from unofficial sources as published in the different cities of the leagues. They include games played on June 19:

INTERNATIONAL RECORDS.

George Kelly of Rochester Ahead of Other Players in Batting.

George Kelly of Rochester Hustlers is setting the pace for the new International League batters; in 46 games Kelly hit for an average of .394; Otis Lawrey tallied the most runs, 49; Fritz Maisel banged out the most hits to date, 69; while hurler Frank tops the pitchers, winning six games in a row without a lose.

Ed. Miller of Newark has stolen the most bases, 21.

George Whiteman of Maple Leafs set the season's record for run scoring by tallying five runs in the nightcap game at Baltimore, June 17, when Toronto scored 17 runs on Johnson of Baltimore.

RED CROSS TO WIDEN ITS HOME SERVICE

Atlantic Division Head Says Activities with the Army Will Also Continue.

WAR HAS INCREASED TASK

Plans Extensive Program to Better Community Sanitation in This Country.

The announcement that the welfare work of the American Red Cross, following the demobilization of the army and the return to the basis of the regular establishment, will be taken out of the hands of the United War Work Organization does not affect th eactivities of the American Red Cross, according to a statement issued yesterday by Albert W. Staub, acting manager of the Atlantic Division. It is stated in dispatches from Washington that the policy of withdrawing welfare organizations from work with the army has been definitely decided upon by Secretary Baker and the General Staff. It is probable, according to this information, that the work will be taken over by the Morale Branch of the General Staff or committed to the care of the Commission on Training Camp Activities.

"The Red Cross, which is a part of the army organization, will go right on," said Mr. Staub. "Our workers hold commissions and are subject to military discipline. As long as there is service to be rendered, whether abroad or at home, the American Red Cross will be there to render it.

"Aside from our work with the military establishment, we find that there is increasing need for the Red Cross in various fields which have developed as a result of the war, or in those fields which the Red Cross occupies under the normal conditions of peace. In the latter class there is our home service section, which, since the war, has become of greater importance than at any time during the war. At a recent conference of the heads of the Home Service Department held at Atlantic City, a broad program for the extension of this service was outlined. At this conference the Atlantic Division, with its 500 chapters in the States of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, was well represented. Special emphasis was laid upon the necessity of developing the home service department in the small towns and rural communities. Professor E. L. Morgan, who has lately come to the Red Cross on a leave of absence from the Massachusetts State Agricultural College, was able to give the conference a background of the elements of rural life. It is realized that, like the history of the Red Cross in the past, the work of the Home Service Department must be a growth based on a record of specific jobs well done.

"Here in New York and in other larger communities the Home Service is at the height of its activity. Then, again, there is the development of the health program of the Red Cross. Next week, beginning at Niagara Falls, on Tuesday, Red Cross nurses will begin a Summer tour of the Chautauqua circuits in the interest of the Red Cross program for better health and community sanitation. Our teaching centre, at 453 Madison Avenue, is developing the plan of neighborhood health schools, and on Monday night, June 23d, will give its first demonstration in the apartment the Red Cross has rented as a school centre at 510 West Twenty-sixth Street. These classes are attended by the women of the neighborhood, who are taught fundamental lessons in home care of the sick, sanitation, hygiene, and home cooking.

"These are only a few of the outstanding Red Cross activities. The great campaign to combat the spread of disease which is terrorizing Eastern Europe will naturally engage the interest of the American Red Cross. There is great work to do for the Red Cross, greater than ever before in its history. The demobilization of the army will mean that only one phase of this work has been ended. The Red Cross will continue to serve with the Army of Occupation, or wherever the United States Army needs its services, regardless of the withdrawal from the work of other organizations."

Under the caption "New Trades for Old" the Red Cross Institute for Crippled and Disabled Men, 311 Fourth Avenue, has issued the following article by Dr. John C. Parlee, which indicates the kind of reconstruction work being done at the institute.

"A green helper started a press while the pressman was fixing the rollers—now that skilled workman needs a new trade because of a crushed hand. The hot calenders of a paper mill altered the whole future career of a bright young fellow. What that career is to be will depend upon how he can be taught to use the stump of a left arm and an abridged right hand. Three other lads have vivid memories of crunching car wheels that took two legs apiece, besides an arm each, from two of them. The explosion of a bomb at a sham battle cost a young guardsman two hands.

"These are some of the salvage problems that come weekly to the Red Cross Institute for Crippled and Disabled Men. These men may have a foot or two in the grave, but their souls go marching on down the pathway of a reconstructed industrial career. Why should not this possibility be laid before every man who has been the target of the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune? This is the question the Red Cross Institute is trying to bear in upon the consciousness of the public.

"A lad of 17 in North Carolina falsified his age to enable him to enlist to fight the Huns. He was sent to Fort Thomas to be inducted into service. As he stepped from the car he sprained his ankle and was sent to the military hospital. Tonsilitis and appendicitis camped on his trail and then gangrene nipped his fingers and toes and took all the digits of his left hand. Then the Red Cross essayed to do what the Government was technically relieved of doing by his incomplete military status. He was sent to the Red Cross Institute, equipped with a mechanical grip for his left hand, taught oxy-acetylene welding, given part time training in the public school and sent back to Cincinnati to a welding job at 47½ cents an hour—all for an expenditure of $200 and a little pains.

"From selling newspapers on his knees, with its attendant dangers of mendicancy because of the attitude of a well-meaning but uneducated public, to the position of a draftsman in the plant of the largest builders of elevators in the world, is the accomplishment of a year at the institute. Two stout willow legs enable 'happy Felix' to look his fellows level in the eyes. To be sure, he has only one hand, but it is now a skilled hand and his stump of a left arm is a mighty useful instrument for holding his T-square in place. Felix can visit his home in Reading, Penn., with some satisfaction with what patient hours at the drafting board at the institute has brought him.

"An almost identical mishap brought an orphan lad to the doors of the modest brick building at Twenty-third Street and Fourth Avenue, only the abridgement was greater because he had only a short stump of a right arm. He served as an apprentice at the telephone switchboard and is now installed at the private exchange of a Brooklyn hospital. Those who saw him skating on the ice last Winter could hardly realise that he had two artificial legs.

"A fitter fell and injured his left hand in a submarine in the Fore River shipyards. Now he is a welder at better wages than before his injury, because the casualty company had the foresight to have him taught a new trade at the institute, and incidentally saved $3,000 it might have had to pay him in compensation had his disability continued to the full legal period.

"Does the rehabilitation of an injured workman pay?"

APPROVES B.R.T. CAR NOTES

Commissioner Nixon Hopes to Facilitate Improvement in Service.

Public Service Commissioner Lewis Nixon said yesterday that he would approve an order permitting the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company to issue notes to the amount of 80 per cent. of the cost of 200 of the 300 new cars which the company is to use on its surface lines, but before the order is signed the company must submit schedules of the principal and interest amounts involved. The application of the company stated that it was prepared to pay 20 per cent. of the total cost of $1,265,696.30 in cash. The remainder of the cost is to be met by notes which are to fall due at monthly intervals after a fixed date.

"I want to facilitate the purchase of the cars in every possible way," Mr. Nixon said. "That the system needs more cars has been amply shown on several occasions before the commission. It will be possible to have all of the cars in service for the heaviest rush of Winter traffic. They will add greatly to the carrying capacity of the lines and contribute largely to the comfort and convenience of the traveling public."

Delivery of the cars is expected to be completed by the end of October.

IN MEMORY OF POLLARD.

Street in Germany Named After Williams Athlete Killed in War.

WILLIAMSTOWN, June 21.—A street in the German town of Siershan has been named after Lieutenant Frederick D. Pollard, the former Williams football player, who made the supreme sacrifice with the American Army in France a year ago, according to word received by the late athlete's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Pollard of 36 Cherry Street, North Adams, Mass.

Pollard was a member of the class of 1918 at Williams, and he starred at halfback on the football eleven which represented the college in 1915.

SAY TURKS MENACE OUR RELIEF WORKERS

Women Who Sailed from Here Are Held Under Guard for Safety in Asia Minor.

DERINDJE, Asia Minor, April 25, via Paris May 15, (By mail.)—American girls who came direct from New York two months ago to carry food and medical relief to the interior of Asia Minor, Armenia, and the Caucasus, are held up under guard in this small town, which is a short distance from Constantinople. They are not permitted to stray outside a barbed wire enclosure unless accompanied by British soldiers.

Conditions in Asia Minor, Armenia, Persia, and Northern Mesopotamia are in a chaotic state. Armed bands of Turks are still at large. The Turks in the interior are not complying with the terms of the armistice, and still retain their rifles and ammunition.

Recently members of the Balkan Commission of the American Red Cross visited Derindje in time to witness the return from Aleppo of a party of young women of the Near East Relief Commission. The party reached Aleppo on a train guarded by English soldiers, but the army authorities at that point refused to guarantee their safety in the interior, declaring that it would be murder to allow them to proceed at that time.

At tea one afternoon British officers expressed amazement that American girls intended to go into the Caucasus.

"We have just returned from the interior," said an officer quietly. "Fortunately, four of us escaped, but the rest of our train, some twenty-odd men, were killed by the Kurds. The interior of the Caucasus region is not the safest place just yet for either American or English 'sisters.'"

Wherever American relief paries have landed on the north shores of the Black Sea and the south shore of the Marmora Sea, British soldiers are assigned to guard them.

At Derindje, "the star people," as the Committee for Relief in the Near East is known out here, have a former German camp. Their supplies are being unloaded into two large two-story warehouses with docks on one side and railroad sidings on the other.

Some of the Near East women relief workers are housed on Prinkipo Island, to which the Bolsheviki recently were invited to confer with an allied peace mission. On Prinkipo Island are about 1,500 interned Germans who are waiting their transfer to Germany. Some of the German officers are housed in the same hotel with the American Red Cross personnel. They behave themselves in true Prussian style, it is said, studying the Americans with their monocles screwed up tightly in their eyes.

American Red Cross men have found the Armenian sections of all Turkish towns in ruins, with the skeletons of Armenians killed by the Turks still lying within them.

The Near East Commission proposes to establish twenty-five centres or more in Armenia, Mesopotamia, Persia, and Asia Minor. Fifteen hospitals, of hundreds of beds each, will be established, and centres of food and medical distribution will be set up at Samsoon, Trebizond, Beirut, Harput, Erivan, Aleppo, Derindje, and other centres in the Caucasus.

Helps you secure a home and helps you pay for it

A life insurance company can perform no greater service than to aid its policyholders in securing homes and also to enable them to safeguard those homes through insurance-protection.

That is exactly what is now being done for its policyholders by the

POSTAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

The Company sometime since acquired by foreclosure, select holdings in a well-known Long Island subdivision of New York City, and has now perfected plans for cooperating with present and prospective policyholders so that sites may be secured and homes built as desired under most attractive arrangements. The subdivision is

SPRINGFIELD GARDENS

"Just beyond Jamaica"

This attractive spot is only twenty-five minutes from Manhattan or Brooklyn. Like Jamaica, it is reached by both branches of the Long Island Electric—one from the Flatbush Avenue Station, Brooklyn, and the other from the Pennsylvania Station, Manhattan, with no stops except at Jamaica, and with terminals at Rockaway Beach and Long Beach. There are also trolley lines near the property and fine roads throughout the suburb, with Merrick Boulevard nearby.

SPRINGFIELD GARDENS is an established community, with two churches, a good public school and public library and with water, gas, electric lighting and all conveniences.

SPECIAL PROTECTIVE ARRANGEMENT

Lots for home-building may be secured on reasonable terms, and if by any chance the policyholder dies, any obligation to make further payments will be cancelled and the debt be considered fully paid off.

Policyholders, builders and others desiring fuller information are invited to visit the property or communicate with the Company personally or by letter.

THE NEW Studebaker
BIG-SIX

A BIG, impressive seven-passenger car of 126-inch wheelbase, 60-horsepower motor, and a chassis so perfectly balanced that it holds to the road smoothly at all speeds.

Wide seats and deep cushions are upholstered in genuine hand-buffed leather; wide opening doors, plenty of leg room front and rear.

Equipment includes cord tires, shock absorbers, Gypsy top with oval plate glass windows in rear, silver-faced magnetic speedometer, ammeter and jeweled 8-day clock, glove box in back of front seat, handy extension tonneau lamp and many other conveniences appreciated by all motorists.

The new Studebaker Service and Repair Station, 219-223 West 77th Street, between Broadway and Amsterdam Avenue, has been established by factory experts to make the ownership of a Studebaker car a matter of permanent satisfaction.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Prices Advance Vigorously at Start, React Slightly Later—Bank Condition Improved.

Stocks again advanced vigorously during a good part of yesterday's short session. Industrials and rails both displayed strength for the first hour and a quarter, advances being general and well distributed throughout the list. In the last half hour, however, a good deal of selling, doubtless profit taking, appeared, and while a majority of issues finished the day at good net gains, most of them were off a point or so from the high levels of the day. The market, on the whole, was strong and the undertone was very good, even during the late selling movement.

In most places in the financial district there is no doubt entertained that Germany will sign the peace treaty. For that matter, there never has been serious doubt that this ultimately would be done and, probably for this reason, the trend of negotiations has had less influence on the stock market than might have been expected. For the last two or three days the imminence of the actual signing has played a part in stimulating the market, and, by the same token, this very situation undoubtedly worked to bring out the late selling yesterday, for among traders there was a belief that the recent rise had about discounted the official restoration of peace and there were many who looked for a reaction as soon as this is accomplished.

It is axiomatic in Wall Street that stocks react on the realization of the "good news." So, it was argued, if the Germans have definitely agreed to the Allies' terms, by the opening of tomorrow's business the market, to be conventional, ought to sell off for the time being. This process of reasoning led the traders to lighten their commitments before the close of yesterday's market, and accounts for the pressure of sales toward the end.

The bank statement, published after the closing of the market, was looked for with unusual interest, because of the poor showing of the previous week, when the banks reported a deficit of $656,050 in the actual statement. Yesterday's exhibit showed that the deficit had been entirely overcome, and in its place established a surplus of $30,408,530. Loans were reduced $205,606,000 and demand deposits were down $128,396,000. Comparison with the average statement, which showed a falling off in loans of $104,721,000, or little more than half of the contraction in the loan account of the actual display, makes it evident that efforts to improve the bank situation were continued throughout the week.

The Federal Reserve Bank's statement also supplied an interesting display. Member banks' rediscounts of bills secured by Government obligations were reduced by $45,598,882 on the week, which brings the total contraction in this item since May 16, the last high-water mark, up to $208,440,622. Other rediscounts increased $9,137,911, while bills purchased in the open market increased $8,956,165, to $80,948,596, the largest total to be reported since that of the week of Jan. 31 last.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Railway Equipment Exports.

Exports of locomotives and track materials in the month of April, according to figures compiled by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, show some improvement. Fifty-five locomotives, valued at approximately $2,195,000, were shipped in the course of the month, and there was an increase in the amount and value of the track material exported over March totals. Of the locomotives sent out of the United States, 12 went to Cuba, 10 to Italy, 8 to France, 8 to Japanese China, 5 to China, and 5 to Canada, the balance going to Japan and South American countries. In equipment circles this is interpreted as a forerunner of the heavy shipments which will be made in months to come, as deliveries of the big orders placed by foreign buyers with American manufacturers begin.

Extra Compensation Allowances.

The amount of extra compensation allowed to the railroads by the Railroad Administration is small when compared with the total asked for by the carriers. To date some $3,000,000 has been granted under this head, against the approximate $70,000,000 asked for by the carriers. That many of the cases will be taken to the Court of Claims by the individual carriers is generally known, and it is expected that the attendant litigation will stretch over a considerable period after the termination of Federal control.

Traffic Improvement Reported.

Some of the Central Western and Northwest railroad companies report improvement in traffic in the first week of June, and from incomplete returns from the Southern district it would appear that the same condition obtained there. In the West the greatest gain was apparently in livestock and grain, while cotton movement in the South improved the showing. In the Eastern part of the country, freight traffic remains sub-normal, according to reports from a number of the big roads. Passenger traffic, on the other hand, continues to show a definite increase. The vacation season is coming on, and railroad men look forward to a Summer such as they have not seen for several years.

Rails Close Firm.

The trend of prices in the railroad group yesterday was definitely upward, and while the gains were not large a majority of the issues moved into higher ground on a comparatively small turnover. Such issues as Reading and Southern Pacific, which had a fair speculative following through the better part of the week, showed the effect of profit-taking in the half holiday session and closed fractionally lower. There was also evidence that those who were timid over the possible refusal of the Germans to sign the peace terms were easing their commitments over the week-end.

A Strong Market.

There was a pronounced degree of strength throughout yesterday's trading with a number of issues continuing their advance to new high levels. The more favorable foreign situation was an underlying factor in creating confidence. While most of the issues closed off from their high for the day, the recessions still left substantial gains as the net result. The declines were brought about by profit-taking on a liberal scale, but the selling was rather easily absorbed.

Industrial Company Assets.

Even though the advance in the stock market has carried issues many points above those recorded in the early part of the year, a perusal of the assets of some of the industrial companies raises doubts as to whether the market values have discounted the strengthened financial condition which has been brought about during the last three years. In the matter of working capital alone, the figures of the present are far in excess of those which were put forth in annual reports of several years ago. In some cases this increase has been almost phenomenal. Taking the assets as a whole, it is apparent that the values behind the common shares, after providing for bonds and preferred stocks, are in many cases double and sometimes treble the present market price for the shares.

Russian Bonds Gain.

The Russian external 6½ bonds, which are in default, gained 2½ points yesterday, the close being at 60 as compared with 57½ on Friday. These bonds are now selling at a 40 per cent. discount, and for those who have faith in the ability and intention of the Russian Government to liquidate its debt, they present an attractive speculation. The representative of the Kolchak Government in this country has recently said that the statements of Admiral Kolchak indicate that the external loans will be paid.

Export Steel Business.

Coincident with the increased domestic demand for steel products is a desire on the part of foreign purchasers to place orders. Some large tonnages for foreign account, it is believed, will be placed with American manufacturers in the near future. On a moderate scale the increase in exports has already begun. The American manufacturers are now quite favorably situated to engage in competition for the world trade. The British manufacturers are still hampered by high costs, and while they can perhaps manage to hold the English trade they are not in a position to successfully bid against the manufacturers of this country for other business.

Cities Service Company Shows Gain.

The earnings statement of the Cities Service Company for the twelve months ended with May 31, 1919, shows gross earnings of $21,774,547, as compared with $20,487,577 in the corresponding period a year before. After the payment of expenses, interest charges and dividends on the preferred stock net available for the common stock was $20,084,304, which was equal to 54.94 per cent. on the average amount of stock outstanding as compared with 60.90 in the corresponding period of last year.

LIST WAR FINANCE NOTES.

Issue of $200,000,000 to be Handled on Stock Exchange.

War Finance Corporation 5 per cent. notes to the amount of $200,000,000, which were issued April 1, will soon be listed for trading on the New York Stock Exchange, and it is expected that in the ensuing nine months in which the notes will run, placing the issue on the big board will stimulate interest in these securities, which carry tax exemptions making them particularly attractive. It is understood that the application to list the notes has been made and granted, and that only the final announcement by the War Finance Corporation is awaited.

The issue in question was put out about three months ago at a time considered as inopportune because of the proximity of the Victory Liberty Loan campaign, and the fact that at the time of issue the rate on the war bonds had not been made public. However, on April 10 it was announced that the total subscription to the notes was $185,692,000. Immediately following the sale there was no market to speak of for the notes, and, of course, they were quiet during the Victory bond campaign, but in recent weeks interest in the issue has revived, and steps were taken for their listing.

Proceeds from the sale of the notes were used in part to make advances to the railroads. They are selling now in the open market at 99⅞.

Brunswick-Balke-Collende. Report.

The annual report of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company for last year shows a surplus after charges of $1,162,562, or the equivalent, after preferred dividends, of $13.73 a share on the common stock. This compares with a surplus of $1,211,889 in the preceding year.

PRESS MEETINGS THIS WEEK

Three Conventions to Gather at Saratoga Springs.

Three press conventions, those of the Associated Daily Newspapers of the State, the State Press Association, and the Republican Editorial Association will be held at Saratoga Springs this week, commencing Wednesday and concluding Saturday.

Among the speakers who will be present at the State Press Convention will be Colonel George Harvey of the North American Review and Harvey's Weekly, and Chancellor James R. Day of Syracuse University. General S. F. Ansell of the War Department and James Schermerhorn, editor of The Detroit Times, will be among the speakers at the State Press dinner on Friday night.

Among the other speakers who will address the convention are Morris A. Hughes, Vice President of the American Press Association; Frank E. Gannett, editor of The Rochester Times-Union, and John A. Sleicher, editor of Leslie's Weekly.

The Republican Editorial Association Convention, which will be held on Saturday, will be addressed by Senator James E. Watson of Indiana; George B. Lockwood, editor of the National Republican; John A. Sleicher, editor of Leslie's Weekly, and Will H. Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Weigh San Francisco Railway Plan.

A plan for the reorganization of the United Railroads of San Francisco is now before the California Railroad Commission for decision. It is reported that the plan will probably meet with the approval of this body, a formal statement of its viewpoint being expected within a few days. Under the plan as agreed upon the bonded indebtedness of the company will be $15,000,000 or less than half of the present debt.

EXPECT EVEN HIGHER PRICES FOR COTTON

SEE LARGE FOREIGN DEMAND

Rumor in Market Is That Several Large Vessels May Be Released Soon for Commerce.

The turn in the cotton market last week, which carried prices to new high records for the season, has caused predictions of even higher prices. Some declare that the staple will sell above the records of last year, when cotton went to more than 34 cents a pound.

In May, when the big rise, which started in the first week of March, culminated after taking cotton up $50 to $60 a bale, many cotton men thought the high prices for the year had been reached, but now, with this latest advance surpassing the May prices, they are less certain of this. Even the low-price people are wondering if there is not something in the contention of Southern spot dealers that 35, or even 40, cents a pound will be realized before the year is out.

The dealers say it is a question of supply and demand. The world is expected to demand at least 17,000,000 bales of American cotton this year. Divided roughly, this demand is expected to be as follows: United States, 7,500,000 bales; Europe, 8,500,000 bales; other parts of the world at least 1,000,000 bales. Cotton men say that is the minimum. The supply is expected to equal that demand. The American crop for this year is estimated now at approximately 12,500,000 bales, and the carry-over by Aug. 1, the end of the cotton season, can hardly be much in excess of 4,500,000 bales, the dealers say.

There was on hand on June 1 about 6,550,000 bales. Out of this stock the June American mill consumption will probably run close to, if not in excess of, 500,000 bales, and exports at the present rate of outgo will probably take 550,000 bales. That would leave 5,000,000 bales on hand at the end of this month, and the July requirements are likely to be greater than the June demand, so that by Aug. 1 the amount of cotton on hand will not be much in excess of 4,500,000 bales, if it is that much. Most market men agree upon these figures.

Thus, a demand this year for 17,000,000 bales will be hard to meet, they say. If the growing crop comes up to expectations there will just be about enough to go around. If, on the contrary, anything happens to the growing crop there will be a shortage. They declare it is not probable that there will be any "carry-over," unless the European demand falls far short of expectations.

The marketers say there is every reason for expecting that this demand will be greater than the predicted figures. England will want at least 3,000,000 bales, and probably more. Germany, if she is restored to trading privileges and can find the credits with which to pay for supplies, will probably want about 4,000,000 bales, and France, Belgium, Italy, Poland, and the new countries will be clamoring for the staple.

The American Cotton Export Corporation, the first of the great corporations formed to direct the forwarding of American goods to Europe, has been formed, with an authorized capital of $100,000,000. This company is to be the general agent for the whole Southern cotton industry, and its stock is to be apportioned among all the Southern States.

The initial call for stock subscriptions was sent out last week. The call was for $25,000,000, distributed among the cotton States as follows: Texas, $7,500,000; Georgia, $2,500,000; $2,000,000 each from Alabama, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and Mississippi; $3,000,000 from Louisiana; $1,500,000 each from Tennessee and South Carolina, and $1,000,000 from North Carolina. Later, it is understood, additional capital will be called on this allocation as may be required.

The movement of cotton abroad has been increasing steadily lately. The export clearances reported for the last week, which totalled 137,741 bales, were the largest for any week this year. In the week previous the exports totalled 138,530 bales, with one exception the largest for any week to that time.

Gossip in the trade has it that several ships now being used for other purposes are soon to be turned back into the mercantile service. The Leviathan is said to be among them. One report circulated in the trade last week was that the Leviathan was on her final trip as a troop ship and that when she returned to New York, in about three weeks, she would be refitted as a commercial vessel.

Oil In Kansas

Indications multiply to show that the general oil zone of Kansas is much more extensive than was at first thought possible. The remarkable developments in the Augusta, Eldorado, Towanda, Butler County and Franklin County districts may be overshadowed within the next few months by the exploitation and development of the great indicated areas in Ellsworth, Lincoln, Clay, Barton, Sedgwick, Elk, Wilson, Greenwood and other counties. In nearly all of these newer districts drilling is under way, and in some the oil sands have already been tapped.

British Victory and Funding Bonds

Owing to the low rate of exchange, why not invest in the four per cent. British Funding Loan and Victory Bonds? The issue price to be £80 and £85 for each £100 par value, which, at the current rate of exchange, approximates $75.10 and $80.10 with an increased proportionate yield on investment. The bonds are free of British income and super tax to all bonafide non-residents of Great Britain.

The Victory Bonds are accepted in payment of British death duties at their face value. The Funding Loan (stocks and bonds) will be accepted for British death duties at £80 for each £100 par value.

The Anglo-South American Bank, Limited, will be glad to transmit applications through its head office in London, which will hold securities in safe custody if desired, and collect interest and drawn bonds free of charge.

Our officers will be glad to give further information regarding these bonds.

COTTON MARKET STRONG AND ACTIVE

Buying Sends Prices Above Friday's Close, but Profit-Taking Cuts Down Advance.

RALLY MARKS THE CLOSE

There was much activity in yesterday's cotton market, and in the first hour there was considerable strength, with prices not far below the high levels reached on Friday, when all of the new crop options sold at the highest figures recorded for the season. Local and Southern cotton people and Wall Street and Western speculators were buyers, and the chief source of supply came from Liverpool. The buying in the first hour was considerably better than the selling, and sent prices up 40 or 50 points above Friday's closing. Poor weather over most of the belt, with fairly considerable rains in the western part, aided the bulls at this time.

In the second hour, however, profit-taking and week-end evening up, added to the selling from abroad, forced the market down again, taking it slightly below the previous day's closing figures. The foreign selling was based mainly on reported labor troubles at Manchester, where operatives are said to be again making demands for higher wages and shorter working hours. At the close the market rallied again, and finished the day about 10 points below the highest and 20 to 40 points higher than at the close on Friday.

The trade was generally bullish. The weather forecast was for fair weather over Sunday, but it is felt that there will have to be a long run of good weather to make up for all the rains the belt has been suffering from the past month or six weeks.

The statistical position of cotton, as figured by The Financial Chronicle, is as follows:

Oil in South America

Americans should know more about the natural resources of South America. The articles on the oil resources of South America by Frederick G. Clapp, recently published by The New York Commercial, have been exhausted. Owing to the demand for new issues in which the articles appeared, Mr. Clapp's articles have now been published in pamphlet form and will be sent free of cost to those sending their names and addresses to The New York Commercial, 38 Park Row, New York City.

Restricting Immigration on a Percentage Basis

PROBLEMS of immigration are discussed in the leading article in tomorrow's issue of The Annalist. There is an explanation of the suggested system by which the number of immigrants to be admitted would be restricted to such a percentage of each people as can be Americanized. Sponsors of this plan defend it against the charge that it is pro-Japanese.

The continuing bull market is a puzzle even to Wall Street. It is discussed in another article, the author believing that the dangers in the past that have attended a collapse have been averted by heavy margins, while tight money rates have checked wide speculation.

To All Manufacturers of Women's Wear

WHEN you are short on salesmen and don't know where to turn—

When you have a surplus stock of certain goods that you would give almost anything to dispose of—

When you have some brand-new novelty that you know the buyers will be wild to get, if only you can tell them all about it—

When you want to enlarge your field of prospects—increase your business and make up for smaller profits—

Then call on the one salesman who can get you the attention of the most important buyers in over 5000 towns and cities—who "gets in" to the buyer's office to give terms and fullest details—who does the work of dozens of men, with no "off days"—and who brings back the orders with the smallest possible "expense account"—

If you are a buyer who must renew depleted stocks without delay, an announcement of your needs in the Buyers' Wants column of The New York Times Business Page will promptly bring you offerings of the merchandise you require.

The Merchant's Point of View

WHEN about 80 cents' worth of cotton run through an automatic loom can be sold at wholesale to converters for $1.08, and a pound of wool costing about $1.75 turned into cloth fetches $4 or more at the mill, the question is raised, What is an adequate or reasonable margin of profit? And the same inquiry comes to the minds of many as regards the garments into which the fabrics are put, with each stage of manufacture showing a proportionate increase in profit taking, all of which has to be paid by a consumer. It is conceded everywhere that prices are inflated and the profits inordinate, but the claim is made that the result arises from the unchecked working of the law of supply and demand, and that it is good business "to make hay while the sun shines." The Information and Education Service of the Department of Labor has been trying to get the opinions of business men, bankers, and editors as to the probable course of future prices. Thus far the greater number of those asked have expressed the view that the high prices will last a long time. Some even profess to believe that this will be a good thing. One response put this on the basis of justice. The argument was that the Government borrowed billions of dollars at a time when prices were high and that if prices receded the billions would have to be paid back at twice their present value. Therefore, the prices should be kept up so that the bonds should be paid in money of the same value as that with which they were purchased. As a matter of fact, however, prices are now higher than they were when the bonds were sold, it will be years before the bonds are paid, and the query still is how long will the public submit to the excessive charges.

Angles of the Dye Situation. During the past week the dye manufacturers argued before the Ways and Means Committee in Washington the need of legislation to permit foreign dyes to come in only under license. They insisted that the mere raising of the duties would not afford protection to the domestic industry. Conferences were also held with members of the War Trade Board as to the present alleged large importations of colors, mainly from Switzerland. It is believed that many of these dyes are really of German origin, and the idea is to prevent their coming in here. On the other hand, the official organ of the Manufacturers' Club of Philadelphia came out with a pronouncement against the plan to restrict dye imports by a system of licenses on the grounds that it was fundamentally wrong from an economic standpoint and that there is no need for it because domestic users would not import more than they actually need of the special dyes which are not made here. Rather disquieting in its way was the report of the Tariff Commission. While this showed an increase of 24 per cent. in the quantity of dyes produced in this country in 1918 over that in 1917, it appears that was almost wholly in those most easily made, like the sulphur colors, and in indigo. The domestic concerns are making so much of these that they are exporting vast quantities on an extremely profitable basis. They do not appear to have made much, if any, progress with what are known as vat colors, which are absolutely essential because of their fastness. It will be a pity if the dye concerns show any disposition simply to pile up profits under a system designed to keep out foreign dyes and do not strain a point to produce colors whose making is more difficult and out of which they cannot hope to make as big profits as they can with those they are now producing.

British to Tackle Combines. Great Britain is having on her hands the same problem which has vexed the people of this country for a score of years or more, that of dealing with large business combinations. The tendency in that direction over there has been especially marked since the declaration of the armistice, and it really follows logically the combinations in various industries which the successful prosecution of the war made it imperative for the Government to insist on. The associations or combinations are of divers kinds. One of them, the Dye Trust, has the Government itself as a contributor to capital with a voice in its management. Another, the amalgamation of oil companies with a capital of more than $110,000,000, has a quasi public sanction. Other organizations fix prices to be charged, have regulations with regard to tenders for contracts, or eliminate outside competition by imposing restrictive conditions on purchasers. Many regulate output by allotting to each member a fixed percentage of the total production, with fines for exceeding this and compensation for falling short, the fines to be paid into a pool and the compensation drawn from it. In the last-mentioned cases a producer may close his factory and be paid for doing so, just as was the case here years ago in regard to the old Sugar Trust and the steel rail pool. The whole subject has been reported on by a committee appointed by the ministry of reconstruction. It suggests that official machinery be established for investigating the combinations, that means should be provided for giving the fullest publicity to their activities and an inquiry had of any complaints with regard to the existence or actions of these bodies.

Want No Economic Invasion. There are more kinds of invasion than one. Of this the French are thoroughly convinced. And they are determined to run no more chances on having their country subjected to economic invasion from Germany than to have the troops of the latter again pollute the soil with their presence. Fortunately for them, to accomplish this purpose does not require any concert of action with other powers, but is wholly a matter of domestic policy. The first steps toward accomplishing the purpose have already been taken in the promulgation of a law providing for the creation of a commercial register within the jurisdiction of every commercial or civil law court. In this register must be enrolled French and foreign tradesmen or commercial companies having an establishment, a branch, or an agency in France. Detailed information must be given of names and ages of persons, their places of birth, their original nationality, and, in case of change of nationality, how and when this was done. In the case of a foreigner the record must show the date of the decree authorizing him to reside in France. Other information must be furnished showing the objects of the trade, the situation of branch offices, and former commercial connections. Companies must give names of shareholders, sleeping partners and directors, and full particulars about these individuals. Penalties are provided for giving inexact information. These include both fines and imprisonment. Official scrutiny of these details will enable the French to stop the foreign domination of the domestic industries in the manner in which the Germans were wont to do before the war, and which they felt sure of doing again after the signing of the terms of peace.

Selling of Used Machine Tools. From appeals and representations sent to Washington it would appear that the manufacturers of machine tools have a grievance. Their business showed a marvelous increase after the beginning of the world war. The demand was both from abroad and domestic, as the tools were urgently needed in unlimited quantity for implements of warfare, and for other requirements of combatants. Every shop worked overtime, and the profits were enormous. A great slump came when the war ended. The demand ceased and every Government had on hand a surplus of both new and used tools of every description. The first difficulty was as to the disposition of the new tools. The manufacturers insisted that these articles should not be put on the market for sale, as such disposition would break prices. So an arrangement was made whereby they were offered first to those who had made them, and in case of nonacceptance, to others allied to the makers. In this way, it was figured out, the offerings would be gradually absorbed at high prices. But when it came to the disposition of the used tools another difficulty was met with. This was the refusal of the makers to take them back. So it was proposed to sell these used tools abroad, and this has brought out the remonstrances referred to. Cincinnati is the storm centre, because that is the headquarters of the industry. European agencies of the manufacturers strenuously oppose any "dumping" of these tools. They say the proceeding will spoil the export business in the articles, and that, furthermore, the reputation of the goods will be injured by having partly worn-out tools brought into use where their performance will contrast with that of new ones made in Germany. Considering the short period during which the tools were used, this does not say much for their durability. But possibly this aspect did not occur to those making the present pleas.

Crop Prospects and Cotton Fabrics. Not that it probably made any difference in the betting on the exchanges as to the prices to be quoted on cotton, but there were a number of occurrences during the last week to encourage the notion that recent high levels can be maintained. Spot selling in the growing districts has been quite brisk when the material could be had, and exports have been growing with the added facilities of increasing ship tonnage. The nearer approach of peace, of course, another factor. Then, too, the prospects of this year's crop in Texas and Oklahoma have not brightened any, owing to the weather conditions in those States. But domestic consumption has slowed down considerably and it begins to look as though the carryover at the end of next month would be rather larger than was anticipated. The ability of holders down South to carry cotton remains as great as ever, however, and it is conceded there will be no forced selling to carry down the price. Owing to the backwardness of this year's crop, there is as yet no way of estimating the probable yield even approximately. The goods market does not seem perturbed by any uncertainties, the prices prevailing being high enough to allow a substantial profit even though the cost of the raw material goes higher than it ever has. While the selling, except by second hands, has not been particularly lively, this is not due to any absence of demand but rather to the disinclination of the mills to contract ahead too far. All kinds of finished goods are in request, with price a secondary consideration.

Sales of Wool and Woolens. Sales of wool at auction were had in Boston and London during the week. At each place the principal call was for the finer varities. In Boston a record price was obtained for short 70s combing Sidney wool, it bringing $1.01 in the grease, equivalent to $2.40 on a clean basis. The last of the Government's auctions for the season will be held in Philadelphia this week when 7,000,000 pounds of Cape wool will be offered. Then the auctions will be suspended to enable the domestic clip to be marketed without this competition. All the indications point to a successful season for the wool growers. Contrary to what is the case regarding cotton, the consumption of wool in the domestic mills is growing steadily and the output of fabrics promises to be exceedingly great, despite the lateness of their starting. Complaint is still made of slow deliveries, but not much fear is expressed of a lack of goods for both men's and women's wear. Conditions have favored the getting of high prices and the circumstance seems to have been taken full advantage of. The cutters-up are busy on orders, and more of the clothing manufacturers have ceased soliciting new business. No one, however, need feel apprehensive that there will not be enough garments to supply all needs, domestic and foreign, all statements to the contrary notwithstanding.

PROPER TRAINING OF STORE WORKERS

The Purpose of a School to be Opened by New York University in the Fall.

One of the most important movements that in recent years have grown out of the need of more comprehensive training of store employes, especially those who come in contact with the public, is that which began in this city last January, and which will culminate this Fall in the opening by New York University of a training school for teachers of retail selling. While to some extent the course to be offered by the University will parallel that given by other training schools—notably the Union School of Salesmanship in Boston—it will be unique in many respects. So far as known, the course will be the first of its particular kind ever offered by a university in this country.

The director of the school has not yet been chosen, according to Chancellor Brown, who said yesterday, however, that an appointment would probably be made within the next two or three weeks. From another source it was learned that the course would be given at the School of Commerce in the University Building on Waverley Place. How many will avail themselves of the course of study remains to be seen, but it was said that many inquiries concerning it had been received from all over the country.

The course to be given is the outcome of a co-operative movement in which will participate New York University, the City Department of Education, and prominent local retail dry goods merchants. The co-operation of the Department of Education lies in the promise of its Superintendent to accept the graduates of the school as teachers for its high school courses in salesmanship, which are already in operation in the Julia Richmond and Newtown High Schools. The merchants have promised their financial support to the project, their advice, and to take into their stores both graduates and under-graduates of the school. The benefits of the movement, which is called the New York Plan, include the raising of the occupation of retail salesman from unskilled to skilled. Indirectly, the training to be given is expected to do away with inferior merchandise, to lead to sales on merit and service, and to inspire greater confidence between the retailer and his customers.

A comprehensive course of study has been outlined, and the subjects to be dealt with include such important topics as business ethics, store organization, the language of business, general science, arithmetic and elementary bookkeeping, distribution and management, textiles, non-textiles, salesmanship, color and design, methods of training, and personnel relations. Lectures on these topics will be given during the morning. In the afternoon the teachers in training will be employed at practical work in the stores that have pledged themselves to aid the project.

The completion of the course will require two years, and it is suggested that the degree of Master of Science in Retail Selling be given to students who meet the requirements imposed by the State of New York. At the completion of the course there will be issued to those who have met the required conditions certificates in retail selling signed by the Advisory Council of the school and the University Corporation. Students desiring to take up the work must either have completed a college course or the equivalent to one in fundamental training. Personality, business experience, &c., will also be determining factors of admission to the course.

Outlining the work to be done, the prospectus of the new school says: "The object is to advance retail selling through education and through emphasis on the ethical standards of business in the following ways: To train teachers in retail selling for (a) public high schools; (b) retail stores; to train employes of the retail stores for executive positions, to do special research work for the department managers of retail stores."

The school is to be directed by an advisory council which, according to the prospectus, "shall be composed of one representative from each of the contributing organizations, three representatives from New York University, and two representatives from the Department of Education. This advisory council is to have an Executive Committee of ten, composed of six representatives chosen from the contributing members, one of them being a representative of a retail selling organization that is not a department store; two members chosen from the university by the university, and two members chosen from the Department of Education by the Department of Education.

The functions of the Advisory Council and the university in relation to the school are outlined by the prospectus, which also sets forth the personnel of the staff. This is to consist of a Director, who is to be in general charge, who shall give close supervision to all branches of the work, and who shall be responsible for proper publicity. An Assistant Director is also provided for. His duties will consist in acting as coordinator, and seeing that the work of the students in the stores and in the class room is properly conducted. The personnel requirements also call for instructors of such special subjects as textile, non-textile, store organization, store system and business ethics, as well as for instructors of regular subjects of the university, revised to meet the special needs of retail selling.

In view of the success that is being met with by graduates of the Union School of Salesmanship in Boston, the New York University course will be watched in retail circles with particular interest. The Union School was founded some time ago by Mrs. Lucinda W. Prince, Educational Director of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, and now has about 200 graduates in the field. Individual stores are employing from one to four of these graduates, and the fact that there are not enough to go around is attested to by the list of stores waiting to obtain them.

It is not only in this country that the need of properly trained retail salesmen and saleswomen is realized, for since last September there have been classes for this purpose given in the Central School for Arts and Crafts in Southampton Row, London. These classes have dealt with the study of merchandise and the art of selling and, while they have so far been more or less experimental in character, the belief exists that the results obtained through them are sufficient to assure their being made permanent.

Bulk Buying for Germany.

An American commercial traveler representing one of the largest cereal manufacturers in the United States, according to Consul General Albert Halstead at Stockholm, Sweden, states that there is a project now under way whereby the purchase from the northern neutrals of foodstuffs and other commodities for Germany is to be made by one central organization, acting in the interests of German buyers. Whether this is with a view of defeating the low rate of German exchange or whether it is intended to eliminate the competition among German buyers and obtain lower prices for goods imported is not clear.

Germans Ask Work in Sweden.

Many inquiries have been received in Sweden from German engineers desiring positions in Swedish factories. It is reported, writes Consul General Albert Halstead at Stockholm, that Swedish nationals are being dismissed from positions in Germany to make room for Germans returning from the armies. Merchants are receiving applications from German clerks offering to work at low wages. The possibility of engineers securing positions is not large, because there is an ample supply of Swedish engineers.

Repeal Italian Export Tax.

The special tax placed on goods exported from Italy has been abolished. This tax, termed a concession tax, was collected on all goods under embargo which were granted an export license. It was imposed to take the place of the general export duty on all goods.

RAW SILK MARKETS.

Prices continue to advance in the Yokohama raw silk market, due to the heavy demand and extremely light supply. Sinshiu No. 1 is now being quoted at 2,200 yen per picul, which is equal to $8.30 a pound in New York. This is the highest price ever quoted on the silk in question, yet as further advance is regarded imminent as a result of heavy buying for American account. Visible stock at Yokohama is reported to have dropped to 6,000 bales, and late cables say that the first crop of Japanese silk for 1919 will be from 15 to 20 per cent. lighter than the corresponding crop for 1918.

Reports received from Canton by A. P. Villa & Brothers, Inc., of this city say that prices are advancing there, and that it is difficult to buy because American and European buyers have cleaned up about everything to be had. In Shanghai the activity continues for all grades of silk, and the very best grades of steam filatures are now quoted at $10 a pound. The demand for tsatlees and tussahs has also improved, and prices have advanced accordingly.

Prices on Italian silks continue unchanged in the Milan market, but they are very firmly sustained. In the local market a large business has been done during the last week, and manufacturers are now buying silk for delivery as far ahead as December. This is evidently being done in the belief that, owing to the expansion of business, there will be no drop in prices for a long time to come.

EARLY BUYING ADVISED.

Early buying of Fall lines of women's ready-to-wear garments is advised by David N. Mosessohn, Executive Director of the Associated Dress Industries of America. This is what he had to say yesterday in substantiation of his advice:

"The condition of the market at the present time is such that the belated buyer will find himself either without merchandise or in the position of taking what he can get. This is outside of the fact that all ready-to-wear merchandise is increasing in cost, due to the market conditions in silks, cottons, &c. I would most urgently advise that buyers throughout the country reach their markets as early as possible, even before the 1st of July, in order to secure whatever merchandise they may need. This is especially true of dresses. The demands for women's ready-to-wear dresses are unprecedented, especially in view of the many new styles and the attractive materials used."

Mr. Mosessohn also stated that the Associated Dress Industries of America had recently started a movement to close the showrooms and factories on Saturdays during July and August, and that a large percentage of the members had agreed to do so. The idea was to distribute the 44-hour week over five days, so that both the employers and the employes might have two days' rest each week during the hot-weather period.

GRAY GOODS PRICES FIRM.

Second Hands Are Securing Them Equally with the Mills.

While business in the local gray goods market yesterday showed signs of a Summer Saturday apathy, prices were very well sustained, and the sales that were made were put through at top figures. Most of the selling was done by first hands, and in cases where second hands sold they did so at prices fully equal to those got by the mills.

The best that could be done yesterday for any delivery of 38½-inch 64-60s appeared to be 16 cents, while sales of 39-inch 68-72s and 72-76s were made at 19 and 21 cents, respectively, for shipment in July, August and September. For similar delivery business was done on 5.50 sheetings at 13 cents, and some of these goods also sold at that price for October. Against this, however, a number of the mills are asking 13¼ cents for them.

One of the firmest quarters of the trade is that which has to do with the clothing numbers. It was said yesterday that these goods are so "tight" that sellers can get practically any price they ask for them, especially if the deliveries are at all nearby. Never before in the history of the State, it was asserted, has this branch of the market been more completely dominated by concerns that either hold these cloths or can make them.

BILL FOR LUXURY TAX.

Separate One for It Should Be Had by Garment Retailers.

In a bulletin to its members the National Garment Retailers' Association advises that in purchasing fur trimmed garments a separate bill for the tax be requested from the manufacturer. If taxable garments with the tax included in the price are bought, it is pointed out, the rtailer is apt to find that he is paying more than if the tax was billed separately, for the manufacturer may take a mark-up on the tax. The manufacturer is permitted to bill the tax separately or include it in the price of the garment.

The bulletin also explains that the revenue bill in plain words requires that if the fur alone on a garment costs more than any other single item of material, a tax of 10 per cent. on the whole cost of the garment must be paid by the manufacturer.

The association in the same bulletin urges members not to accept net bills and sacrifice discounts. While this may save a few dollars at the present time, it is explained that a bad precedent is thereby established.

German Scientific Book Imports.

The War Trade Board has announced that applications will be considered for licenses to import into this country from Germany or elsewhere scientific books and journals which were printed in Germany. Licenses covering such importations will not, however, be issued until the importer in the United States has made effective arrangements to make the purchase price of such books or journals available for the purchase of foodstuffs for Germany by depositing it with the American Relief Administration. The duplicate receipt issued by the American Relief Administration must be submitted to the Bureau of Imports of the War Trade Board when applications for such licenses are filed. Payment will not be required in this way if it is conclusively proved that the purchase price has been paid prior to April 6, 1917.

Nairn Linoleums Withdrawn.

Announcement is made by the wholesale department of W. & J. Sloane, selling agents for the Nairn Linoleum Company, of the withdrawal from sale of the entire line of Nairn products, including rugs and Pro Lino goods. No additional business for shipment prior to Oct. 1 can be accepted. Orders on record will be executed, says the announcement, subject to the mill's ability to do so on or before Sept. 30, according to the terms of sale. Unfilled orders will be cancelled, or, if reinstated, shipped after Oct. 1 "at value."

Market Value on Telephones.

The demand for telephones in Japan is so great that when one subscriber is ready to give up his telephone he sells it through a broker, there being a regular market value on the phone. At the end of 1917 there were 152,000 persons awaiting the installation of telephone instruments.

SCATTERED BUYING IS A DETRIMENT

When the story of a large number of business failures is told the cause of disaster is generally set down to insufficient capital. Overstocking is also a rock on which many a commercial ship is wrecked. But in recent years another possibility of going astray, that ranks with the two major reasons for failure, has been created through changed conditions in trade. There is a broader application of that motto followed by successful merchants: "Buy to the best advantage." Experience has taught the small retail dealer that this rule is not only to be construed as buying the best merchandise at the lowest prices, but also buying in places which give him the best protection. In other words, his purchases must be confined to an extent that will make his account be considered worth while by the wholesale houses handling it.

Willard B. Stevens, Secretary of the National Wholesale Men's Furnishings Association, is a pioneer in this movement to educate the retailer to the importance of confining his purchases to as few houses as practicable. The slogan of the association is "Whatever operates to the advantage or detriment of the retailer affects the manufacturer and wholesaler in the same way," and the invitation extended to retailers to "Come in and tell us about it," has made Mr. Stevens the counselor of many a beginner or established haberdasher who had difficulties to overcome.

The changing conditions of trade, Mr. Stevens believes, no longer permit the small retailer to buy from a large number of concerns with any assurance that his interests will be protected. The time has passed, at least for the present, when a wholesale house would consider a small opening order as the entering wedge to a larger account, and try to make that first purchase as attractive as possible to the customer, so that more business would result. The big wholesalers seem to have little use for the "on and off" customer, and instead of giving him merchandise that will prove a ready seller inferior goods are unloaded upon him, the cast-offs of better and more profitable accounts. This drives the dealer to the smaller wholesalers who, upon the slightest indication of his embarrassment, put him in the bankruptcy court.

"We advise dealers," said Mr. Stevens, "to buy from as few houses as practicable. And we go a step further and advise them to deal only with reputable concerns. We figure that a retailer in this line who proposes to do a business of $50,000 a year can buy all the merchandise he needs from twenty-five houses. If he follows this policy his account means something to the twenty-five concerns, and he gets not only the proper merchandise but the kind of treatment that protects him at all times. In short, he has made the wholesaler almost as much interested in the success of his enterprise as he is himself, because his loss is the wholesaler's loss.

"Take the manufacturer's viewpoint in this matter. Where there are a number of branded lines in competition, as is the case in our business, service is the big factor. One line is as well advertised as another. It sells at about the same price. Service, then, is what one house depends upon to make headway against its competitor. That's why the policy of one large manufacturer of shirts and pajamas is: 'Customers first all the time.' He proceeds on the theory that his customers must make money. Unless a quick turnover is possible he doesn't oblige his customer to keep the merchandise he has delivered. In such cases he investigates, and if the goods won't sell, he tells the customer: 'Send them back to me at once and I will ship you some goods that will sell.'

"Scattering of purchases gets none of this service, because the large wholesale houses are too busy trying to help out their worth while accounts to bother with the occasional customer. In the last two cases handled by this association we found that failure to confine purchases was in a large measure responsible for the financial trouble. Everything was in favor of one retailer. He was a good merchandise man and salesman, and a window dresser of more than average skill. Yet an investigation of his creditors' list disclosed bills owed to sixty different houses. He wasted time trying to sell customers 'something just as good' when he might have used it to much better advantage making a quick sale and a satisfied customer by selling the article desired. In the other case there were forty-four creditors and a raft of unattractive merchandise which nothing but a forced sale would clean out.

"There are well-defined policies a small haberdasher may follow to advantage in making his purchases. The merchandise ordinarily found in a furnishing goods store groups itself into about three classes. In the first group we can put the article which has the fastest turnover and must be carried in sizes at all times. Collars are in this group, and it would be best for the small dealer to confine himself to two lines and keep a complete stock always on hand. In the second group a little more variety is possible. Three or four brands can be carried because not so many styles or sizes have to be stocked. In this group would fall underwear, gloves, and shirts. In the third group the retailer gets still a little more leeway as far as the stocking of branded lines is concerned. Hosiery, handkerchiefs, and neckwear could be classified in this group. These articles are not so often sought by name.

"For a business of $25,000 a year the retailer ought to carry a stock of $6,000. This stock should be turned four times a year and no merchandise should be carried over from one season to another. It's the new fresh article that has the greatest appeal in the furnishing goods line, and the store that offers last year's goods is put down as a 'backslider' not only by the wholesalers selling it, but by its customers, who have an uncanny sense when it comes to ferreting out the freshness of an article. The salesmen also must be considered. They can't keep their enthusiasm up over selling old stock. It takes new merchandise to interest them.

"This proposition of turn-over and sales, however, all goes back to the fundamental principle of confining purchases. If the right kind of merchandise is obtained the biggest step has been made in the direction of sales volume. If a dealer is getting only second choice after his successful competitor who is bulking his purchases has had first selection, that puts him immediately on an unfavorable basis. He is trying to make headway against a rival who not only has the cream of the merchandise to be bought, but the backing and protection of the reputable concerns that sell him goods."

U. S. Commerce Chamber in Chile.

An American Chamber of Commerce has been formed at Valparaiso, reports Consul Thomas W. Voetter, for the purpose of promotion of trade relations between the merchants of Chile and the United States. Practically all American firms established in the city are supporting the new organization and it is also receiving the support of many Chilean firms. American trade publications, catalogues, &c., are especially desired by the commercial body.

British Permit Cheese Imports.

An announcement contained in the British Board of Trade Journal declares that the importation of cheese is now permitted under general license.

AS TO DIRECT SELLING.

Advantages of the Method Applied to Woolen Piece Goods.

The advantage of direct selling in the woolen piece goods market consists, according to the representative of one of the houses in the market, in the control which is exercised from the logical end of the business, the selling end. If there is sufficient authority vested in the selling agency, he said, the operations of the mills are, in the majority of cases, more profitable.

"Where a mill is represented by a commission houses," he said, "the instructions are often disregarded, resulting either in a loss or in greatly depleted profits. Of course the mill owners' point of view is that the commission house, which has nothing at stake but its commission, is generally willing to gamble with its money. When conditions bring quick style changes, a letter written by a local selling agent to the mill one night may have to be revised the next. This gets the men at the mill to believe that the selling agent doesn't know his own mind from one minute to the next. Consequently, the opinion grows among the mill operators that their own judgment is best.

"If, on the other hand, the business is in the control of the selling end, contrary instructions may be issued, but the authority is there to carry out one set of orders and then another. The men at the mill may have their ideas of the sanity of the head of the business, but their ideas do not give them power to overrule his decisions. So this sort of control, directed from where selling conditions are actually known and understood, yields a big advantage to the mills employing it and has proved the most profitable kind of operation."

FOR CONFIRMING ORDERS.

Standard Form to be Used by the Waist Manufacturers.

Committees representing the active and associate members of the United Waist League of America have drawn up a standard form for confirming orders, which, it is asserted, will be fair to both buyers and sellers of the materials used in the waist manufacturing trade. The committees have worked on the matter for some time, and will soon take the revised rules up with other organizations in order that there may be unanimity of action.

With the change in trade conditions due to the war, it has been felt in various circles that the present system of giving and taking orders is somewhat antiquated and has led to many misunderstandings. The new rules, as adopted by the committees of the United Waist League, and which will soon be submitted to the Directors of the league for their approval, aim to prevent disputes, and the committees feel that they will have a healthful effect on the trade generally.

It is intended to have these rules printed on the back of all blanks containing the confirmation of orders given by members of the league to the silk and other manufacturers from whom they buy goods. Any additional specifications or changes, it is provided, are to be stated plainly on the face of the confirmation. It is also provided that in an emergency the Arbitration Board of the league may be consulted, or similar committees in other bodies.

TINSEL IN MILLINERY.

"Too much cannot be said of tinsel embroidery and brocade designs for the coming season" is the way the current bulletin of the Retail Millinery Association of America quotes one of the best authorities in that line of business. "Our representative in Paris emphasizes the importance of these fabrics constantly."

"Tinsel embroidered fabrics are being designed in Paris that cost as high as $25 a yard," the bulletin continues. "These include beautiful flower and foliage designs. Ribbons with tinsel flower embroidery are a big feature, too. These fabrics will, of course, be used in making the finest dress hats."

The bulletin also asserts that another important item for Fall is satin brocades. This class of goods will be used widely during the coming season. Imitation ostrich fringe, it says, is again going to be a big trimming item.

Trading With North Russia.

The Provincial Government of North Russia has annulled all formalities for issuing import licenses, and also the regulation of import profits and distribution of goods subject to foreign exchange value. The license system for exports is left in force, but a corresponding measure in this regard is to be worked out in order that the northern region may be protected in the matter of receiving proper foreign exchange value.

Permit Trade by Enemy.

Consul General Skinner, in a cable dispatch from London, states that a general license has been granted authorizing all persons to import and deal in goods owned by residents in Germany which are, or were at the outbreak of the war, on board enemy vessels now in the possession of allied and associated Governments.

Diamond Imports of Japan.

The diamond imports of Japan show a large increase. To the end of 1918 diamonds to the value of $1,059,500 were imported as against $550,000 in 1917. No diamonds are produced in Japan, and the heavy import duty has not affected the demand.

ENGLISH HOSIERY ORDERS.

Are Harder to Fill Because of the Shorter Working Week.

Large orders have recently been placed in Nottingham, reports Vice Consul Leroy Webber, at remunerative prices for practically all kinds of hosiery, more especially woolen and cotton hose and half hose and fancy goods. The increased demands appear to come chiefly from the colonial and Scandinavian markets. Considerable difficulty is being experienced in obtaining raw materials, the demand for fine cross-bred and merino qualities being far in excess of the normal production and consumption.

It is probably a little unfortunate that the present boom in this industry should come at the same time as the inauguration of the shorter working week, but despite this fact practically all the hosiery manufacturers are in a good position to take advantage of the boom. This is largely due to their having reorganized their factories from a war basis to a civilian basis following the signing of the armistice.

Will Continue Wheat Pool.

The Commonwealth of Australia announced recently its decision to continue the wheat-pooling system at least another year, and, if the States will cooperate, it is prepared to guarantee farmers $1.05 a bushel less freight. The Australian Prime Minister has been authorized to offer two million tons of wheat to the British Wheat Commission at $1.22 a bushel, but the sale is not regarded as likely.

TEACHERS MAY STRIKE.

2,500 in Porto Rico Ask Share in Island's War Prosperity.

SAN JUAN, May 28. (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Porto Rico is threatened with a strike of 2,500 school teachers unless the Legislature makes provisions for an increase in teachers' salaries. The teachers are expected to refuse to sign contracts for the next school year at the present scale.

Francisco Vicenty, President of the Teachers' Association, started the strike campaign this week.

Paul G. Miller, Commissioner of Education, put the question of raising funds to pay teachers adequate salaries squarely up to the Legislature.

"If the Legislature takes the view that there is no money in the Treasury with which to pay teachers, the answer is that the Legislature is the only agency in Porto Rico that can put money in the Treasury by proper revenue measures," said Commissioner Miller. "It is high time that teachers should have an addition of real cash rather than mere words or praise.

"Rural teachers are receiving $40, graded teachers $60, principals and teachers of English $75 a month. This is far from what they should receive for their services in view of the high cost of living, and especially in view of the fact that Porto Rico has been highly prosperous in recent years.

"Not only has the assessed valuation of property been increased from $182,000,000 to $248,736,000, but our merchants have made handsome profits due to war prices and our planters have sold their products at figures never received before.

"On the other hand, teachers' salaries were materially reduced by the Legislature in 1914. Rural teachers have since received an increase of $2 a month, which is insignificant."

BOLL WEEVIL ON RAMPAGE.

With Grass and Poor Labor Endangers Georgia Cotton Crop.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, June 21.—With reports flowing in that the boll weevil is on the rampage in larger numbers than ever, grass springing up thickly on cultivated acres, and farm labor growing more inefficient and indifferent, the State Agricultural Department Friday morning gave out a statement that this year's cotton crop will be one-third, and at most one-half of normal.

North Georgia is not hit as badly as is the southern section of the State, including all territory as far north as Macon. The boll weevil has increased so that the whole cotton crop has been placed in imminent danger of destruction and continuous rains have put the grass beyond control.

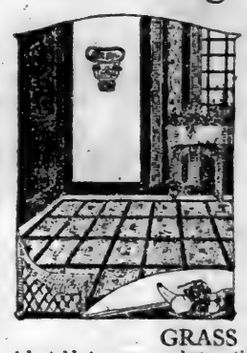
The Saving in Summertime Rugs



IS ONLY PART OF THE STORY

THE lower prices on Summertime Floor Coverings, coupled with the saving of wear on costlier Winter rugs, is the most powerful factor actuating toward their purchase, it is true. Hence we stress the fact that, grade considered, our prices are as low as most and lower than many.

* * *

BUT the savings incidental to the use of Special Summer Floor Coverings is really less than half the story. Greater comfort to the entire family results from the refreshingly cool atmosphere they create. And their use always means less work for the homekeeper.

A PROFITLESS ADVENTURE.

We somewhat deliberately predict that in some not very distant day, toward the close of this century, when the career and the great achievements of WOODROW WILSON will be within the common knowledge of every intelligent American, the diligent student of the history of the great war and the peace that followed it who shall seek information concerning the men in the United States Senate who have set themselves in opposition to the Treaty and the establishment of the League of Nations will find in the most comprehensive dictionaries of American biography nothing more than an arid record of the facts that they once existed and held office. At least they gain no title to enduring fame by their present obstructive proceedings in the Senate. Men cherish the memory of builders of great works, they are content that destroyers shall pass into darkness and oblivion. It is a work altogether of destruction in which these Republicans are engaged.

No man, no party, ever reaped profit and advantage from such a barren adventure, and not merely barren but odious. The whole world stands expectant upon the eve of peace, peace for which it has so longed, and only in the United States Senate are heard the voices of men who would delay peace and prolong the war. These Republican Senators would nullify the decisions reached after such arduous labors in Paris, they would shatter the whole fabric there erected as the future home of the world's hope and security. They would detach the United States from all concern with the peace and happiness of the rest of the world, they have made themselves the advocates of a policy of "scuttle," repudiating all the responsibilities we have assumed in the war, responsibilities which our part in the conflict has made our heritage.

And this miserable proceeding in the Senate has the most miserable of motives, the desire to discredit and do harm to the leader of the party to which these men are opposed. For that assertion we have excellent Republican authority. Mr. GEORGE W. WICKERSHAM, like Senator KNOX an ex-Attorney General of the United States, in an article which we publish in this section of THE TIMES today, refers to the opponents of the League as "Senators who seem so "anxious to prevent the adoption of the "League upon the apparent theory that "its ratification will assist President "WILSON and the Democratic Party," and he commends to them a study of the advice of THEODORE ROOSEVELT, given shortly before his death, that "there "must be an honest effort to eliminate "some of the causes that may cause "future wars and to minimize the areas "of such wars."

For the attribution of partisan motives we have further the very high authority of ex-President TAFT, who, in an article in The Philadelphia Public Ledger of Friday, June 20, warns the Republicans of the Senate that they are following the paths which lead only to discredit. "They must feel as uneasy," he says, "as those Federalists who fought the "Louisiana Purchase as unconstitutional "because it was made by JEFFERSON." He reminds them that the historical attitude of their party is one of loyal support of the nation in meeting every responsibility it has had to assume. Traditionally, the Federal Party and its heir, the Republican Party, have sustained the doctrine of JOHN MARSHALL that the constitutional powers of the Government are equal to the discharge of all duties it must perform in working out its destiny "as one of the great family of nations." It is the Democrats who have insisted upon "strict construction." At this moment the position of the party is reversed. The Republican Senators, in so far as their leadership is acknowledged, have committed their party to a policy of shrinking and littleness.

Ex-President TAFT gives his distinguished support to the charge of the Democrats in the Senate that the Foreign Relations Committee was "stacked" against the League of Nations. Care was taken that the committee "should "have Republicans enough to give them "a majority without the vote of Mr. "MCCUMBER, known to be favorable to "the Treaty, and by a careful selection "of Republicans for that majority whose "opposition to the Treaty has been pro-"nounced." Senator KELLOGG, who should have had a place on the committee, had the hardihood to make a speech in favor of the League of Nations and he refused to sign the "round robin"; therefore, he was denied and Senator MOSES, newly come to the Senate, was chosen, for the obvious reason that he denounced the work of the Peace Conference. Are not these Republicans, "from a mere party standpoint, handling edged tools?" asks the ex-President. "Can they afford to go before the coun-"try and uphold their course in defeat-"ing the Treaty when there is a deep-"seated impression that they are, in part "at least, prompted in their methods, "unusual and not according to consti-"tutional procedure, by personal and "partisan motives?" The argument will be pressed against them that they have done much "to hinder the making "of a treaty at all by a course tending "to weaken the lawful authority of the "President in the Conference."

These Republican Senators have become apprehensive, they have given signs of alarm about the view the country may take of the lengths they are going in opposition to the President, to the Treaty and to the League. Their earlier truculence has given way to an attempt to explain and justify. Their explanations do not extenuate, they cannot justify their course, they cannot command the support of all of their party in the Senate; leading Republicans outside the Senate who have the respect and the confidence of the country deplore their attitude of obstruction, censure them for the course they have taken, and sound a warning of the disaster they invite by attempting to lead their party, where it will not follow, into a policy of narrow, partisan, sterile antagonism to the creative labors of the Conference at Paris, upon which the hopes of the world are centred.

In a communication to Senator WADSWORTH and Senator CALDER, twenty-eight prominent Republicans, all members of the party organization in this city, urge "that political partisanship should have "no place in the consideration on its "merits of the constitution of the pro-"posed League of Nations"; they point out that the Republican Party "cannot "justly be placed in an attitude of hos-"tility to the project adopted by the "Conference at Paris," since that very Party "has done so much to promote "the principles of peaceful settlement of "international disputes."

The Senatorial obstructionists have no hope of passing the KNOX resolution. Their only wise and safe course is to drop it altogether and to cease opposing the forces of public opinion in the United States and throughout the civilized world.

A NATIONAL BUDGET.

Senator PENROSE'S declaration for a budget system makes it reasonably sure that something will be accomplished to that end before Congress adjourns. What form the system will take it is too early to predict; but every effort to bring it about will create discussion and help toward the shaping of a good measure. Therefore Senator MCCORMICK'S budget bills deserve respectful consideration.

One of them, Senate Bill 456, provides that before Nov. 15 in each year the Secretary of the Treasury shall submit to the President a revised summary of the estimated expenditures of all the branches of Government, a statement of the estimated revenues for the period to be covered, and if the estimated expenditures exceed the estimated revenues he shall also submit recommendations for new taxes, loans, or other deficiency legislation. Before so submitting the budget the Secretary is directed to coordinate the items, reducing, consolidating, and unifying them as may be necessary to prevent waste, duplication, &c. This does not apply, however, to the estimates "for the technical branches of the War and Navy Departments." The budget estimates, when submitted to Congress, become the basis of its appropriation bill. A Budget Bureau is created in the Treasury Department, composed of a director and two assistants, at salaries of $10,000 and $9,000, respectively. Provision is made for the creation of the necessary office force. The director fixes their compensation, but not more than fifteen of them shall have more than $3,000 a year, and all under that amount shall be selected from the civil service lists. An appropriation of $125,000 for the fiscal year of 1919-20 is authorized.

Section 3 of this bill provides "that "the submission of the estimates by the "Secretary of the Treasury as herein "provided shall be in lieu of his presen-"tation of the Book of Estimates to Con-"gress, as now provided by law." This means the abolition of the old system, under which the Secretary must present at the opening of each regular session "estimates of appropriations" for the next fiscal year. This is required by Sections 3669 and 3670 of the Revised Statutes and the Acts of July 7, 1884, March 3, 1901, and June 22, 1906. The estimates are submitted in a bulky volume called the Book of Estimates, and the estimates are furnished to the Secretary by all the other executive departments and other Government officers.

These estimates, under the present system, are considered by the President and Cabinet and cut down to whatever figure the Administration cares to approve and submit to Congress. The last Book of Estimates, submitted to Congress by Secretary MCADOO on Dec. 2, 1918, contains 1,056 printed pages. The book measures nine inches wide by twelve inches long and is nearly three inches thick. In comparative columns it presents the sums asked for the coming fiscal year and those appropriated for like items the preceding year.

Senator MCCORMICK'S other measure, Senate Bill 450, is to provide for an independent audit of the departmental accounts and creates the offices of Controller-Auditor General, Assistant Controller-Auditor General, and Solicitor of the Audit Office of the United States. They are to be appointed by Congress, the highest official receiving $12,000 a year and the others $7,500. They are to take the places of the present auditors. At present there are auditors in most of the departments, who would have to go, as would the Controller of the Treasury, and it would be the duty of the new officials to consolidate, reorganize, and unify the auditing work of the whole governmental system. Other bills introduced by Senator MCCORMICK divest the Treasury of its non-germane functions, such as the Coast Guard, the Office of the Supervising Architect, and the Public Health Service, to the end that the Secretary may devote his entire time to the study of the Government's financial problems.

The Senator bases his general scheme on the budget system of Illinois, which has been in successful operation for some time. Mr. MCCORMICK'S proposals may well be welcomed as a serious attempt to meet an intolerable situation, and one which will at least go far to arouse the necessary discussion.

WORLD SOLIDARITY.

MCKINLEY'S last words to his countrymen were that the period of exclusiveness was past. But that was a matter of trade only. CECIL RHODES urged his countrymen to think imperially. But that was a matter of national politics and welfare only. Mr. VANDERLIP, in his book on the war, asserts that the men of all lands must think politically and economically, financially and industrially, in terms of the globe. Before he made the tour of the war-torn lands he had confessed that he was unable to think in billions, but he now demands that the man in the street shall think broader thoughts than ever were conceived by pre-war statesmen. The world is in a conflagration against which no national structure can stand alone, for the flames leap the seas as easily as national boundaries.

> A farmer in Kansas may fail to see what concern it is of his if there is unrest in the Balkans, Bolshevism at Warsaw, a growing army of adherents to Syndicalism, Guild Socialism in England, or a financial crisis in France. Inevitably, however, this farmer in the centre of America will directly feel the effects of all the ebullitions of life on this other continent. He is today nearer to the things that may happen in Paris, in Belgium, or in London than were the peasant farmers in those very countries to their own capitals in times gone by.

The Atlantic had not been "hopped" when that was written, but remark what may result from that epochal event. Even though neither passengers nor freight may habitually cross the sea by the air route, the mails may, in fact already have done so. Nothing could more unite continents than trans-air mails. World mails at present pass through London, wherever they start or wherever bound. The centre of finance may or may not be in process of transfer to New York, but for years yet, perhaps for generations yet, the best mails will pass through London. Whatever process of trade requires writing for certainty and fullness of expression, without air mails, will tend to be done in England rather than to pass through there, and to lengthen the term of correspondence by requiring two more voyages for a letter and reply. Whoever thinks in terms of the globe, or even of intercontinental communications, will now take thought of the passage of mails direct without a London stop.

But Mr. VANDERLIP was thinking more broadly than that. The broadening of trade depends upon peace, and peace depends upon more than the signature of the Treaty. True, nothing will more greatly promote peace, but neither the Treaty nor the covenant will quiet the world any more than laws will make men orderly and virtuous. Ideas leap oceans more readily than airplanes, and there is no country in the world free from the Russian or Prussian madness. That we are not immune is the testimony of every day's news, but Mr. VANDERLIP'S text is not the welfare of any one nation. The theme he develops is the solidarity of all nations and the duty of each to all. European civilization will be saved or lost as a whole, and America is Europe's "last hope." "There can-"not be security where Bolshevism is "contagious, and where an outbreak in "one centre is almost certain to be com-"municated to adjacent regions." Europe must be looked at as a unit, and credit be given at all hazards to all. It is not safe to pick one country as a better risk than another, and to erect it as a monument amid flames, a mark to be attacked in proportion that our aid has bettered its condition above its neighbor's.

This is the thought which France repudiated by cable, almost before the book was off the press. Mr. VANDERLIP has rated the credit of the nations with precision of carefully chosen adjectives, with compliments to all, but with the conclusion, nevertheless, that the war has been too grievous a burden to leave the credit of any unscathed. France declares that she can never descend to make a special pledge of revenue, when always her naked credit has sufficed. No nation has a better record or is more favored in American opinion. France would be right if it were suggested to her alone that there should be an issue of a supersecurity, pledging the credit of all for the sake of all. Mr. VANDERLIP had anticipated the point, and suggests that what is done by all is a reproach to none. The condition is not unlike that when our banks used to find it necessary to apply for Clearing-House certificates to tide them over an emergency beyond the strength of most. Then our best banks made the first applications, and the weaker banks were encouraged to follow.

It is because there are others in worse credit and plight than France that Mr. VANDERLIP shrinks from making distinctions, and urges rescuing Europe as a whole because there is no way of rescuing some of its units otherwise. If the strongest nations absorbed all the credit, there would be no help or hope for the peoples rising from a thousand years of prostration, and suffered to sink by the hands which had been extended in mockery, if events shall take that turn.

Let no one imagine that Mr. VANDERLIP is either a weakling or a pessimist. No one foresees a brighter future for us and the world if we rise to our duty. But the burden is one that we shall not escape by shirking it. We can no longer live to ourselves alone, and we must consider an alternative if we fail Europe in its need, its crisis of civilization. The dates show that the book was not written with any reference to the contrary ideas expressed in the Senate, but no Senator has shown more statesmanlike appreciation of world events than this banker who thinks first of duty and next of safety. The situation is to no one's liking, but "it is morally cowardly and "financially more dangerous" to dodge the issue, or to oppose one solution without offering another within the necessities of the case. Nothing which requires delay is to be considered. Millions are living on Government doles, which cannot be continued. Hundreds of thousands are dying from hunger and millions require to be fed daily or they will turn Bolshevist. What does the Senate propose for the promptness of action which alone can save the world?

THE MACKENZIE RAID.

Punitive expeditions by American troops into Mexico have occurred at various times since the civil war, the cause always being the same, aggression by Mexicans (in some cases by nomadic Indians) upon American citizens, generally attended with seizure or destruction of their property, in the course of which Americans were savagely killed. The Columbus raid, which provoked the invasion of Mexico by a force of all arms under General PERSHING, was an act of war, and intended as such, by FRANCISCO VILLA, who, his star having gone into eclipse, planned to involve the United States in a conflict with the Constitutionalists that could end only in the downfall of CARRANZA.

The recent demonstration by General JAMES B. ERWIN, commander at El Paso, with a mixed force, 3,600 strong, of infantry, cavalry and artillery, to drive the Villistas out of Juarez and into the desert beyond, was a step forward in the policy of asserting American sovereignty on the border and protecting American citizens; shots had been fired by the Villistas into El Paso in the course of a battle with troops of the recognized Carranza Government.

An army officer of high rank in Texas spoke of Captain KLOEPFER'S ride into Mexico in March with some men of the 8th Cavalry to pursue cattle thieves who had run off stock from an American ranch—five of the Mexicans were killed—as "a matter of border routine." About a week later Captain MATLOCK crossed over into Mexico after the Chico Cano bandits, killing several of them in their camp. General ERWIN'S "invasion" of Juarez was also a matter of "border routine," on a larger scale. There is precious little difference between a Villista and a bandit who forages with CHICO CANO.

The most dramatic of all raids into Mexico by American soldiers on police duty was that led by Colonel RANALD S. MACKENZIE with six troops of the 4th Cavalry in 1873. The story should be retold to show that it always has been our policy to maintain peace on the border and protect citizens and their property, even if it becomes necessary to pursue malefactors to Mexican soil and punish them there. The record of the Mackenzie raid begins with the mysterious conference of General BELKNAP, the Secretary of War, and General SHERIDAN (the time was GRANT'S second Presidency) with Colonel RANALD S. MACKENZIE at his quarters at Fort Clark, Kinney County, Texas, in April, 1873. For some time Mexican bandits and Indians had been crossing the border to steal cattle and horses, and many settlers and ranchmen had been killed by the miscreants. SHERIDAN opened the proceedings with characteristic plainness of speech:

> MACKENZIE, you have been ordered down here to relieve Colonel MERRITT and the 9th Cavalry because I want something done to stop these conditions of banditry by these people across the river. I want you to control and hold down the situation and to do it in your own way. I want you to be bold, enterprising, and at all times full of energy. When you begin, let it be a campaign of annihilation, obliteration, and complete destruction—as you have always done in your dealings with the Indians. I think that you understand what I want done and the way you should employ your force.

General GRANT regarded MACKENZIE, who had been a division commander under SHERIDAN in the Shenandoah Valley during the civil war, as the most promising young officer in the army. He had graduated from West Point in 1862, the son of Commodore ALEXANDER SLIDELL MACKENZIE, who once had the nephew of a Secretary of War hanged from the yardarm of his ship for mutiny, Colonel MACKENZIE, one of the handsomest soldiers in the army, inherited the resolution and readiness to take responsibility that characterized his father. But in this instance he thought that his superior should be more explicit. "General SHERIDAN," asked Colonel MACKENZIE, "under whose orders and upon what "authority am I to act? Have you any "plans to suggest, or will you issue me "the necessary orders for my action." SHERIDAN, pounding on the table, replied vehemently:

> Damn the orders! Damn the authority! You are to go ahead on your own plan of action, and your authority shall be General GRANT and myself. With us behind you, you can rest assured of the fullest support. You must assume the risk. We will assume the final responsibility.

The narrative of the raid has been told with graphic power by Captain ROBERT G. CARTER, U. S. A., retired, now living in Washington. He has recently put the finishing touches to the absorbing story of the adventure which he shared. His pamphlet has a historical importance and is full of local color and the border atmosphere. The objective of MACKENZIE'S force was to be a camp of Lipans, Kickapoos, Pottawatomies, and Mescalero Apaches in the Terreno Desconocido, (Unknown Land.) These Indians had frequently raided American settlements, returning into their fastnesses with the scalps of women and of children as well as of men. Colonel MACKENZIE, after elaborate preparations, leaving nothing to chance, forded the Rio Grande at night with six troops of cavalry, guided by friendly Indian scouts.

The marauders in their five villages were taken completely by surprise when the American cavalrymen charged down upon them early in the morning of the following day, May 18, 1873. The Indian villages were burned, nineteen of the savages were officially reported as killed, (the real number was much greater,) many Indians were wounded but escaped in the brush, and Chief COSTILETOS of the Lipans and forty women and children were captured. The most perilous stage of the expedition was the ride back to the Rio Grande through a country in which the Mexicans and their Indian allies were collecting to attack the invaders. Colonel MACKENZIE and his command (three of his men had been wounded, one mortally) rode 159 miles in all from their camp on the American side to the Indian villages and back, and no one had a moment's sleep during the raid, which occupied thirty-two hours. It was said that for months after this "invasion" a pin could have been heard to drop on the border. The Mexican Government protested, of course. President GRANT stood by MACKENZIE, and after a great deal of ink had been spilled the controversy was shelved.

SALVATION BY POETRY.

If any other than Professor Bliss PERRY had delivered the remarkable observations on poetry at Harvard's Phi Beta Kappa day observance, we should suspect him of conspiring to ruin the art forever by laying on it a burden too great to bear. Poetry, in his view, has been the moving force in all recent human improvement; the poets decided that NAPOLEON would not do while the statesmen were still trying to find a method of living with him; the poets dragged the thorny beam out of the unwinking Victorian eye; the poets denounced slavery; the poets declaim against tyranny, whether it be of unjust laws, of Kaisers, or of mobs; the poets demand a peace of freedom, truth, and justice. Professor PERRY admits that prosaic persons have likewise aspired toward some of these praiseworthy ends, but "the poets are surer of their ground; "they bring to such questions an insight, "an imagination, a partisanship beyond "the grasp of the prose reason." Undeniably there are some hazards in the way; "the idealists are apt to be more "eloquent in their denunciation of wrong "than accurate in their sense of direction "toward the right," a truth in support of which he might have instanced D'ANNUNZIO, who did excellently well when he inspired his countrymen to declare war on Austria, but seems to have overdone it a little in his theory that they might as well finish the work by declaring war on all the rest of the world. But despite the impatience with practical detail of the poetic vision, poets are the people to trust. Let the poets tell us of wrongs to be righted, let the lawmakers right them; but give the poets power of review, so that their verdict shall ultimately decide on the rightness of governmental action. Thus we advance toward the perfect state. CLEMENCEAU may write the Peace Treaty, but we shall not know whether he wrote it well until it inspires the perfect sonnet in 1962.

Perhaps Professor PERRY would not carry it quite so far, but he undeniably gives the poets the credit for prodding a lumbering and prosy world into such progress as it has so far attained, and he undeniably says that it is the poets who will tell us whether the war has ended rightly. This means hard days for the poets. Poetry has its own work, the work that on the whole it has been doing for some thousands of years past, for the quantity of poetry directed toward the accomplishment of social justice is comparatively small. More poetry has been written about sunsets than about sanitation; more bards have been inspired by lips than by liberty; even when idealistic statesmen are flinging challenges at intrenched injustice the average poet is stirred more deeply by the curve of the eyebrow than by the nerve of the highbrow. If the young poet is to be terrorized at the outset of his career by the imposition of the responsibility for all human advancement, if he is to be burdened with an Aim in Life whether he takes to it naturally or not, we shall see large numbers of earnest young people turning from poetry in horror and taking up stenography or salesmanship. Perhaps that would be a good thing for poetry, but it is to be doubted if Professor PERRY had it in mind.

Let the poet who delights in reform enjoy himself, but do not impose civic virtue on those whose interests lie in other ways. There was injustice enough in Elizabethan England, but WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE put an end to no abuses; HOMER no doubt saw about him plentiful examples of political and economic iniquity, and his sympathy with the aspirations of the populace may be judged by his treatment of Therasites. For him a swineherd did his duty by being an efficient and loyal swineherd, not by overturning the monarchy and getting himself elected to a Constituent Assembly.

To Socialist poets, of course, this advice is acceptable enough. By his creed the Socialist is committed to a teleological interpretation of history, and to a theory of the part of each citizen in history which will not permit him to overlook opportunities of speeding the social revolution. The enthusiasm with which our Bolsheviki have read into WALT WHITMAN doctrines which that strong-hearted democrat—who was not a pacifist in the great war of his time—would have thrown out of the window is another indication of the danger of making your poet the custodian of the public conscience.

Fortunately, the poets are not likely to take themselves at Professor PERRY'S valuation. The poet depicts the impact of the universe on the individual. That impact is of many kinds; when the poet's sensory perception of a certain fragment of the universe gives rise in him to an emotion of moral disapprobation of something that seems wrong, let him say so; but let him not suppose that his sole object in life is the experiencing of uplifting sentiments about his neighbors. If he gets nothing out of the world but that he is not much of a poet. And let him not suppose that his prosaic fellows are themselves wholly devoid of a capacity for righteous indignation. His business is being a poet. Colonel ROOSEVELT did more to disinter the American conscience than all the poets in the country, but Colonel ROOSEVELT could not have written the poetry of Miss AMY LOWELL. That is not what he was for. He was a moral reformer and Miss LOWELL is a poet. If he had tried to write poetry and she had tried to reform the world, the results in neither case would have been happy.

A sounder theory, also set forth at Harvard, is that of Mr. ROBERT TYNG BUSHNELL, this year's class poet—or, as correspondents call him, odist. After delivering his ode he gave as an encore a speech in straightforward prose on the evils of Bolshevism. The incident may suggest the funeral at which, the preacher being late, one of the mourners rose and announced that with the consent of those present he would avail himself of the opportunity to offer some observations on the tariff; but it should not be treated scoffingly. Mr. BUSHNELL had his ode and he also had his ideas of Bolshevism. He wanted to get both off his mind, and he was prudent enough to realize that a class ode, rarely a thing of distinction, would probably become considerably more odious if made a vehicle for his opinions of LENIN and TROTZKY. Here is a useful suggestion for socially minded poets.

THE NEW COLOMBIAN TREATY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a Colombian and a great admirer of the United States, I congratulate and thank you heartily for your splendid editorial article in today's edition regarding the reparation due to Colombia.

By upholding the flag of justice you have earned the respect and gratitude of all Spanish America, offended as it was by the wrenching of Panama from a weak and friendly country.

A. ROJAS WILLIAMS.

New York, June 20, 1919.

GERMANS IN BALTIC RUSSIA.

Economic Penetration the Peace Conference Has Failed to Guard Against.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Peace Conference at Paris not only has not ordered German troops out of the Baltic provinces of Russia, but has even drawn up a peace treaty which assumes that the German troops may be allowed to remain in certain Russian territories even after the Peace Treaty is signed.

The presence of German troops in the Baltic provinces is of more than temporary military interest. Only the uninformed would suppose that the Germans are not taking advantage of this opportunity to lay the groundwork for a future industrial influence in the Baltic provinces and to plan the economic penetration of Russia across these small barrier States.

It would appear that the leaders of the new German Government, realizing that their military power is at an end, are adopting a new system of subjugation of small nations. The German method in Belgium which horrified the world is no longer practicable. Germany therefore puts on the mask of friendship, and under the guise of opposing Bolshevism proceeds to the commercial subjugation of these small nations.

To be accurate, in two and a half years of German occupation in Lithuania raw materials of an estimated value of 838,000,000 marks were removed from Lithuania alone by the Germans. For these goods the Germans paid 208,000,000 marks, thus robbing the little republic of practically 130,000,000 marks. This does not include materials taken by the German military command; it includes only raw materials taken from Northern Lithuania.

From Southern Lithuania the Germans have taken material to the value of 200,000,000 marks, for which they have paid about 140,000,000 marks.

I am not informed as to whether anything in the Peace Treaty prevents the German army of occupation from continuing the systematic removal of food supplies and manufacturing materials from the occupied provinces of Russia.

"BY AND WITH THE ADVICE AND CONSENT."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I know not who was responsible for paragraph 2, Article 2, Section II., of the Constitution, but evidently for the nonce he was an emulator of Polonius, of whom Dr. Johnson said, "he entangles himself in his own thoughts." This heavy artillery of verbiage, "by and with," "advice and consent," when simply "with the concurrence" was intended, is evidently the work of one who was on familiar terms with the redundant legal phraseology of the day. "By and with the advice and consent" can mean nothing more than "with the consent." The only way that the Senate can express its consent as regards a treaty is by a two-thirds vote.

In proof of this statement that "by and with the advice and consent" simply means approval, we have only to examine the next clause in paragraph 2, which says: "And he [the President] shall nominate and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate shall appoint ambassadors, judges, &c." Here the nomination is solely the act of the President and the appointment is the joint act of the Senate and the President; the only function of the Senate being to ratify or reject. Note the sequence. He shall nominate, then "by and with the advice and consent" of the Senate shall appoint. No license is given to the Senate to attempt to control the President's choice. The only action that the Senate can take is to vote yes or no in regard to the candidate. It is thus made plain that the advice and consent of the Senate in regard to a nomination is nothing more than the recording of an affirmative vote. It will be noticed that the language, "by and with the advice and consent," is identical with that used in regard to treaties. Ambassadors, &c., are appointed, while treaties are made. In either case the final act is the advice and consent to the President's proposal.

"WE DO NOT VISIT THE NEAR-AT-HAND."

We do not visit the near-at-hand;
Only the place we must travel to see
Engages our thoughts and invites our eyes.
Over land, over sea, journey afar,
Magical landscapes await your review;
Towers of old story, and dream-haunted shades—
So many trysts with brave Fancy to keep!

You will go, you will see—will return, and you
Will ever rehearse those marvels afar;
For, waking or sleeping, their scenes shall not fade,
The eyes of your soul shall revision them all!
But the very last sight you will see (or see well)
Is the wonderful sight that is near-at-hand—
No journey to take, no disbursements to make;
Yet your footsteps are holden—you go not so.
But hark what I gathered, in speech-without-words,
From a soul that had passed (yet bent to my soul):—

"The City Celestial? Ah, many there are
Have been long and long in Heaven, who yet
Not more than a glimpse have had of those walls
In onyx and jasper and chrysoprase laid.
'How may that be?' I will only say,
The City is near—past that grove of palms—
In the tender dip of those sapphire hills—
Or, blissfully doubled in yon charm'd wave,
The City is near; its portal stands wide,
And any fair morning of God we can go,
Can pace through its streets, can rest in its fane.
But—all as it was in the life I have dropped (In the life you are carelessly living still)
We delay to visit the near-at-hand.
A cycle may glide—as a day with us—
And we have not passed the Delectable Gate.
The City is near, for ever it stands,
Its welcome is sure, its freedom is ours;
Hence, many delay their visit to make,
Since any fair morning of God they can go."

WICKERSHAM ANSWERS LEAGUE OBSTRUCTIONISTS

Shows How Criticisms of Leading Republicans Have Been Met—Condemns Senators "Blinded by Passion and Resentment"

By GEORGE W. WICKERSHAM,
Attorney General in President Taft's Cabinet.

THE last of the resolutions recently proposed by Senator Knox in the Senate reads as follows:

"That, finally, it shall be the declared policy of our Government, in order to meet fully and fairly our obligations to ourselves and to the world, that the freedom and peace of Europe being again threatened by any power or combination of powers, the United States will regard such a situation with grave concern as a menace to its own peace and freedom, will consult with other powers affected with a view to devising means for the removal of such menace, and will, the necessity arising in the future, carry out the same complete accord and co-operation with our chief co-belligerents for the defense of civilization."

This resolution was a complete non sequitur to the preamble and the four resolutions which preceded it. Those propose to establish a peace with Germany without providing any means of preserving it; to set up a number of new nations and abandon them to their fate. The resolution above quoted recognized the grave interest of the United States in the preservation of the freedom and peace of Europe and of complete accord and co-operation with our chief co-belligerents for the defense of civilization. It differed from the program presented by the Peace Conference in Paris by substituting empty words and meaningless generalities for a definite plan to avert an admitted evil. Even this glittering generality was unpalatable to those Senators who are bent on destroying the treaty at any cost, and by a vote of eight to six it struck out that resolution and then voted to report favorably to the Senate the remaining four.

Senators Borah, Knox, Lodge, Johnson, and those who support them are not willing to recognize any responsibility in America for the future preservation of the peace of the world. They have adopted the position occupied by President Wilson in 1915, when he declared that we had no concern with the contest in Europe and bade us remain neutral in thought and deed. These gentlemen apparently have forgotten that we have fought a great war because the situation in Europe was a menace to our own peace and freedom as well as to the possible existence of justice among nations. They would have it that our dead shall have died in vain; that we are no longer our brother's keeper, and that we can without thought of honorable obligation abandon the conditions of peace for which we are mainly responsible, leaving Europe to its fate.

But the resolution nevertheless discloses the same illogical nature of Senator Knox's contentions regarding the subject which was characteristic of his earlier arguments against the League of Nations. It will be remembered that in his speech in the Senate on March 1 Senator Knox first opposed the League upon the ground, among others, that under its provisions war in some circumstances would be legal, and yet a few paragraphs later he seriously proposed to outlaw all nations which should make war, and urged that the League of Nations should compel obedience to its decrees by force if necessary. It will also be remembered that one of his principal objections to the proposed League was that it did not include all the nations of the earth, including Germany.

Remember Roosevelt's Advice.

Senators who seem so anxious to prevent the adoption of the League upon the apparent theory that its ratification will assist President Wilson and the Democratic Party would do well to recur to the advice given by Theodore Roosevelt shortly before his death, when he wrote:

"I think that most of our people are in favor of the establishment of the principle of such a League under common-sense conditions which will not attempt too much, and thereby expose the movement to the absolute certainty of ridicule and failure. There must be an honest effort to eliminate some of the causes that may produce future wars and to minimize the area of such wars."

This counsel seems to have been one of the guiding principles in the formulation of the covenant of the League of Nations. It does not attempt too much; it carefully avoids undue encroachments upon the sovereignty of the participating nations, and it constitutes "an honest effort to eliminate some of the causes that may produce future wars and to minimize the area of such wars."

Nor has the Conference been indifferent to the criticism of such representative men as Messrs. Taft, Lowell, Lodge, Root, Knox, and Hughes, in amending the original covenant. In the first place, the language of the original covenant, to which so much exception was taken in the early criticism of the document, has been considerably improved in the revision.

A number of amendments or changes also have been adopted, evidently designed to meet and remove these objections. Among the most important of these changes the following may be mentioned:

Privilege of Withdrawal.

1. Mr. Taft, Senator Lodge, Senator Knox, and Judge Hughes objected to the original draft on the score that it contained no provision for the withdrawal of a nation from the League. This has been met by Article I. of the revised covenant, which provides:

"Any member of the League may, after two years' notice of its intention so to do, withdraw from the League, provided that all its international obligations and all its obligations under this covenant shall have been fulfilled at the time of its withdrawal."

2. Mr. Taft and Judge Hughes both recommended that it should be made clear that the Assembly or the Council should act by unanimous vote. Senator Lodge urged that it clearly be prescribed by what vote the Council should act. Article V. of the revised covenant provides:

"Except where otherwise expressly provided in this covenant, or by the terms of this treaty, decisions at any meeting of the Assembly or of the Council shall require the agreement of all the members of the League represented at the meeting."

3. Senator Lodge objected that it was not provided who should select the mandatary for any colony or territory. Judge Hughes urged that no nation should be required to act as a mandatary without its consent. Both of these objections are met by Article XXII. of the revised covenant, which provides that the Council shall designate as the mandatary one of the advanced nations, "who, by reason of their resources, their experience, or their geographical position, can best undertake this responsibility, and who are willing to accept it. * * *"

Root's Objections Met.

4. Senator Root objected that Article XXV. of the original draft apparently abrogated over two hundred treaties by which nations have bound themselves to arbitrate disputes which might arise between them. Article XXI. of the revised covenant removes this possibility by expressly declaring:

"Nothing in this covenant shall be deemed to affect the validity of international engagements such as treaties of arbitration. * * *"

5. Senator Root, unlike Judge Hughes, Senator Knox, and other critics of Article X. of the original covenant, by which members of the League undertake "to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all members of the League," pointed out that the article must be considered, not merely with reference to the future, but with reference to the present situation in Europe. He showed very conclusively that, in view of the conditions in Europe, the United States cannot quit, but must see that order is restored, and must enforce the determination of the allied nations and their counsel in determining the lines of restriction, and he said:

"The immediate aspect of Article X. is an agreement to do that."

He, therefore, recommended that Article X. should be amended so as to hold for a limited time—five years was his suggestion—and that thereafter any member might withdraw from it by giving one year's notice of its intention so to do. While this amendment is not specifically included in the revised draft, the provision authorizing any member of the League to withdraw from it after two years' previous notice, and the provision for the adoption of amendments to the covenant, when ratified by those members of the League whose representatives compose the Council and by a majority of the members whose representatives compose the Assembly, together make it possible, if at any time it become to the interest of the United States to terminate or modify its obligations under Article X., either to compel the amendment of that article or to withdraw from the League on two years' notice.

International Court.

6. Senator Root objected that the covenant contained no agreement that an international court of arbitration, such as was referred to in Article XIV., shall be established. The phraseology of this article has been so re-formed as to meet this objection by providing that the Council shall "formulate and submit to the members of the League for adoption, plans for the establishment of a permanent court of international justice." (Art. XIV.)

7. Senator Root, while commending the provisions relating to arbitration or investigation of disputes between nations which may threaten the peace of the world, particularly those of Articles XI., XII., and XVI. of the original covenant, as being "well devised," and to be regarded as free from any just objection so far as they relate to the settlement of political questions at which they are really aimed," as having been "developed naturally from the international practice of the past," and as constituting a "great step forward," because "they create an institution through which the public opinion of mankind, condemning unjust aggression and unnecessary war, may receive effect and exert its power for the preservation of peace, instead of being dissipated in fruitless protest or lamentation," still held that they were open to serious objection, in that Article XIII. was merely an agreement to arbitrate when the parties chose to arbitrate, and that neither the Council nor the body of delegates, to whom disputes were to be submitted under Article XV. of the covenant, was in any sense a judicial body or an arbitral body, and was bound to recommend what it deemed to be expedient for the time. He said that method was admirable for dealing with political questions, but wholly unsuited for dealing with questions of right under the law of nations; and he, therefore, urged that the provisions be changed to make the arbitration of justiciable questions obligatory under the system established by The Hague Conference or before the proposed court of arbitral justice, or some other especially constituted tribunal. He defined justiciable disputes to be those concerning "the interpretation of a treaty, as to any question of international law, as to the existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of any international obligation, or as to the nature and extent of the reparation to be made for any such breach." The amendments embodied in the revised covenant partly, but not wholly, meet this criticism.

International Arbitration.

By Article XII. of the original covenant, the members of the League agreed in no case to resort to war without previously submitting the questions and matters involved either to arbitration or to inquiry by the Executive Council and until three months after the award by the arbitrators or the recommendation by the Executive Council, and that even then they would not resort to war as against a member of the League which should comply with the award of the arbitrators or the recommendation of the council, which, by Article XV., must be unanimous.) Article XII., as revised, goes further. By it all the members of the League agree "that, if there should arise between them any dispute likely to lead to a rupture, they will submit the matter either to arbitration or to inquiry by the Council," and that in no case will they resort to war until three months after the award by the arbitrators or the report by the Council. Here, therefore, is a definite binding covenant upon the part of all nations members of the League to submit to arbitration or inquiry any dispute between any of them likely to lead to a rupture.

By the revised Article XIII., while the members of the League do not agree absolutely to submit justiciable disputes to arbitration, as distinguished from inquiry by the Council, they do agree to submit to arbitration any dispute which shall arise between them "which they recognize to be suitable for submission to arbitration, and which cannot be satisfactorily settled by diplomacy." And they expressly declare "disputes as to the interpretation of a treaty, as to any question of international law, as to the existence of any fact which if established could constitute a breach of any international obligation, or as to the extent and nature of the reparation to be made for any such breach," to be "among those which are generally suitable for submission to arbitration." The disputes embraced in this declaration are precisely those which Senator Root included in his definition of disputes of a justiciable character. The revised article further provides that "for the consideration of any such dispute the court of arbitration to which the case is referred shall be the court agreed on by the parties to the dispute or stipulated in any convention existing between them."

It may be freely admitted that it would have been better if the covenant had adopted Senator Root's amendments as proposed; but it is well known that much opposition exists among European countries to the adoption of the principle of compulsory arbitration, and that the distinction between justiciable and non-justiciable disputes is one much more fully recognized and accepted by the United States and Great Britain than by any other of the powers.

In the practical workings of these provisions, if any power should refuse to submit to arbitration a dispute of the character which it has here agreed is one suitable for arbitration, it must clearly show exceptional circumstances justifying its unwillingness to arbitrate. Otherwise it would come before the Council prejudiced at the outset by appearing to seek a decision based rather upon political expediency than upon the principles of international law. It is not assuming overmuch to say that such an instance would be of very rare occurrence.

8. Senator Root objected that the original covenant by covering the ground of arbitration and prescribing a new test of obligation apparently abrogated all the two hundred treaties of arbitration by which all the nations of the world have bound themselves with each other to submit to arbitration all questions arising under international law or the interpretation of treaties. This objection is removed by the provisions of Article XXI. of the revised covenant, which expressly declare:

"Nothing in this covenant shall be deemed to affect the validity of international engagements, such as treaties of arbitration * * *"

The amended covenant, therefore, preserves in full force the treaties which Secretary Root negotiated on behalf of this country with Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and Norway, Brazil and Ecuador, all of which bind the United States and those countries, respectively, to refer to the Permanent Court of Arbitration established by The Hague Convention all justiciable disputes which may arise between them, and which do not affect the vital interests, the independence or the honor of the contracting States, and which do not concern the interests of third parties. It is true that these treaties all require a special agreement defining the matter in dispute proposed to be submitted to arbitration in each instance, to be submitted to and approved by the United States Senate, before actual proceedings are had, but they commit the United States and the countries named to submit all justiciable disputes which may arise between them to arbitration.

Existing Treaties Preserved.

The same provision of the revised covenant also will operate to preserve intact the series of treaties negotiated by Secretary Bryan, in 1913-1914, with twenty-one different countries, which were ratified by the Senate without any reservation whatever, whereby the high contracting parties agreed "that all disputes between them of every nature whatsoever, which diplomacy shall fail to adjust, shall be submitted for investigation and report to an international commission to be constituted in the manner prescribed" in a designated article of the treaty, and whereby they further agreed not to declare war, or begin hostilities over any such question during such investigation and report.

9. Senator Knox objected to the original covenant that it laid down no principles, rules or regulations by which the governing body was to be guided. The declaration in Article XIII. of the character of disputes which are generally suitable for submission to arbitration; the statement that such disputes should be considered by the court of arbitration; the declaration of the purpose of the covenant as set forth in the preamble, namely, the promotion of international co-operation and the achievement of international peace and security, among other things, "by the firm establishment of the understandings of international law as the actual rule of conduct among governments," and the express recognition in Article XV. of international law as the basis of decision as to whether or not a dispute is solely within the domestic jurisdiction of one of the parties—all furnish a very strong if not a conclusive recognition of the principles of international law as constituting rules for the guidance of both the Council and Assembly in the settlement of international differences.

International Law Code.

10. Senator Root recommended incorporating as an amendment to the covenant a provision requiring the Executive Council to call a general conference of the powers for the purpose of reviewing the condition of international law, and of agreeing upon and stating in authoritative form the principles and rules thereof. While this amendment is not included in the covenant, it is within the general province of either the Council or the Assembly at any time to appoint a commission for this purpose, or itself to consider and report upon the condition of the law of nations. It may be questioned how desirable it is to attempt the statement in the form of a code or written formulation of the principles and rules of international law. That law is a growth. It is ascertained from the history of the intercourse between nations extending over a period of three hundred years or more, evidenced by treaties, conventions, decisions of courts, and other tribunals. It has grown as the common or customary law of England has grown in the motherland and in this country. It is perhaps better that it should be ascertained and formulated from time to time in the decisions of international courts and tribunals, rather than through the efforts of a body of jurists, however learned, to formulate for adoption in dogmatic form. Our own Supreme Court has declared that the law of nations is of universal obligation, "and no statute of one or two nations can create obligations for the world." The obligation of that law "rests upon the common consent of civilized communities. It is of force, not because it was prescribed by any superior power, but because it has been generally accepted as a rule of conduct" (Strong, in The Scotia, 14 Wall 170, 187.) The point of the matter is that it is debatable how far it would be wise to adopt Senator Root's suggestion in this particular, and the difference of opinion on that subject is reflected in the failure of the conference to embody it in the amendments to the covenant.

Monroe Doctrine Safe.

11. The objections made by Mr. Taft, Senator Lodge, Justice Hughes, and others, that the proposed covenant would destroy or impair the Monroe Doctrine, have been met by the provision in Article XXI., which expressly excludes the Monroe Doctrine from affect by the revised covenant. It is true that the characterization of the Monroe Doctrine has met with not unjustifiable criticism. "Regional understandings for the securing and maintenance of peace" is hardly an apt description of the Monroe policy, adopted by the United States as a national policy for its own protection; and yet, in a certain sense, it is assuredly a policy adopted to secure the maintenance of peace, and it is a "regional understanding" in the sense that it is an understanding that the United States has declared that the entire region of the American hemisphere is not to be the planting ground for monarchical institutions.

12. The objection that the League should have no concern with the internal affairs of a nation, such as questions of tariff, immigration, coastwise traffic, and the like, is met by the insertion of a new clause in Article XV.:

"If the dispute between the parties is claimed by one of them, and is found by the Council to arise out of a matter which by international law is solely within the domestic jurisdiction of that party, the Council shall so report, and shall make no recommendation as to its settlement."

Revised Covenant Improved.

A consideration of these amendments clearly demonstrates that the revised covenant is greatly improved over the original. That it is not perfect may well be conceded; that it might be more clearly expressed in more apt and cogent terms need not be debated. Nevertheless, it constitutes a great step forward.

The Republican State Convention held at Saratoga on July 19, 1918, adopted a platform which declared:

"We favor the immediate creation by the United States and its Allies of a League of Nations to establish, from time to time to modify, and to enforce the rules of international law and conduct. The purpose of this League should be, not to displace patriotism or devotion and loyalty to national ideals and traditions, but rather to give to these new opportunities of expression in co-operation with the other liberty-loving nations of the world. To membership in the League any nation might be admitted that possesses a responsible Government which will abide by the rules of law and equity, and by those principles of international justice and morality which are accepted by civilized people."

The question before the Republican Party today is whether it shall allow a few Senators blinded by passion and resentment at the President and his Administration to commit the party of great national and international ideals to the reversal of its principles, the abandonment of its high mission, and a position of opposition to the only practicable, attainable plan before the world to avert from posterity the recurrence of the horror, the misery, and the tragedy of further wars.

NOVEL CASES IN THE COURTS

Judge Manning, of the Appellate Term of the New York Supreme Court, in Welch v. Jamaica Water Supply Co., 171 New York Supplement, 101, inclines to the opinion that the more cleanly proclivities of one man than another do not warrant a different measure of damages for interference with their desires in that regard. The action was against the water company for failure to furnish an adequate supply for common household purposes, such as cooking, quenching thirst, personal cleanliness, &c. The court below, in instructing the jury, said: "It might be that lack of water to me might not be as much as to somebody else, because one man might want to take a bath twice a day, and I might want to take a bath only once a week, and therefore wouldn't suffer as much from the lack of water as the other man would." The Appellate Court holds this portion of the charge erroneous.

From the case of Gillin v. Board of Public Education, 250 Federal Reporter, 849, it appears that Pennsylvania has a compulsory education law providing punishment for parents failing to send their children to school, and also a law authorizing exclusion from school of unvaccinated pupils. While the vaccination law does not of itself prescribe any penalty for its violation, a parent who fails to have his children vaccinated is put in the position of being unable to comply with the compulsory education law and subject to punishment thereunder. Judge Dickinson of the Federal District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania in the above-entitled case, in denying authority of a United States court to give any relief, refers to the contentions of plaintiff, and draws his conclusions as follows:

"His real complaint is that he was charged with noncompliance with the requirements of the laws of the State and the statutory penalty was imposed by a Magistrate. From this judgment he appealed to the proper court sitting for the county. That court affirmed the judgment."

It was a "conspiracy against trade" under St. 1907, p. 864, for wholesale bakers to enter into an agreement, whereby they fixed the retail price of bread to be sold by them to retailers, and agreed not to sell to any retailer who did not maintain such price.—People v. H. Jevne Co., Cal., 178 Pac. 517.

City, in conducting summer camp, under charter provisions, for maintaining health of children of city, held engaged in governmental function, though making small charge to help pay costs, so that it was not liable for negligence injuring boy at camp.—Kellar v. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE RUSSIAN LOAN

Kolchak Government Seeking the Unpaid Balance of the Sum Granted

By PROFESSOR N. A. BORODIN,
Representative of the Ministry of Agriculture of the All-Russian Government in Omsk.

New York, June 18, 1919.
To the Editor of The New York Times:

For over twenty-five years, since my first visit to this marvelous country, during the Chicago World Exposition in 1893, I have been an ardent advocate of Russian friendship with the United States. I have made my views on this subject public in three books which I have written about America and in a number of newspaper and magazine articles, and they have found concrete expression in the organization and the activities of the Society for Promoting Friendship between Russia and the United States, of which I am the Acting President.

Americans may easily understand my distressed feelings when upon my fourth arrival in this country, four weeks ago, I found here an impetuous, unhampered agitation by the real enemies of Russia, German hirelings and Bolsheviki—under the protective wing of the American Government—against the regeneration of Russia, and, simultaneously, an indeterminate attitude of the American Government, influencing in a like degree the attitude of the other Allies, toward the All-Russian Government of Omsk.

Only on June 13 I first breathed freely upon reading in press dispatches from Paris about the actual recognition by the Allies of the Omsk Government and the promise to support it in its task of rebuilding Russia, on the one hand, and the energetic measures taken by the Senate commission to investigate anti-Governmental activities of the men of Russian Bolsheviki in the United States, with "Ambassador" Martens at the head.

President Wilson and the Allies have finally become convinced that the only effective way of aiding the Russian people and State to recover from the blows and exhaustion inflicted by the war and the anarchy is actively to assist the pronouncedly democratic Government of Admiral Kolchak in bringing the country to the gates of a Constituent Assembly and to cease all negotiations and relations with the Bolsheviki at the head of the Soviet rule.

The Government of the United States has finally realized, through the action of its Senate, that this leniency to the propaganda of Bolshevism and the strengthening of the Soviet organization is not only offensive to non-Bolshevist Russia but is likewise a source of danger to the United States. These propagandists of Bolshevism make no secret of their satanic aims to introduce a Bolshevist oligarchy everywhere and to transplant communism all over the world by force of arms and violence. They have captured power in war-weary Russia; they are near success in Austria and Hungary; they are making efforts to usurp the Government of Germany and are laying the ground for similar plans in the United States.

I am deeply convinced that the American Government, having once realized the menace of Bolshevism, will bring its investigations to a logical conclusion and will curb the propaganda of Bolshevist ideas and will relieve the country from the presence of the official apologists of their régime. On the other hand, I express faith and hope that the American Government—once relations with the All-Russian Government are firmly established—will take measures to give actual relief to Russia, first of all, in the form of securing the loan granted to the Provisional Government of Lvov and Kerensky.

The American Government had, at various times, granted to Russia $400,000,000, of which the Russian Government had actually received only $187,500,000. Owing to the capture of power by the Bolsheviki, the transmission of the remaining $362,500,000 was suspended. It would be an act of supreme justice and urgent necessity for Congress to come to the aid of the Omsk Government at this hour of need and to improve its financial condition by reaffirming the credits once granted for the same requirements. This would prove a very earnest support of Russia and would relieve her of a difficult situation.

President Wilson, and with him the four great powers, have spoken their word and have defined their policy toward the All-Russian Government of Kolchak. The Senate of the United States has already made the initial steps regarding the recognition of the Omsk Government and the removing of the official Bolshevist propagandists from this country, through the resolution of Senator King, and we are confident that it will take definite action on both these matters very soon. It is up to Congress now. Every Russian patriot here, at Omsk, in Ekaterinodar, and in Archangel will await with eagerness the decision of Congress on the question of financial support to the All-Russian Omsk Government, the legal successor of the Lvov-Kerensky Government, to which the above-mentioned sums were granted in 1917 for the needs of Russia.

DIVISION OF TURKEY

Port Chester, N. Y., June 19, 1919.
To the Editor of The New York Times:

With much interest I read the statement of my most honored teacher, the Rev. Caleb F. Gates, D. D., President of Robert College, Constantinople, relative to the Armenian-Turkish question. Dr. Gates is entirely in the right if he means to say that there is a difficulty in establishing an Armenian State on the basis of race nationality of the Armenian Christians in view of their numerical weakness.

The article "Armenia," in the Encyclopaedia Britannica, as also in the International, gives the number of the Armenians in the five or six vilayets which nowadays are commonly referred to as Armenia as less than 23 per cent. of the total population of the territory in question.

Now, no man of common sense can ever bring himself to believe that a people representing not even one-fourth of the rightful inhabitants of the land can govern the remaining over 75 per cent., unless our Armenian brethren intend to displace the Turks as a ruling class. But that, in my judgment, would not be to their benefit. The scholarly statesman, our former Ambassador to Germany, Dr. Hill, says (North American Review, May, Page 507) that the establishment of government in Syria and Armenia based on race nationality is a "physical impossibility."

But if President Gates argues for the maintenance of the Ottoman Empire and of the Turks as a governing class he is altogether in the wrong. For he seems to ignore the undeniable facts connected with the appearance of the Turks in history since they swarmed from the East into Bagdad during the Abbaside Khalifate in the eighth and ninth centuries down to the tragedy of 1915. In addition to massacring and plundering, they have been destroying the learning and culture of the Orient, and have made no contribution of their own. This is why Orientalists desire the removal of the scourge from the cradle of civilization.

That the utterance of the President of Robert College will tend to hurt the worthy cause of the oppressed in Turkey many intelligent people will admit. It will be used by the pro-Turks; the Turkish papers of Constantinople have already used it to prove the rights of the Turks to rule other races. But why is the distinguished educator silent on the cruelties of the Turks, which have shocked the sense of humanity? He says nothing against them. Let Dr. Gates remember that the school on the Bosporus is fed from the non-Turkish population; that the Turks would, if they could, put that educational institution out of business, and that his true friends and sincere admirers are to be found among those in whose veins there is no Mongolian or Turanian blood.

In dealing with the difficult problem of Turkey and seeking its proper solution, we should bear in mind one fundamental fact: that all the various races of the country, particularly the Turks, lack the sense of political justice and the virtue of religious tolerance as we understand them in the West; and that this state of mind is due to the environments in which they have been living and which were created by the Turks upon their seizure of the reins of government. It is only in the light of this fundamental fact that we can adequately explain the troubles of Turkey and fully meet her urgent need. Therefore, a satisfactory solution of the question should be attempted, in my mind, along these lines:

The complete elimination of Turkish rule, except, perhaps, in certain parts of Asia Minor, where the population is predominantly of Turkish race.

The exclusion from all considerations of the racial and religious elements in the formation of the new Government; that is, the conception and foundation of the Government should not be based on race nationality or on religious beliefs, but on the inalienable rights of all; it should be the Government of all the people equally, without distinction as to race or creed.

The placing of the country under the control and administration of some Western power. If the United States does not wish to share in the burden, then let Great Britain undertake the difficult but worthy task.

HURTING THE IRISH CAUSE

Brooklyn, June 18, 1919.
To the Editor of The New York Times:

At a meeting of Irish societies in Chicago recently the language used by the speakers was so vituperative and violent, the heat and passion displayed so volcanic, that those who are conducting this ferocious anti-British campaign must be blind indeed if they do not realize that they are doing more to injure Ireland's cause than to aid it. We are told that "it took the Revolutionary War to eradicate nearly all of the Anglo humbug from our system," and also "that Britain is trying to fasten its monarchical ideas upon us." These gentlemen must be seeing things at night, for if there is any anti-Irish, pro-British propaganda in this country only the inflammatory Sinn Fein mind has discovered traces of it. On the other hand, however, the amount of anti-British, pro-Irish propaganda that is raging like a tornado in every corner of the land is simply astounding.

The glorious part our Anglo-Saxon forefathers have played in molding the destinies of this country is held up to scorn and contempt. If there is any of this deadly Anglo-Saxon virus left in our national system it is to be eradicated and we are to be inoculated with a Sinn Fein serum which will expel all inherited British poison and make us conform to that particular type which will bear the rubber stamp of Hibernian approval.

The potency of racial votes has always been a festering sore in politics and a menace to our national life. But are not our legislators in their apparent desire to "free" Ireland and to cater to and angle for the votes of these racial elements dragging our institutions in the mire and threatening the very existence of our national fabric?

Not many years ago, a commission headed by Mr. Walsh prepared for Congress a report on industrial conditions then existing in the United States. Certain sections of that report revealed conditions which it would be difficult, if not impossible, to duplicate in Ireland, and the whole matter was promptly shelved.

Mr. Walsh seems to have assumed the rôle of the world's social investigator and national diagnostician. He has made a personally conducted tour of Ireland. (The fact that he was permitted to do so is another exhibition of British "tyranny,") and the accuracy of the statements made by him in his report on conditions he found there are vehemently denied not only by the British press but by trained observers on the spot. It will be interesting to note, however, how many itching political palms will attempt to place that report under the eyes of Congress, so as to delight the world with the stale old game of twisting the British lion's tail, which always brings a tornado of applause from the slapstick comedy-loving gallery.

Apparently nothing will satisfy our Sinn Fein friends except self-determination for Ireland and self-extermination for Great Britain. With Britain submerged, Britannia's trident buried beneath the waves, the British commonwealth of nations disrupted, perhaps Irishmen and Americans of Irish birth will, for a while at least, be contented, while denatured Americans with all the "Anglo humbug" extracted from their systems will be permitted to creep around in rubber shoes, sawed and terrified, until the welcome hand of death puts an end to their miseries.

Whatever wrongs, real or imaginary, exist between Great Britain and Ireland, as long as men of Irish birth and descent in this country find profit and sport in keeping open the raw edges of century old wounds there will be no peace between the two countries. These ancient sores, however, would quickly heal if Englishmen and Irishmen were allowed to settle their differences without the interference of pestilential trouble-makers, amateur and professional.

E. I. RUTHERFORD.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As was remarked in the London newspapers only a week ago, at the present time there is nothing more vexing to the British mind than the uninformed criticism of the Irish political situation by Americans. In a letter appearing on your editorial page there is set forth the statement, without modesty or hesitation, that there is no country where a people are so "unanimous" for political freedom as those of Ireland. This letter says: "The people of North and South, Catholics and non-Catholics, are all alike for self-determination." I venture to say any schoolboy, even, might remember the bitter strife of Ulster against separation from the United Kingdom just previous to the war in 1914, when the Ulstermites took up arms to fight rather than yield to such a change of government.

BULGARIAN MINISTER'S REPLY

Washington, June 18, 1919.
To the Editor of The New York Times:

My reply to Professor Brown's letter published in THE NEW YORK TIMES of June 15 will be as brief as possible.

My statement about the treatment of the Greeks in Bulgaria from 1878 to 1906 was not "misleading," as Professor Brown pretends, but simply a statement of facts. In support of his contention that it was not Bulgarian spirit of toleration, but certain stipulations of the Berlin Treaty that protected the Greek churches and schools in Bulgaria up to 1906, he cites certain articles of that treaty. I wish to draw his attention to Articles 35 and 44 of the same treaty, which deal, respectively, with similar obligations assumed by Serbia and Rumania. These articles also declare that "religious beliefs or faith" shall be no bar to civil and political rights; that "religious liberty and public worship under all beliefs is assured to all inhabitants" of Serbia and Rumania, and "no hindrance will be brought either to the hierarchical organization of the different communions or to their relations with their spiritual chiefs."

Bulgaria allowed the Greeks to have their churches and schools and four Archbishops, who had charge of the spiritual and church interests of their flock. The Rumanians living in Bulgaria enjoyed the same privileges, except that they had no Bishop of their own. Does Professor Brown know how Serbia and Rumania carried out their obligations as by the Berlin Treaty? All Bulgarian churches and schools were closed, Bulgarian priests and teachers were driven out, the Bulgarian Bishops of Nish and Pirot and the Bulgarian Bishop's Vicars at Tultcha and Kustendji (in the Dobrudja) were expelled, and divine services in Dobrudja were held only in Rumanian; a language unintelligible to the people. Any one who dared to call himself a Bulgarian was persecuted and maltreated.

I leave to your readers to judge whether Bulgaria's treatment of the Greeks was due to the obligations imposed by the Berlin Treaty or to its spirit of toleration. Professor Brown's assertion that since 1906 the Greeks in Bulgaria are not permitted to have either churches or schools is mistaken. In the Commercial and Industrial Annual of the Kingdom of Bulgaria for 1913-14 the following Greek schools are mentioned: In Varna, 4; in Ankhialo, 2; in Philippopoli, 2 primary and 2 gymnasia; in Messembria, 2; in Rustchuk, 1; in Tatar Pazarjik, 1. In Sofia there is a Greek church, although the Greek population is insignificant. There is no need of my saying anything about the two Bulgarian churches and the fine Bulgarian college or gymnasium in Saloniki, or about the other churches and schools which existed in so-called Greek Macedonia before the Balkan war, for I take it for granted that Professor Brown is aware of their total suppression.

I pass by Professor Brown's assertion that "there were innumerable cases where Bulgaria violated these pledges between the years 1885-1906," as he does not cite a single case, and I come to the alleged appeal of "the Mussulman Deputies of Thrace" to the Commander in Chief of the allied armies in the East and to Venizelos. In this appeal, we are told, these Deputies praise the generosity of the Greeks and declare their ardent desire to be freed from Bulgarian oppression and put under Greek rule and protection. The appeal is said to have been signed by the sixteen Mohammedan Deputies of the Bulgarian National Assembly or Parliament. When the news of this appeal reached Sofia, the Turkish Deputy Shukri Zumri read a public declaration in the Assembly, in behalf of his colleagues, flatly denying the truth of these Greek allegations, and affirming that "the Mussulmans of Bulgaria, who enjoy the rights guaranteed to them by the democratic Constitution of the country, and who, thanks to these rights, have been able to safeguard their religion and their national privileges, live since forty years in full security in their country, Bulgaria"; therefore, "we declare these Greek assertions on the score of the Mussulmans of Bulgaria to be utterly unfounded."

The Greek paper Makedonia of Saloniki having announced in its issue of March 13 that, according to a telegram from Paris, Venizelos had presented to the Peace Conference a memorandum of twelve Turkish Deputies of the Bulgarian Assembly asking for the annexation of Thrace to Greece, Edhem Ruhi, a Deputy from Gumurdjina, read the following declaration:

"I declare in the name of the six Deputies from the District of Gumurdjina that the Mussulman Deputies have never expressed any such desire. I also declare that the five other Mussulman Deputies have not made any such declaration nor have evinced any intention of making it. Mehmed Pasha (the twelfth Deputy) did three years ago."

This story of the Mussulman appeal is on a par with another story published by the Greek paper Phos of Saloniki of March 31, that the Mohammedan Deputies of the Bulgarian Assembly had interpellated the Prime Minister on the atrocities committed by the Bulgarian troops in Thrace and Macedonia. An elaborate account is then given of the secret sitting at which the interpellation was discussed, the speeches made by Minister Pesheff, the Bulgarian Deputy Tassoff, and the Turkish Deputy Ahmed Djela. The whole story has been pronounced by the Bureau of the Assembly to be made of whole cloth. There is no minister Pesheff in the Cabinet, there is no Deputy by the name of Tassoff, while Ahmed Djelal since Jan. 1, 1919, had not sat in the Assembly.

In reply to Professor Brown's strictures on the Bulgaro-Macedonian comitadjis, I prefer to quote the following statement of the late Francois de Pressensé, a distinguished French Deputy and well acquainted with the Balkan question, taken from his report, (No. 1196,) on the budget for Foreign Affairs in 1904:

"The Greeks, smitten with the idea of a Hellenic Macedonia, which has never existed, not even under the Philips and Alexanders, sole descendants of the Hellenic race in a medium wholly barbarian—hypnotized also by the ignominious and false hope of an alliance with the victor of the Thessalian war, (i. e., Turkey,) have striven in vain to discredit as brigands men whose only crime was to have revolted like the authors of Greek independence and to have performed feats like those which rendered Canaris and the Palikars immortal.

I admire the naïveté of placing the burning of Kukush and forty villages to the charge of the Bulgarians, and in quoting as evidence the words of three correspondents who were at the time with the Greek troops, and who got their information from what the Greeks were pleased to tell them. The fact is so well established by the Carnegie Commission and other unimpeachable witnesses that there can be no doubt about it. As a most recent testimony, I refer him to the work "D'Alsace à la Cerna" (Paris, 1918) of Jean Saison, a French officer attached to the headquarters of General Sarrail, and to "Souvenirs d'un Volontaire Russe" (Paris, 1917) of V. Lebedev, a Russian officer volunteer in the French Army in Macedonia. Nobody certainly can suspect these men of any partiality for the Bulgarians; therefore, their testimony is the stronger.

In conclusion, one word to Gordon Gordon-Smith and his letter published in THE TIMES of June 17. He tells a great many things that show how intimately connected he is with the Serbian Government and its policies. But he omits to tell the most important thing, namely, that Serbia, in spite of all the entreaties of the Entente, refused to make any concessions to Bulgaria, not even of the uncontested zone of the Serbo-Bulgarian Treaty of 1912, to which Serbia solemnly renounced all claims. And yet this was what the Entente offered to Bulgaria by their note of Aug. 3, 1915. He acknowledges that Serbia, while negotiating through the Entente for an understanding with Bulgaria, had massed an army (120,000 men) on the Bulgarian frontier and was ready to attack the (30,000) Bulgarians placed along the frontier. And this is called "Bulgarian duplicity!"

STEPHEN PANARETOFF,
Bulgarian Minister.

DISCONTENTED ALIENS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Being a steady reader of THE NEW YORK TIMES, I have read lately many articles and letters about immigration and Americanization, and as I am in this country since 1913, now naturalized, I thought I might let you know a few facts of my experience of exactly six years in this country. * * *

With the conditions of living and working which the most of the immigrants get here I don't see how they can get any benefit out of the schools or how they can be Americanized. In a tobacco factory I had to work for two years, and the highest wages I was receiving at the time I quit was $8.50 a week, which came down, according to my calculations, to $6 a week for the last six months prior to my quitting, because we didn't have to work one or two days in the week. I couldn't leave that job earlier because it was very hard then to find another job, and I couldn't stay idle. At last I found another job, not much better than the first, with the help of my countrymen friends, and not with the help of any American organization, and pulled out of that factory, where I did a great deal of damage to my health.

It will take too long to tell all about what I have been through till now, and will suffice to say that I didn't succeed in my very meagre hopes. I believe there are very few foreigners, perhaps between 2 and 5 per cent., who succeed a little in this country, and all the rest are always discontented with their lot, and most of them through ignorance, because no one ever taught them, especially in their first years, anything good about their adopted country, and anything they learn is through their own efforts. What these people have before their eyes is their hard lot and the dark side of everything, and they can never see the bright side unless it is properly shown to them.

This is the reason why so many foreigners are going back to their old country with the first opportunity. Many of them were disappointed in their earlier months of their living here, and since then never have had the intention to stay here permanently, but wanted to go back as soon as they have made a certain amount of money. Others have their families over there, and they don't see anything here to prefer to their country to bring them over. The world knows that we lived under the unbearable oppression of the Turks. Still, when I tried to talk to some of my friends about that they told me that they didn't see very much difference between the oppression they had there and the new kind of oppression they are having here. One of them went even as far as to say that this what we call civilization was barbarism under a new coat.

These people should be taught that they are wrong in their convictions and shown the contrary. All this I have stated is about the immigrants from my former country, and I believe it applies also to immigrants from all other countries.

MARNE DIVISION BEFORE THE ARMISTICE

History of the Third During the Last Months of the War Recounted in Official Document

A partial history of the 3d Division, written by Colonel Robert C. Kelton, and covering the operations up to Aug. 1, 1918, was printed in THE SUNDAY TIMES on April 13 last. Below is a summary of the division's activities from then until after the armistice, taken from the official history just published:

AFTER the last troops of the 2d Division were withdrawn from the line early on the morning of July 30, 1918, and relieved finally by the 32d Division on the morning of the 31st, they were assembled in the region south of Château-Thierry by Aug. 1.

The 6th Brigade, which was in billets in the vicinity of Courboin, moved in sections during the night of Aug. 2-3, and the next day to the support of the 3d Army Corps, (French,) where their operations for the next few days are graphically described in the narrative histories of the units taking part. The Brigade was relieved on the night of Aug. 10-11 and moved to Courboin, from which place it joined the Division, now in the Gondrecourt area. The Division had entrained and moved to the Gondrecourt area on Aug. 15, 16, and 17.

Training and reorganization were immediately begun and replacements were received. Then, as in the last days of May, orders came to move. Trains, carrying everything from soldiers to duck boards, had been rolling past for days, and all sensed the fact that something big, quiet, and sudden was about to happen. It did. The division left for the Vancouleurs area by night, marching on Sept. 4 and 5 and arrived by two columns at a position in readiness just south of an east and west line through Etange de Beauce on Sept. 8. On Sept. 10 the 3d was in reserve, supporting the 4th Corps attack, with the 42d Division on its front, the 1st Division on the left, and the 42d and 89th on the right. Then something happened! Happened quickly and most completely!

A Major Operation.

The St. Mihiel salient disappeared as if the censor had taken a gigantic brush and painted it out of existence with one stroke. The American Army, this new, unknown quantity, had performed in 48 hours an operation that many had been wishing to see done for four years.

It was an all-American party, and everything functioned like clockwork. The 4th and 5th Army Corps, U. S., effected a junction at Vigneulles, and the 2d Colonial Corps (French) cleaned up the captured ground. The 3d Division, less artillery, motor section ammunition train, 7th Machine Gun Battalion and 6th Engineer train, was withdrawn and the 5th Brigade assembled near the Berncourt-Fliry road, while the 6th Brigade collected near Manches.

The divisional P. C. was at L'Hermitage, the 5th Brigade's at Berncourt, and the 6th Brigade's at Beaumont. From this location the division proceeded by night marching and bus movements to the Fort de Rioms, where, on Sept. 26, it constituted a portion of the Corps Reserve, 3d Corps.

The stage was being set for the last great act of the war in which the 3d Division was to play a part. The division passed into the 5th Corps on the night of Sept. 20 and on the 30th moved into the front line, taking over the sector of the 79th Division. The 5th Brigade was in the front line and the 6th Brigade in reserve. The 57th Artillery Brigade and the 204th Engineers were attached to the 3d Division at this time. The division P. C. closed at Esnes at ten hours on Sept. 30 and opened at Cuisy roadfork on Montfaucon-Malancourt road same date and hour. The 89th Division was occupying the sector on the 3d's right and the 33d Division the sector on the left. Preparations were made and orders issued for the 5th Corps attack on Oct. 4. The 5th Brigade was designated as the assaulting brigade with the 6th Brigade in reserve. The objectives of this initial assault were Bois des Ogons, Bois de Gesnel, and the heights to the east of Romagne. The 9th Engineers returned to duty with us and the division P. C. opened at the famous "Crown Prince's dugout" in Montfaucon at 6 P. M., Oct. 3. At 5:25 A. M., Oct. 4, the attack was launched and was practically uninterrupted in its area, so far as the 3d Division was concerned, until the night of Oct. 16-17, when the division was relieved by the 5th Division. During this time, on Oct. 13, the 3d Division passed back again into the tactical control of the 3d Corps.

Heroic Stage Setting.

Then came a much-needed rest for the division, which had been twenty-seven days straight in the front line, fighting almost continuously, day and night, and advancing seven kilometers against organized defenses. It had accomplished its difficult mission of breaking the hinge to the line of the entire German Army. The advances of the division which took its place in the battleline showed the fact that the enemy who had opposed the 3d Division had been literally fought to pieces. Beyond the fact of almost continuous fighting, ten distinct attacks had been made. By days of the most bitter and meanest warfare that one can picture, the 3d Division had broken defenses that had been organized for four years and had paved the way for the victorious American advances which followed. The troops which afterward advanced without an opposition laid by the shattered units of the "Marne Division."

One brigade at a time, the division front M. F. A. Brigade assembled near Montmirail, south of Montfaucon, and continued for the Thiaucourt area. On Nov. 1 the headquarters opened at Thiaucourt, a small village some four kilometers south of Bois de Lee, and the various units of the division settled down to this area to rest, clean up and train preparatory to entering the line once more. All were requested to be "on their toes," for it was rumored that after a short time would be devoted to restoring the organizations before the training period began. New officers and men arrived daily to fill the gaps in the ranks caused by the heavy losses the division had sustained in the last action.

On Nov. 11, at 5 P. M., news came that the armistice had been signed, and a complete change came over every one. On the heels of these glad tidings came the word that the 3d Division was to be one of those to occupy part of the Coblenz bridgehead. On Nov. 13 the troops were taken north through Bar de Lee, St. Mihiel, and Vigneulles to the vicinity of St. Maurice, where they bivouacked. This first lap of the journey to the Rhine lay over part of the old St. Mihiel salient to a point immediately south of the last battlefield and near the last No Man's Land of the war on that front. German battle relics were in evidence everywhere. German railroads, graveyards filled with elaborate monuments, officers' houses, dugouts, "pillboxes" were likewise matters of great interest to our men as they traversed this area. At 9 A. M., Nov. 17, the troops were prepared to cross No Man's Land, which was the real beginning of their long, hard march to the German border. Difficulties encountered passing through this desolate region were slight. On the way a few thin and dilapidated-looking ex-prisoners were met by the division whom the Germans had released, presumably from the Briey mines. They consisted of Russians, Canadians, English, and Americans; all weary but in high spirits.

November 24, now that the war was over, Bonc Aux, near the summit southwest Lorraine, making its headquarters at Manonvre in Gyaud. There a most cordial and almost open welcome awaited the troops, who were shown many a touching token of that people's appreciation for being relieved of German military rule, in vogue there since 1870. On their next day's march, Nov. 21, which brought them to Thionville, one of the largest cities in Lorraine, the men of the division met a cooler reception at the hands of the people, the latter showing more curiosity than thankfulness or homage. On the following day the division moved into Luxembourg, with headquarters first at Pixem, but later removed to Remich, a veritable treasure of a city on the banks of the Moselle, which the armistice as yet did not permit the Entente armies to cross.

The 3d Division, as part of the 5th Army Corps, occupied the extreme right of the Third American Army when the march across the Moselle into Germany began at 8 A. M. Dec. 1, 1918. From the Moselle to the Rhine was a matter of fifteen days' march, including periods of rest, the morning of Dec. 15 being the signal for the division's final march along the Rhine River road from Bastogne to Coblenz. The 3d Division was the only division to take this march along the Rhine, and it was one long to be remembered. On the same day the division headquarters and the headquarters of the 5th Brigade moved to Boppard, the 3d F. A. Brigade Headquarters to St. Goar, and the 6th Brigade to Coblenz. Division Headquarters on the night of Dec. 16-17 moved to Andernach, 6th Brigade to Mayen, 5th Brigade and 3d F. A. Brigade to Coblenz. The march was completed by all units of the division Dec. 17, and the headquarters were as follows: 3d Division, Andernach; 5th Brigade, Namedy; 6th Brigade, Mayen; 3d F. A. Brigade, Polch. On the 18th the 3d F. A. Brigade took up its permanent headquarters in Mayen. Such are the "whereabouts" of the members of the famous "Marne Division" today.

INVITING YOUR SOUL IN THE DANCE

THERE is no real reason to believe that every woman who is making a practice of dancing is doing so from soul-uplifting motives, but some of them are, while others confess finding more of vital good in dancing than they had ever hoped to find there. They are, in some cases, too, developing a unique profession for themselves.

Some years ago the Castles brought into prominence the practice of ballroom dancing. Then everybody did it with such enthusiasm that it was sure to wane sooner or later, but through the intervening years, even while the war was on and dancing for more frivolity was more or less taboo, the girls who were teaching kept up for themselves a fair trade among those who just liked to dance.

Then came the steady stream of interest in the direction of aesthetic dancing, in which field much that is interesting is being developed. And, now that the war is at an end, there is a noticeable increase of popularity in both of these avenues of approach to a comparatively new and untried profession for women.

So many more men are around now that the girls who are teaching new steps have a chance to get in their innings. They can teach the men and the women. There is a growing custom of hiring experts to dance with when one would have a really perfect dancing afternoon or evening. And, more and more, girls are making it a paying business. They charge for their services by the hour just as they would in any other business.

Of course, there are the ballet dancers and the dancers in the chorus. It is no new thing, the way in which they earn their living, though of late there does seem to be an extraordinary call for the sort of thing they do. The Russian Ballet had much to do with this state of affairs. It raised a new standard for the originators of the ballet; it put a new fire into those who were dancing in this manner; it planted new ideals in the audiences patronizing the performances. Then, along with the improvement of the scenery and costumes inspired by Bakst, there came a vast improvement in the dancing inspired by Nijinsky and his contemporaries. Today there are all sorts of opportunities for those who like to see dancing. Everywhere, in odd little theatres, in private halls, in big places of amusement, there are cropping up some really unusual dances beautiful to see and marvelous in the expression of the art which they represent.

And, as this art develops, girls of greater power and ability are taking it up as a profession. No wonder the performances are more attractive than they were. More brains and personality and studied charm are being worked into them. It is on the aesthetic side, however, that dancing as a serious attempt has taken its greatest strides. It is perfectly astonishing to learn how many women are devoting their attentions to this end of the game and to discover how really seriously they are regarding their own efforts. They claim that they are working toward a future where dancing will be much more a natural part of regular human activities than it shows the least sign of being today. They promise wonderful things for the development of the human being under the regular stimulus of its practice. They do not regard ballroom steps as expressing their notions. They see them only as a low form of the art, though they admit that the popularity of this form of dancing is only the effort of these enthusiasts to find their own expression. They believe that, before long, the time will arrive when every one does his portion of expressive dancing during the day and that they will be following no set rules for steps laid down by some arbitrary authority. They pine to lead the world away from this sheep-like following of a given pattern and more surely in the paths of developing, by this means, their own particular self-expression.

This, then, is the theory of the aesthetic dancer as explained by Miss Grace Cowle, who lately danced in "Shakuntala":

The aesthetic dancer, much more than any other sort of dancer, has a chance to express the thing that is herself. In fact, that is the theory of the whole thing as it is taught to the students and diligently practiced by those who have become proficient in the art. The whole point of the training is to make the student realize that the motions which she goes through with are not so much her own doing as the accomplishment of some artistic expression for which she is the human instrument. She is aware of the fact that her subconscious self is the part of her that is telling the story, whatever it may be, through the medium of the dance. Therefore sets of studied steps and poses have nothing whatever to do with her stunt. She listens to the music, puts herself into a subjective and relaxed state, and the expression of the soul of the music seeps through her, as it were!

It may sound, just from this casual statement of the purpose of aesthetic dancing, as though there were no especial technic required in order to convey the message. However, quite the contrary is true. Before one can hope to give forth beauty one must thoroughly realize what is beauty in this particular direction, and in order to understand in the least what the theory and purpose of aesthetic dancing contain, one must be put through a long course of training in learning how to handle one's body and muscles so that every motion, whether interpretative or not, shall be one of pure harmony. After that point has been reached and after one has gained the aptitude of responsiveness by means of steps and poses, then and then only can one hope to be a truly aesthetic dancer. The whole idea is to get as far away from self as possible.

As to the opportunities offered in aesthetic dancing as a means of earning one's living, it actually has shown some possibilities in that direction and the enthusiasts who are interested in its things in the future. How far their hopes will be realized is, of course, a matter of conjecture. They insist that, in the not far distant future, dancing will be a natural part of any school curriculum, and that the requirements will not only cover but, more likely, confine themselves to the aesthetic or rhythmic school. Already in many private schools the course is in full action and teachers who specialize in the subject are being employed. In a few colleges the study of this art has been introduced.

Then there are the indoor and outdoor pageants which are becoming more and more a part of our community life. They always include dancing, if they are not wholly made up from dances of various sorts. Special teachers familiar with the study needed for the direction of these spectacular events.

At settlement houses and as a part of most of the club work for girls, as well as boys, aesthetic dancing is becoming quite generally popular. The children love it always. It gives them an outlet for their purely animal spirits as well as an expression for whatever rhythmic art they possess.

CURRENT NOTES ON ART

A LOAN exhibition of portraits by the late Robert MacCameron is open at the Kingore Galleries. The sitters are the Duchess of Rutland, a vivid figure that rushes into the canvas with blowing draperies and eager gaze; Lady Diana Manners, blond and bland, without a trace of eagerness in her softly rounded features; William Astor Chanler, Robert W. Chanler, Joseph Thomas, Benjamin Guinness, Mrs. Norman De R. Whitehouse, Miss Dorothy Iselin, Mrs. William Astor Chanler, Mrs. Benjamin Guinness, and Misses Julia and Dorothy Chanler. The portraits are characteristic of Mr. MacCameron's work in this kind, but contain no prophecy of his late development as a painter of symbolic tendency.

With the paintings is a fine piece of sculpture, a "Mother and Child" group, by George De Forest Brush, the first sculpture ever shown by him.

The Fourth Degas Sale.

The fourth and last sale of paintings, pastels, and drawings by Edgar Degas will take place at the Georges Petit Galleries in Paris on July 2, 3, and 4. They include a large group of landscapes done in pastel, and also a very considerable number of pencil drawings, some of them copies from the old masters of the Italian schools. A later group of pencil sketches include many spirited renderings of race horses and jockeys.

Several of the drawings of the years 1856 and 1857 are from Italian models of remarkable beauty and grace, curiously contrasting with the no less remarkable ugliness of the French models in the drawings of recent date. Occasionally, as in 253: "Aux Courses" a complicated composition is carried out in pencil on a few square inches of paper with wonderful completeness and vitality. In several instances there are numerous studies for a composition which at last appears in its final form. "La Visite au Musée du Louvre" is an example.

The collection has a small section devoted to color prints and prints in black and white.

At the Albright Gallery.

The annual exhibition of paintings and bronzes by American artists is now open at the Albright Gallery in Buffalo. This is the thirteenth exhibition since the famous inaugural in 1905. With the exception of the large sculpture exhibition in 1916 these annual occasions have been dedicated to paintings, but this year bronzes have been added "as a pledge that sculpture is not forgotten and that from time to time other great exhibitions of the sculptor's art will be seen at the Albright Gallery." The aim in forming the collections has been to exhibit the best achievements of the American painters of today, and to show works that in the future will be regarded as the representative productions of the present period, also to afford appreciative buyers opportunities to acquire paintings worthy of a place in any collection. In the introduction to the catalogue of the present exhibition the art Director says:

"There are two things to be considered in forming such an exhibition—the artist and the public. In justice to the artist, he should be represented, if he has high ideals and is making an honest effort; on the other hand, the public has a right to demand the best art we can produce. A high standard of excellence must be maintained. The one aim of the artists, the public and the museum, should be the advancement of American art, and this can be accomplished only by the careful selection and presentation of the most representative and best that it is possible to obtain.

"The collection consists of approximately 150 paintings by American artists and sixty-five small bronzes produced during recent years and never before publicly exhibited in Buffalo. The comparatively small number of works to be secured and the gallery space at command makes it possible to install the works chosen with liberal spacing, so that practically each one may be seen under almost ideal conditions. There is no jury, and all works are invited by the Director.

"The number of exhibits shown is limited, for various reasons. In the first place, it is believed that a small collection of carefully chosen works offers far greater advantage and enjoyment to the art lover, the student, and the amateur than a larger collection of more variable merit.

"An exceedingly large collection, even of good works, is apt to be confusing and distracting, if not almost overwhelming, to the visitor with limited time at his disposal. Moreover, there is not enough distinguished ones produced in any one country during any one or two years to constitute a large exhibit of really high character.

"Secondly, it is believed that paintings and sculptures which are worthy of place in such an exhibition deserve to be seen at their best, and so it was determined to select no more works than could be shown properly in the space at command. It is considered that a crowded gallery is an enormity, and that improper and inharmonious installation of art works is inexcusable.

"In the organization of this collection all the Fall, Winter, and Spring exhibitions of American art in New York City, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, and other cities were visited, and those works considered most meritorious were invited. Others—among them some now shown for the first time—were obtained from the studios of the artists and from art dealers. Many well-known collectors of American art have most generously contributed to the Thirteenth Annual Exhibition. Almost all of the paintings which have taken prizes at the various important exhibitions of the year are included in the collection at the Albright Art Gallery."

Design Competition.

Artists, designers, and art students are invited to participate in a design competition for a seal for the Department of Conservation, State of Indiana.

The design must be submitted in the form of a finished pen and ink drawing that, besides permitting of adaptation for a seal die, will lend itself for reproduction by the zinc etched relief line process and be suitable for use as an emblem on letter-heads and printed matter of the Department of Conservation.

The size of the contemplated stamping die is to be two inches. The designs should be larger, and in order to permit of satisfactory comparison it is suggested that they be made six inches.

The seal should bear the words, "The Department of Conservation, State of Indiana."

Competitors may submit more than one design. No competitor, however, is to receive more than one of the three prizes offered.

First prize, $50; second prize, $30; third prize, $20.

Drawings should be made on Whatman H. P. paper, patent office Bristol, illustration board, or equal, size 10 by 15 inches. One drawing on a sheet. Competitors will mark their drawings with a device or motto and in no other way. This same device or motto should appear with the name and address of the competitor on a card inclosed in a plain sealed envelope and included in the package containing the drawing marked "Design Competition" to be addressed to William Coughlen, Secretary, John Herron Art Institute, Indianapolis.

All drawings to be eligible for the competition must reach the John Herron Art Institute not later than July 15. All outside wrappers and outside identification marks having previously been removed, the drawings will be passed upon by the Committee of Award: Miss Florence Fitch, Supervisor of Drawing, Indianapolis Public Schools; Kurt Vonnegut, architect; Clifton A. Wheeler, artist; Carl H. Lieber, Chairman, Fine Arts Committee, Art Association of Indianapolis and Edward Mason, commercial artist and designer.

It shall be understood that the design for which the first prize is awarded becomes the property of the Department of Conservation, while the Commissioners also reserve the right to acquire one of the other prize winning designs by an additional payment to equal a total of $50.

BATIKS AND HOW TO MAKE THEM

By PIETER MIJER

Batik making has become popular among craftsmen, and this book fills a long-felt want. The author learned the craft in Java, perfected it in Holland, and was a pioneer in introducing it in this country.

To be able to dye fabrics for interior decoration or costumes, that will be exactly fitting for the scene or the individual, is not the least difficult when one knows how. The batik process is described by Mr. Mijer, who explains in simple language the way in which wonderful results can be obtained by using beeswax, dye and a little skill.

BASIS OF LIFE FOUND

Dr. Daniel Trembly MacDougal's Discovery of the Composition of Protoplasm

By JOHN W. HARDING.

SINCE scientific circles in the United States and abroad heard, in April, the announcement that Dr. Daniel Trembly MacDougal, Director of the Botanical Research Department of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, had found the composition of protoplasm, wide interest has been shown in the discovery. Its importance to agriculture and to medical science, although the protoplasts or cells of plants show features of growth different from those of the animal, cannot be overestimated. Now that the composition of living matter has been definitely determined, precise knowledge of the chemicals and proportionate quantities required to exercise an influence benign or otherwise on the growth of the cells will follow naturally as a matter of course.

Dr. MacDougal found in his experiments that the living matter of plants was composed of three principal substances—the pentoses of mucilages, the albumens or their derivatives, and some fatty substances. The protoplasm of most plants is composed largely of the first-named group of substances, of which a common example is gum arabic. These three main components do not dissolve or diffuse into one another, and hence exist simply as finely divided particles intimately mixed, and the surfaces between the particles of different kinds of matter give opportunity for the play of molecular forces which constitute the essential energy of protoplasm.

Protoplasm made up in this way is sometimes miscible or soluble in water and at other times not, depending upon the proportions of the main components present, a neglected fact responsible for many acute controversies among biologists who study the minute structure of cells.

The development of an organism from the single or few-celled stage to the stature of the adult individual is generally characterized as growth. The facts set forth herewith regarding the action of the protoplasm in growth were discovered by Dr. MacDougal by the measurement and analyses of plants consisting of millions of cells. It has been regarded hitherto as a universal law that as a cell grows older or approaches maturity, the proportion of water present decreases and the dry matter increases. This has been established by numerous detailed analyses, of which a large number have been made upon the human body. Contrary to this supposed general law, however, Dr. MacDougal has found that in some families of the higher plants growth of the stems and leaves may take place in which the proportion of solid matter actually decreases during development.

As explained to the writer by the scientist, one of the first things that comes to the notice of the observer who follows the life history of an animal or plant from the egg or the spore, or from the resting stage in a seed, to maturity, is that all parts of the individual do not enlarge at the same rate, and that if attention be fixed upon the most readily available object for such a study, the root or shoot of any plant, it will be seen that the power of expansion seems to reside only in the region of the tip in the case of the root and in the tip and in certain regions in the younger internodes of stems, while such organs as the leaves of grass elongate by the action of a growing zone at the bases.

There are many specializations of this action, such as those displayed by simple organisms in which a single cell is the individual, and when this reaches full size all possible growth is accomplished.

"With magnifications of much less than a hundred," said Dr. MacDougal, "it is readily seen that the embryonic cells of a plant, which may be imagined as of a cubical or prismatic form, and consisting of a dense mass of colloidal matter, become larger; that they also change form, show new structures in the mass, and that the inclosing wall takes on wide variety of forms. These changes determine the final part which the maturing cell may play in the complex processes of the organism. The architecture of the plant includes many beautiful mechanical designs, and it would be well to guard against the error of considering the plant as simply a set of sacs, test tubes, and bits of jelly by recalling the fact that it is, like all living things, an engine which not only picks up its fuel, manufactures it into briquettes or their physiological equivalent, burns this fuel, the derived energy performing a variety of kinds of work, but that while this is going on the machine is also adding to, repairing and altering its own parts.

"This, however, does not imply that any special or mysterious 'life forces' are concerned. The physiologist may in fact identify a large number of the things that may happen in the cell and he may imitate many of them, and the progress of science will be marked by the successive subjugation of others; but to assemble the material in a way to obtain the complexity and the sequence of reactions of living matter is beyond our capacity for manufacturing matter in roots, leaves, fruits, and out the mass of the protoplast, as it is very well known that the nucleus and other special organs of the cell are high in albumins. Consultation of available information on this point shows that in bacteria, for example, over 90 per cent. of the solid matter may be albuminous. The analyses of cacti made by Dr. H. A. Spoehr at the Tucson Desert Laboratory of the Carnegie Institution show that not more than a tenth of the living matter is proteinaceous, of which gum arabic, tragacanth, mucilage, and agar are common examples, these being, in fact, combinations of the simpler pentose and hexose sugars.

"These statements are not to be taken as implying a simple composition for protoplasm. The different and various pentosans on the one hand and the amino-compounds built up by the plant or derived from albumins have various special characters, although the first agree in being weak acids, and the second are amphoteric, capable of acting as either acids or bases according to conditions."

In describing the actual formation or growth of new masses of protoplasm, Dr. MacDougal explains that in the actual conditions of nutrition neither sugars nor salts serve directly as nutritive material. The sugars formed by the plant are the principal sources of food, and these are drawn into the mesh of living matter like oil into a wick. These sugars are broken down, by respiration or by a destructive process analogous to burning. Some of the sugar is completely burned or broken down, furnishing energy for growth, but some of its substance is combined with the ammonia group to form amino-compounds or nitrogenous substances which may be united or be added directly to the protoplasm. In other words, the burning of sugar in the protoplasmic wick liberates energy by which some of the sugar is caused to unite with ammonia to form additional material for the wick.

In this connection, in view of the disturbance of the trade in potassium during the war, which caused attention to be concentrated upon this and other fertilizers, it is of interest to note that, important as potassium may be for the plant, according to Dr. MacDougal it does not form food nor furnish energy nor supply material for replacing or building protoplasm. In fact, its presence even in the minutest quantity limits hydration or increase of volume of living matter. It and other salts, however, probably act as catalyzers, in releasing energy in the carbohydrates or other compounds. Substances like iron or sodium in human food are not in themselves food, and yield neither energy nor building material for the living machine. They are more correctly to be termed as "culture salts," and they serve to release energy in other compounds, but furnish none themselves. The most advantageous proportion of these salts is a matter still to be determined.

It is obvious, however, that with the newly formulated idea of the nature and composition of living matter, researches upon fertilizers and upon the composition of soils, plant foods, &c., will make possible a much more advanced and skillful agricultural practice. Potash phosphates, &c., will be used in the fields as liberators of other substances and as controlling the actual growth of living matter in roots, leaves, fruits, and grains rather than as constituting building material.

The precise effects of these "stimulators," or control substances, upon the growth of any organ may be determined by laboratory tests which will furnish results upon which a more profitable agriculture may be based.
